War and peace mark old year

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

It was a year of the plateau — 1991 — a year when the value of land officially came down, a year when an override passed but town employees continued to work at last year's pay rate — like many of us all — a year of old-fashioned values like moderation and patriotism.

The year began with the nation on alert for warfare in the Middle East. The alert was named Operation Desert Shield. Some of the young men of Cohasset found their way to the bleak Arabian desert. Fortunately, they all returned home.

Meanwhile the local veterans groups began planning a memorial wall to celebrate the contribution of all Cohasset's sons and daughters who have participated in this nation's wars.

The year began with some talk about new construction in the school system — the school committee heard a report that asked consideration of a combination gymnasium and cafeteria at the Joseph Osgood School. The report did not seek an immediate response — indeed it suggested some short term solutions like moving the collaborative class from Osgood to the Deer Hill School and increasing the number of grade 3 classes.

Also in January, there was a report from the health department that groundwater tests at Cohasset Heights, the private landfill off Route 3A, that there was no increase in contaminants in the groundwater.

The Gulf River Association mailed a booklet on protecting the tidal estuary to property owners along the river that divides Cohasset and Scituate.

Wigmore Pierson hosted a cable show on the situation in the Middle East just five days before the deadline set for Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait. The cable show included family members of those stationed in the Middle East as well as military officials.

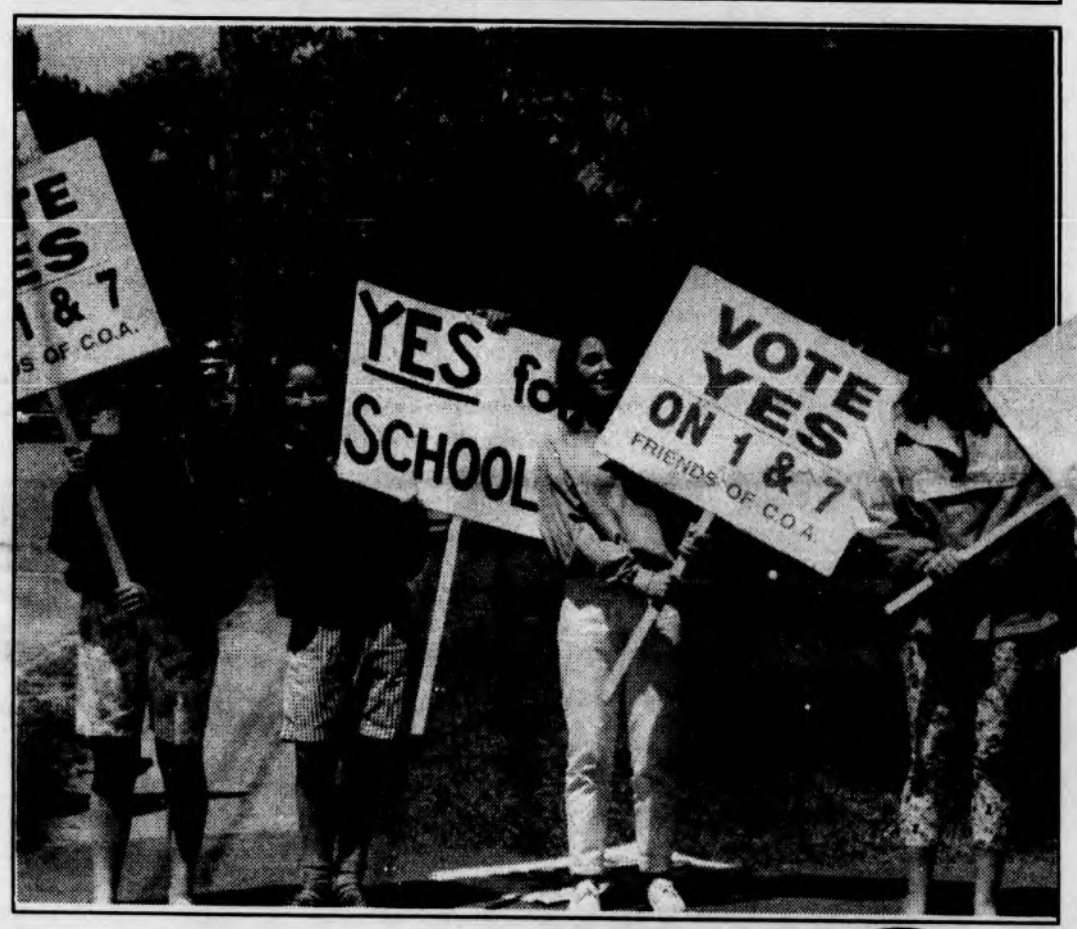
The census figures for the prior year proved that Cohasset is growing grayer. The figures indicated 20 percent of the town's population fell into the senior citizen category — and of that group, a third were more than 75.

The school budget was pulled together by the end of January — at $5.6 million or 1.1 percent above the prior year. No raises for teachers were included in that amount as negotiations were underway at the time. Negotiations have yet to be completed.

The school committee took time from a regular meeting to watch the President address the nation on Jan. 16 — the night the warfare began in the Persian Gulf.

A group of 11 organizations began working officially on what they called Harborfest.

The work on the replica of the top of Minot's Light proceeded under cover for the winter. Donations were sought several times.



The school committee voted at the end of January to raise the kindergarten age in September 1992. Beginning next year all students entering kindergarten will be five years old. This year children were still allowed into kindergarten under the old rules — but parents were encouraged to think about waiting a year for those whose birthdays fell between Sept. 1 and Dec. 31. The old cutoff was Dec. 31.

The whole school system even at Osgood, the theme of war was woven into the curriculun. Some students began writing to soldiers overseas.

The town began keeping a list of the residents involved in the warfare. That list included:

- Timothy Curran
- Brian Curran
- Daniel W. Curran
- Glenn E. Dukes
- Prescott Hobson
- Stephen Winn
- James J. Smith
- Garrett Hunt
- Laurence Hoogeveen
- Joseph Tolini
- Gary Parziale
- David D. Cuddahy Jr.
- Scott A. Muir
- Arthur Howe
- Daniel Sullivan
- Gordon Ricketts

Runnin' flu 3, Skippers 1

By Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner sports writer

Influenza beat Cohasset basketball three games to one last week, and coaches are tearing their hair out trying to come up with a defensive strategy.

"Everyone is sick," Arnie Reppucci said after the varsity boy's devastating 82-33 loss (at Scituate). "Kiwan (Edwards), Doug (Ellinger) – Joey Andrae went to the hospital at the half – it's unreal." Andrae is resting comfortably in Cohasset.

(See page 15)

It was a year of turmoil — but somehow everyone coped.
Fire Chief Daniel Brock addressed Town Meeting last spring. He remains at the head of the fire department while selectmen negotiate with a candidate from Sandford, Maine.
Even the kids pushed for an override last spring and the voters gave 3 out of 10 questions the green light.
Yellow ribbons decked the trees around Cohasset Common last year thanks to the families and friends of some of the men serving in Operation Desert Storm.
Colleen Lucas, who teaches at the high school, and Nikki Hu, a performer, talked about an assembly at CHS.
The Junior Voices, a choral group, made appearances locally.

Cohasset's week

Town census underway

The Town Census for 1992 will be mailed to each household in early January by the town clerk's office.

Compliance with state requirements provides proof of residence to protect voting rights, veteran's bonus, housing for the elderly and related benefits as well as providing information for selection of jurors. This does not register you as a voter but failure to answer this may result in the voter's name being removed from the voter's list. Please note that if a person wishes to remain a voter, do not remove him from the census.

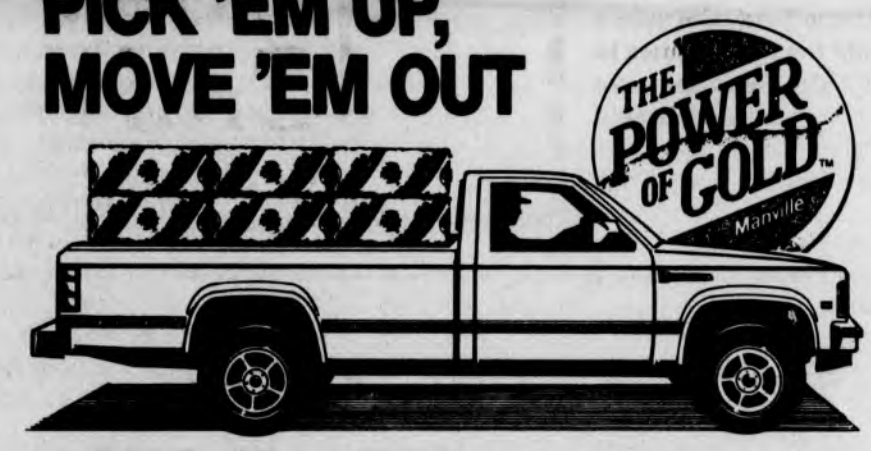
Dog forms will be enclosed with the census. The licenses are due in January and valid through Dec. 31. No special numbers will be issued this year. Numbers will be issued on a first come, first service basis.

Hedlund chosen

Sen. Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth), who is a member of the Governor's Committee on the Future of State Colleges, was also picked yesterday to be a member of the Future's Steering Committee. The Steering Committee will finalize a report consisting of a wide array of recommendations for changes in Massachusetts public higher education. Sen. Hedlund stated, "I welcome the challenge of continued service on the Future's Commission." The Steering Committee will have the charge of presenting many specific and final recommendations to the Governor. Sen. Hedlund will be one of only seven members who along with the Secretary of Education will make up this education steering committee. The total committee consists of approximately 25 members.

Nantransit stops for now

The recent major impenetrable construction detour at the entrance to Nantasket Pier, following close behind the Halloween Northeaster and its economic damage, has greatly damaged prospects to build ridership during the winter months. This, coupled with the flood damage to Nantransit's main office and the continued economic recession, with resulting low ridership, has forced Nantransit to interrupt commuter boat service until conditions improve.



Marie Price, who teaches kindergarten at the Osgood School, at an event early last year.

On Oct. 2, Nantransit inaugurated commuter service to Boston from Nantasket Pier. During October, over 1,500 passengers were carried, with slow, but steady growth during the month. On the eve of Oct. 30, the Halloween storm created a tidal surge which placed Nantasket Pier under three feet of water at the high tide. Storm-related damages to the Cape Cod Clipper were sustained which eventually took this primary vessel out of service for shipyard repair. The smaller Capt. John & Son IV was substituted and was well received by passengers, but ridership growth stagnated.

The added negative effects of the roadblock on George Washington Blvd. and Wharf Ave. then diminished ridership to the point where no economic relief is apparent in the near future. Our best information is that all construction work should be completed by Memorial Day. However, Nantransit was previously assured that the detour to the pier would only last two business days and would create minimal disruption. As a result of past performance of the Massachusetts Department of Public Works and its contractors, it is difficult to rely on this information with any confidence. We will continue to monitor the progress of construction closely and Nantransit's decision to resume service will, in part, be based on the M.D.P.W.'s progress.

Service was suspended following the last trip on Tuesday, Dec. 24. Nantransit is determined to establish the commuter boat connection between Nantasket Pier and Boston and plans to resume service by the spring.

As February began, town officials continued to debate the budget for the coming year. Arne Gjesteby, who was then chairman of the advisory board, asked all town departments to develop a level-funded budget. If there were departments that came up with level-funded budgets, they were lost in the sea of conversation about the need for an override.

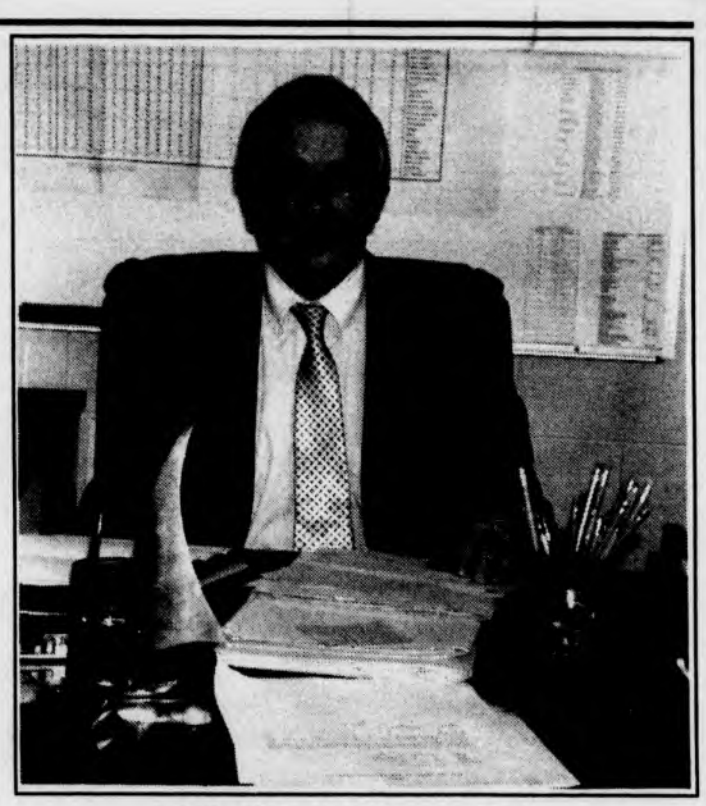
The town considered the idea of hiring a private ambulance service. But bids opened in February failed to please the selectmen. The bid specifications were drawn up to replicate the service already provided by the town's fire department. Only two companies bothered to submit proposals — although eight private companies took out the bid specifications and indicated some degree of interest.

The fire department's ambulance service has been a bone of some contention for quite some time. One of the thorns is the billing practices — something selectmen continue to question. Another problem comes from the size of the community. Cohasset has averaged about one ambulance trip a day due to the small population — keeping two emergency medical technicians on duty 24 hours a day for one trip is less than economical.

Roy Fitzsimmons of the government structure committee was behind the move to seek bids for a private ambulance service. After the bids were discarded, there was some movement to talk about regionalization. (Indeed, at the present time there are some private talks that have been ongoing with towns in this area on the topic of regionalizing some fire services.)

Selectmen began talking about a proposal to have the Cohasset Community Center take over the functions of the recreation department. A move that brought out much debate from backers of the recreation department.

Richard Barrow took out nomination papers in February to face Rocco Laugelle in the town election. (Laugelle was returned to office.)



No one ran against the school committee incumbents.

Harborfest plans moved along to include a blessing of the fleet and parade. The Harborfest was intended to use crowds already drawn to town for the annual art festival of the South Shore Art Center. Representatives of the art center were included in the steering committee.

Arne Gjesteby released a survey on the fire department that showed Cohasset spends more than 15 similar towns. He blamed the figures on the minimum manning clause.

Selectmen voted to place a single rail question on the town ballot. Later they voted again and placed a second rail question on the ballot.

The drug and alcohol committee promoted a lecture for senior citizens on substance abuse.

School Supt. Stephen Hart

The Patrolmen's Association made a donation to the town pump project. So did many others.

Figures for crime in 1990 were released by Police Chief Joseph Kealey. They showed a decrease in crime.

Nine teachers were sent layoff warnings in March. (They were not let go as the override passed.)

Selectmen decided to hold the override election after the regular town election. May 18 was selected as the date.

The Cohasset Community Center was selected to receive the Forrest E. King Award, given annually by the Chamber of Commerce. Glenn Pratt accepted the award for the Community Center.

In March the Cohasset Dramatic Club presented "Cheaper by the Dozen" on the boards at town hall.

The Paul Pratt Library went on line with a computerized cooperative of 21 area libraries in March.

The Bates Building sale was placed on the warrant for the annual town meeting. As it turned out, the voters opted to back a token sale of the old town hall annex to South Shore Habitat for Humanity. The idea was to use the building for a two-family structure with units sold to low-income families. The sale has yet to go through.

Local aid cuts were in the news for much of the spring. Local officials sought to keep the state local aid figures at last year's level — something the present governor backed when he was a candidate.

The lacrosse season began as a varsity sport. The catch was that the lacrosse staff remained unpaid. The team players bought their own equipment.

South Shore Hospital announced in March plans for a regionalized advanced life support ambulance service.

Entries from the Cohasset Community Garden Club and the Cohasset Garden Club won awards at the New England Flower Show.

Cohasset Heights Limited came up with plans to provide a regional landfill at the site off Route 3A, provided the state Department of Environmental Protection approved expansion plans. The state failed to give the plan the go-ahead. A community group, calling itself SAFE, Stop Any Further Expansion, formed to fight the plan.

The DPW study committee gave a report to selectmen urging that the town consider centralizing public works functions as retirements of department heads occur.

The Easter Bunny paid a visit to the Community Center.

The school committee voted in April to ban all smoking on school grounds. The smoke-free policy came as a request from the student council at the high school.

Town meeting began its work on the warrant in April, voting to reconvene in May.

More than 800 runners raced along the Rotary's annual Cohasset Road Race By the Sea. An out-of-town man won the race.

Charles Butman Jr. fashioned the wooden portion of the town pump for the Village Renaissance Committee.

The town election went predominantly to the incumbents. Jean Simonds won a seat on the planning board. Tom Wigmore took a spot on recreation. Voters supported the restoration of the Greenbush railroad line but on the second question on the topic, they opposed paying for the rail service with local tax money.

Tom Wigmore was elected commander of the Sons of the American Legion. He was also elected to the recreation commission.

The override package presented for a vote included 10 questions.

There was some furor in May when the idea of using Cohasset Heights for deposit of sludge from the Mass. Water Resources Authority was mentioned as a possibility.

Barbara Malley, a former resident, had her book published and made the signing circuit.

The Second Congregational Church celebrated its expanded facilities at the end of April.

The state promised to dredge Cohasset Cove in the fall.

In May selectmen voted to tag all beer kegs sold in town.

The South Shore Music Circus decided not to open until July.

Joseph McElroy and a citizens group came up with plans for rehabilitating the old duplex on Government Island.

The Sailing Team, another of the varsity sports that operates without a budget, moved toward division finals with a 5-0 record in May.

The sewer commission's plan to expand the current sewer treatment plant — instead of connecting the line to the facility in Hull — met with opposition from the state. (The argument continues as the town continues to pay legal bills for the negotiating process.)

On May 18, voters turned out to agree to three of the 10 override questions.

Memorial Day brought out a group of younger-than-usual participants in the services as the situation in the Persian Gulf allowed the release of service men and women.

The National Guard 1058th Transportation Company returned to Hingham and Fort Devens after serving overseas as part of Operation Desert Storm.

May was also the time for dedicating the town pump, now located at the intersection of Elm and Main streets.

In June selectmen began talking with Hollywood about the Steve Martin/Goldie Hawn film "The Housesitter."

There were 86 graduates of Cohasset High. Christopher Ford, school committee member, gave the graduation address under the tent at the Music Circus.

A new elementary math curriculum for the elementary grades was adopted, relying on something called manipulatives.

SAFE held a trash forum in June.

The advisory board look out over the faces of the Town Meeting voters in the spring.

The selectmen voted not to renew the fire chief's contract over budget issues.

Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts praised Daniel Brock's fire science knowledge in a statement issued after the vote. Brock came to Cohasset in 1986 when the department was in turmoil. Another line in the statement creditted Brock with being responsible for the fact that the unrest had subsided.

"What has become apparent is that the fire chief's goals are incompatible with the financial realities of the town," Tebbetts said.

Brock continues as acting fire chief on a week-to-week basis while selectmen negotiate with a man from Sandford, Maine, they hope to hire as chief.

The first Harborfest and the 36th annual art festival was a success.

A wooden ramp for the handicapped was built for Sandy Beach.

A group home for the mentally impaired opened in June on Elm Street.

The special town meeting in June came out against the sludge dump proposed at Cohasset Heights.

The Cohasset Community Center's annual tennis tournament raised $8,000.

SAFE complained about Cohasset Heights, CHL, asking for the private company to pay for a spotter, someone hired to check the loads of trash.

The Fourth of July brought out a huge display of fireworks off the Roy Estate on Margin Street.

There was talk the hearing on CHL would reopen.

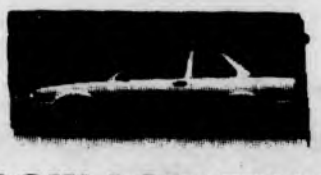
The Bates Building continued to be in the news — nothing was resolved. Little changed.

The school committee voted in July to restore several programs that had been cut partially in prior years — industrial arts, home economics, business education — and to expand the teaching staff for physical education to free the health coordinator.

In August the conservation commission and selectmen met to talk about policies. At issue, it seemed from the discussion, was the question of the style of the appointed board.

Wayne Sawchuk was returned to the advisory board for a new term by the Troika.

The bronze dome was installed on the replica of Minot's Light at Government Island.



The film crew of "The Housesitter" came to town with Goldie Hawn and Steve Martin.

Hurricane Bob whipped through town, costing at least $10,000.

The selectmen came out in favor of SHARE, the Self Help and Resource Exchange, sponsored by Glastonbury Abbey and based locally in Canton. In Cohasset the organization is backed by the Social Service League and the Council on Aging. For $13 plus

Dillaway's "S.O.S." opens

The public is invited to the Opening Reception of "S.O.S.," an exhibition in paper by Charles Dillaway, Saturday, Jan. 4, at 8 p.m.

Held in Vine Hall at the South Shore Natural Science Center, Jacobs Lane, Norwell, the exhibition, billed as a "marvelous mix of historic Coney Island and current environmental disasters," will run through February.

Dillaway's brown paper, walk-in sculpture explores environmentally unsafe oceans and beaches, with some shocking images of what is to come. After leaving the Science Center, "S.O.S." will travel to the Boston Center For the Arts, and later tour galleries and museums throughout the United States.

Since 1987, the Weymouth resident has carved, wrapped, cut, and pasted paper bags to form his amusing and dramatic environments. His exhibits are a symbol of hope for America's economic, social, and political condition. And the medium is part of his message. The brown paper bag represents "everything that's hot in our consumer-driven society now—waste, purchasing, money, recycling, disposal," said Dillaway in the recent interview with Supermarket Business magazine.

"S.O.S." is free of charge (donations gratefully accepted) and is open during regular Science Center hours: 10 a.m. to 4 p.m, Monday through Saturday; and noon to 4 p.m., Sunday.

Anyone interested in interning at the office of Sen. Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth) is urged to apply by sending their resume to the Senator.

Interns will have duties such as research, writing and various other administrative and legislative functions.

Interning would be a unique opportunity for any individual wishing to gain valuable experience in the political field, Hedlund said.

However, due to the current budget constraints, intern positions are unpaid, although students would be able to apply for course credits for their work experience.

Resumes should be sent to Sen. Robert L. Hedlund, Room 416B, The State House, Boston, MA 02133.

Skating safety

With cold weather, the ice skating season is approaching. The following should be used as a guideline for safe ice. Common sense is the most important denominator, however.

Ice safe for:	0-3°	30-40°	40-50°
Single skaters:	1-3/4"	2-3/4"	6"
Couples:	2-3/4"	3-3/4"	8"
Crowds:	3-3/4"	4-3/4"	12"

These figures are for clear, fresh water ice only: for snow ice, add two inches: for water logged ice, add three inches: if skates cut in — Go Home! Salt water in mild climates is always treacherous — keep away from it. Also thickness in 40 to 50 degree column are safe depths for short periods of time only.

Looking into the future for 1992

It's again time for Madame Mariner to gaze into the future and predict events that will amaze some and dishearten others.

As everyone knows, predicting the coming year is a tradition. Some communities, steeped in tradition, make the crystal ball superfluous. Cohasset is one of those communities. That's what makes it so attractive.

Another tradition in the prediction business is the art of being somewhat vague — all the better to succeed.

As much as we would wish to ignore the predictions Madame Mariner made for 1991, we have to take a second to note they were less than on-the-beam.

Of the seven predictions made to '91, three actually came true. Two of the others were half right — and two failed to hold a grain of possibility in the light of the new year.

One of the predictions, Madame Mariner is claiming half credit for called for the South Shore Conservatory to put out a fund-raising LP banking on the fame of the Simpsons. The LP was to be called "Mr. Simpson's Favorite Pieces" and Michael Jackson was not scheduled to do the vocals. Madame Mariner claims the idea was usurped by the Fox channel program despite the fact the Conservatory didn't make a penny on it.

She also wants part credit on saying there would be an override election. She gave it little hope of passing, but voters back three of 10 questions.

She claims victory on her prediction the Old Colony line would remain an issue, that no letter to the editor would be printed in Mariner if it were addressed "Dear Sir", that organizations would come forward to fill the budget gap in the area of school sports and activities.

She was dead wrong on the demographics of town. She said they would swivel toward the young, as young adults returned to their parents' nests. Statistics show the town is graying. And she was dead wrong on whether there would be teacher lay offs. She thought they would happen.

Still we're giving her another try for 1992.

She predicts:

• the Greenbush line will remain stalemated in the news. Maybe the other two Old Colony lines might move toward reality.

• there will be a new face on the board of selectmen. (She hears Ron Goodwin and Michael Sullivan are considering a run. She also hears talk the two incumbents whose turns are up this year may not be willing to accept another term.)

• the sewer commissioners will continue to argue with the state over the options available.

• the school system will win re-accreditation for Cohasset junior/senior high school but the final report will call for changes that would mean greater spending.

• the new fire chief will have a honeymoon with the selectmen for a very short time before issues of power, safety and money crop up.

• someone at town meeting will ask why the Bates Building sale hasn't happened. There will be an answer.

Let's hope Madame Mariner gets a grasp of the psychic force that rules the village.

Let's hope the town finds a peaceful and prosperous new year.

A must read...Conde Nast Traveler's Safe Sun article, January 1992 issue. "Lying in the direct sun for an hour adds about 300 calories per 100 pounds of body weight," the expert says. So you won't need to take your lunch to Sandy Beach next year, and you certainly won't need to visit the ice cream truck. You'll be soaking up calories just sitting there in your little chair. This is everyone's worst nightmare come true.

New dump fees have been set at $75 – a 44 percent increase from last year. They (the board of health) did this because the town is losing money on the dump. But logic owns that if people who use the dump aren't buying tickets, then even fewer people will buy the higher priced dump tickets. This is the law of diminishing returns.

Local taxes can be deducted from state and federal income tax. But fees can never be deducted, and residents lose their write-off ability...essentially being hit with a double whammy.

Dr. Laurie, one of my experts in the field of life, sent me some interesting information about warts which ran in the professional journal Health and Healing, 1988.

Last summer, you'll remember, one of my columns was about Whitney Cook's warts being scared away. Some of you thought that was a pretty funny joke. But those of you who knew the Cooks and Whitney knew better.

Well, in Health and Healing Dr. Andrew Weil documents a similar case of warts being "scared" away. In fact, the entire article is about consistent responses (warts falling off) being achieved through inconsistent procedures...including but not limited to neighborhood wart healers.

Dr. Weil's conclusion is that belief may be the master key to healing and that "the physical mechanisms of cures of disease, whatever their nature, make connections to the immaterial realm of mind."

Further, Dr. Weil noted that the human paiollomavirus (HPV) is associated with both warts and cancer of the cervix and vulva in women, and some skin cancers in both sexes. From this he suggests that warts and cancer may be related in origin as well as cure, further noting that documented cases exist of spontaneous remissions of most forms of cancer.

I read these really sob Boston Globe/Mike Barnicle stories about people who have fallen through the cracks, and then somewhere in the story is a line about the woman's two sisters in Poughkeepsie, her three children in Chicago, her rich former husband, and I say...they don't want to deal with her. They want me to deal with her. They want me to pay more taxes to take care of this woman who is their family, not mine.

Every year or so the government totally changes all the tax laws. Do you know why? Because it only takes a short time for people to discover the loopholes. I'll tell you what else needs overhauling...a little something called the "blind trust," created by the rich to benefit the rich sometime before the turn of the century. Only now the entire country is utilizing it to escape their responsibilities. i.e., a widow with three children socks away $900,000 in a blind trust for her children and then seeks senior housing from the state.

And then there's my 80-year-old auntie who still receives her monthly social security check, along with sizable stock dividends. Her stock dividends in one month are more than most people make in a year. The social security check is her ice cream money.

If you were a company president, would you pay people to not work, pay people to not make things, pay people for three hours even if they only worked 10 minutes? Probably not. But your government does this all the time. If your policemen and firefighters are called in to work overtime and they only work 10 minutes, they are paid time-and-a-half for a three-hour minimum. The woes of the world started when someone paid someone else for something he didn't do. A hole was created into which humanity fell.

A Russian emigrant said that the birth of a new Russian republic would take a long time because communism had changed the people into something different. Something unlike people. And he said there were three helpless generations of those people living in Russia today. Still looking for a leader, not realizing that any leader demands the power from the people. And if the people have lost their power? That is the Russian dilemma.

Christmas morning a friend and I walk in Wheelwright Park. Right around the quarry pond we run into the face of Ireland, carrying a golf club. Says he's looking for his golf balls. Says every Christmas morn for the past 25 years he looks for his golf balls in Wheelwright Park. We look for things there, too. So much for Christmas 1991.

Accident disturbs onlooker letter

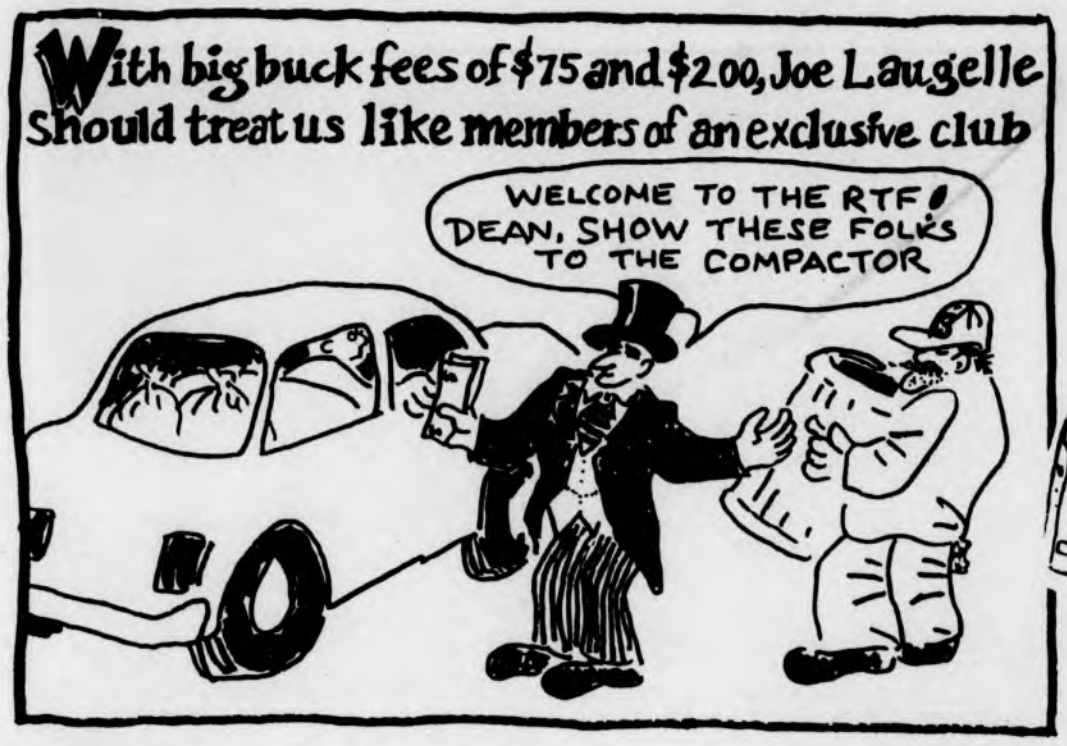
To the Editor:

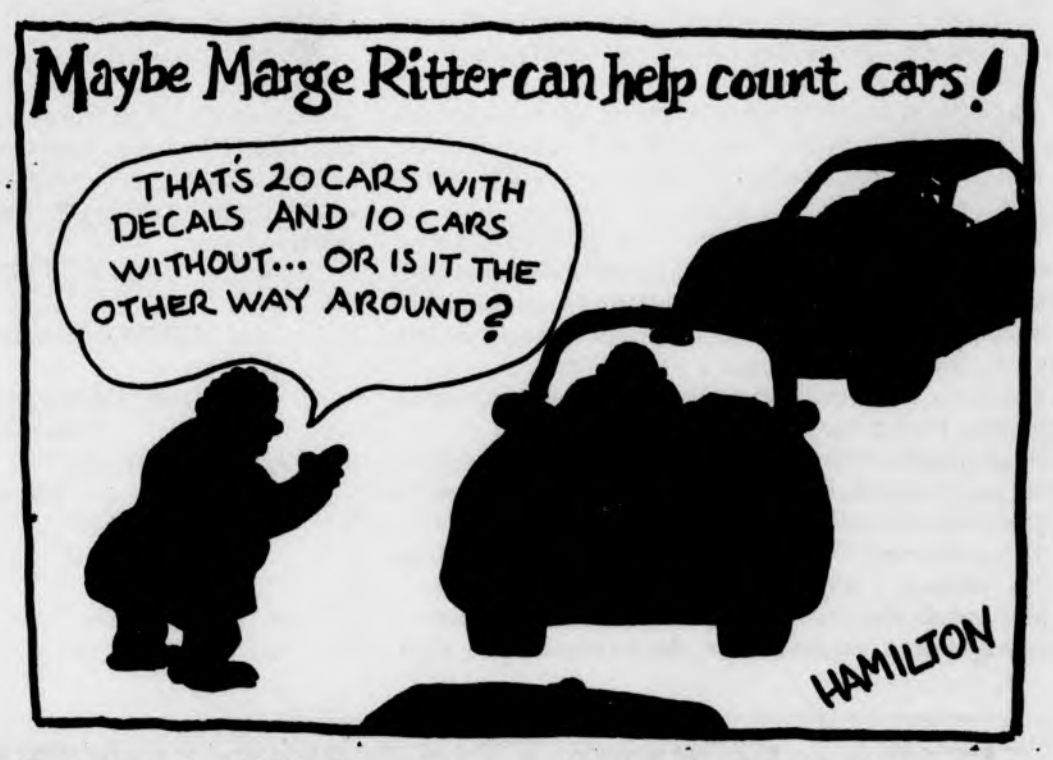
I witnessed a very disturbing accident last Sunday noon, Dec. 22.



A car was traveling south on Highland Ave. and as it turned right, by the duck pond, I saw that it was on a collision course with a small dog running across the street. I hoped the driver would stop in time.

But he never put on the brakes. Didn't even hesitate after hitting the dog but kept right on going. He knew he hit the dog because I heard the thump and I was at least fifteen feet away.

Suppose it had been a child, instead of a dog?



There is a heartless, cowardly driver out there somewhere; let's hope with a very guilty conscience.

DEA agent warns of prescription abuse

By Carlo A. Boccia
Special Agent in charge of US Drug Enforcement

The United States Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) often receives attention from the media for our actions against the abusers of illegal "street" drugs such as cocaine and heroin. Yet, equally important are our efforts to stop the problem of the abuse of legal prescription drugs. One third of all drug overdoses reported in 1990 by hospital emergency rooms reporting to the Drug Abuse Warning Network were for legal controlled drugs such as Valium, Xanax, Percodan and Darvon.

Throughout the country, the DEA has supported the establishment of effective prescription monitoring systems to address the growing problem of prescription drug abuse. Prescription monitoring systems have been utilized in many states, and have been found to be an effective method to attack prescription drug abuse.

Prescription drug abuse is the result of the diversion of legal drugs for illegal purposes through: criminal diversion by dishonest health care professionals, indiscriminate overprescribing of prescription drugs, forgeries of illegal prescriptions, and the theft of legal drugs. Effective prescription monitoring systems aim to address all of these sources of prescription drug abuse, while protecting the rights of the overwhelming majority of doctors and patients who properly prescribe and utilize prescription drugs.

In Massachusetts, there is now legislation pending in the Senate Ways and Means Committee to establish a prescription monitoring system. This legislation is the result of hard work and study by the Health Care Committee, under the leadership of Sen. Ed Burke and Rep. Carmen Buell. The Health Care Committee bill would establish an electronic prescription monitoring system in Massachusetts that would force dishonest and lax health care professionals to be accountable to the state for their behavior. This bill was based on legislation filed during this session by Sen. Paul White and Rep. John McDonough and Rep. Sally Kerans.

The Health Care Committee bill is a good first step. However, Sen. Brian Lees recently proposed to amend the House budget to provide for a method to address the issue of prescription drug forgeries and to cover Schedule IV drugs, which are the most widely abused prescription drugs. Schedule IV drugs are often linked to problems such as traffic accidents from drug-impaired drivers, increased crime, and several thousand fatalities in the state each year from overdose. The Health Care Committee bill should be amended to address the issues of forgeries and Schedule IV drugs.

An effective prescription monitoring system in Massachusetts could save many lives and hospital emergency room visits and would save money on law enforcement costs.

For public health and safety reasons, I urge the Ways and Means Committee and the State Legislature to act soon on the legislation to establish a prescription monitoring system in Massachusetts.

Medi Gap health insurance

The house of representatives recently approved a plan that would subsidize Medi-gap insurance for the state's low and moderate income senior citizens and disabled persons. Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, member of the Legislative Caucus on Older Citizens Concerns, supports the amendment, hailed the action as important to the area's elderly population and their health needs.

"Medi-gap insurance covers costs beyond what is provided by Medicare. There are approximately 250,000 senior citizens in the Commonwealth who do not have Medi-gap insurance because they can't afford it. Blue Cross/Blue Shield, which sells Medex, the most popular Medi-gap policy available in the state, raised its rates by 67 percent in 1990," stated Rep. Murray.

"If another requested Medex rate hike is approved by the State Insurance Commissioner, Medex rates will have increased 100 percent in three years," she continued.

The Medi-gap proposal, offered as an amendment to the hospital finance bill, was approved on a voice vote. Many senior citizens were at the State House to lobby for the amendment, which is supported by Massachusetts Senior Action Council, the Legislative Caucus on Older Citizens Concerns, the Massachusetts Council on Aging, and the State Chapter of American Association of Retired Persons.

"The amendment would not have passed if not for the work and support of the Caucus on Older Citizens Concerns. I also caution that the bill must also pass the Senate and be signed by the Governor before becoming law," Murray said.

The amendment would establish a $68 million trust fund to subsidize Medi-gap premiums for seniors with incomes under 250 percent of the poverty level and provide annual subsidies ranging from about $400 to $750 on a sliding scale based on income. The program would enable approximately 158,000 seniors to purchase health insurance.

"That funding for the subsidy would not come from state revenues, but from existing state and federal funds. This year the state will receive $200 million in federal Medicaid matching funds to the state's free-care pool. The amendment directs $50 million of that amount to the "pool" to fund this program," she said.

The amendment would place administrative responsibility for the Medi-gap subsidy program with the Division of Medical Security.

Medicare pays for less than 50 percent of out-of-pocket health care costs and the cost of health care for the elderly is twice that of younger persons.

"Seniors desperately need Medi-gap insurance. I hear from senior citizens who have to deprive themselves of necessities in order to pay for Medi-gap insurance, and others who go without medical checkups and prescriptions because they don't have the insurance to pay for them."

"In the long run the current situation is more costly. Medi-gap relief will not only help seniors but makes good economic sense for the Commonwealth by potentially decreasing hospital and nursing home costs," she said.

year in review

changed to overcome some problems. The first set of plans would have required a variance.

The selectmen began talking about hiring a new fire chief. There were 66 candidates replying to the ad.

Town Clerk Frances Marks advised selectmen she planned to retire at the end of the year. She served as town clerk from 1984 to 1991. She was assistant town clerk for 13 years before that.

A program on child abuse prevention was written into the school curriculum.

Everett Dorr was honored by school officials for his years of service as a coach, teacher and director of athletics. The upper gymnasium at CHS was named for him. Mr. Dorr died the next month.

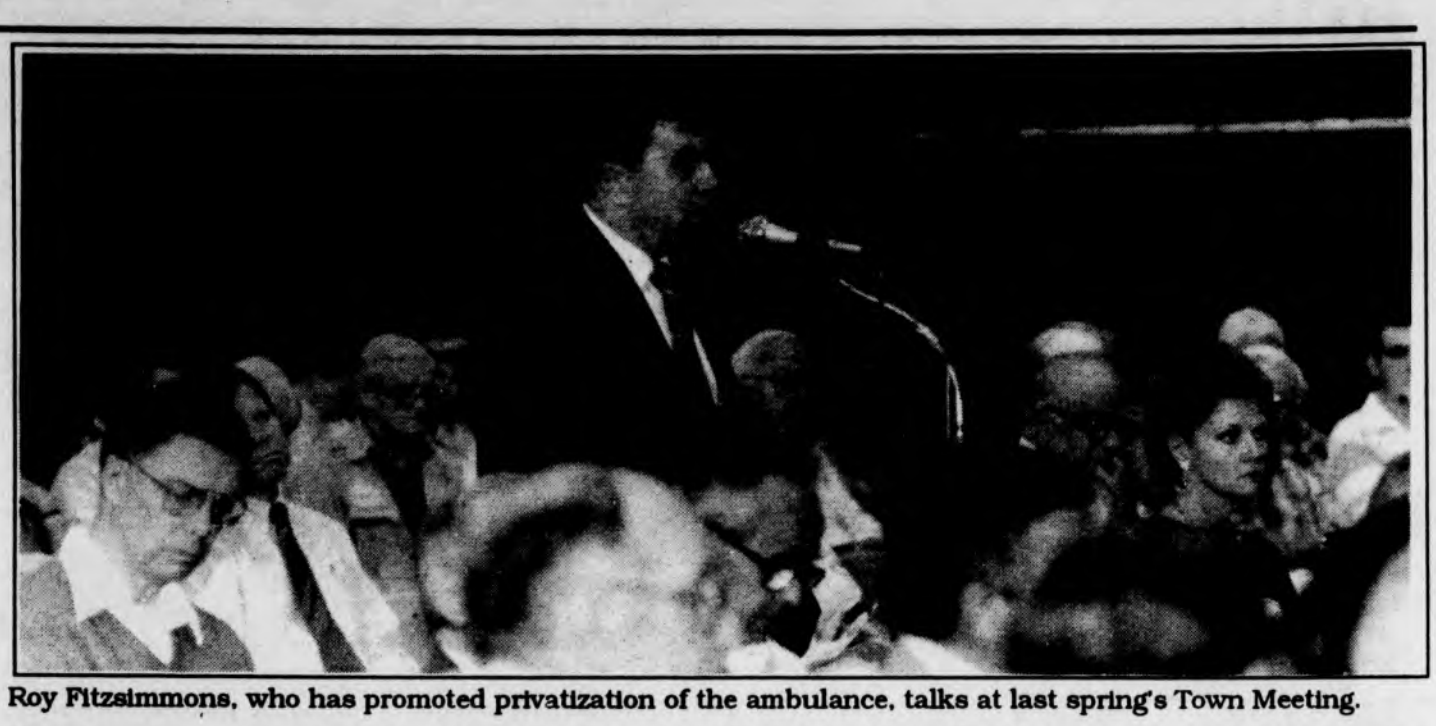
The Social Service League offered a program on AIDS.

A Halloween storm caused extensive damage to the lobster fleet as well as to town facilities. Patrolman Paul Laugelle rescued several people trapped by the high water.

In November there was talk of building a new playing field at Deer Hill School — the talk included the threat that at least one of the town's playing fields must remain closed for a season.

Marion Douglas was appointed temporary town clerk by selectmen upon the retirement of Frances Marks.

Selectmen began talking about an override in the coming spring.



The selectmen backed a proposal to buy local that was submitted by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. (Nevertheless, the town continues to place legal advertisements in the Quincy-based daily paper rather than in the local newspaper.)

The water commissioners talked about using a private company to run the water department.

In December the police officers began working to raise private funds for new semi-automatic weapons to replace the old-fashioned guns they now use.

The selectmen voted to offer the fire chief's job to John Nadeau, a deputy chief from Sanford, Maine.

Meanwhile there was talk Scituate was interested in working out a regional fire department. The idea continues to exist.

Roy Fitzsimmons, who has promoted privatization of the ambulance, talks at last spring's Town Meeting.

The anniversary of the bombing of Pearl Harbor brought out a group of veterans to commemorate the solemn event. Both the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars participated.

The Safe Homes project of the town's drug and alcohol committee succeeded far beyond the rate of the previous year.

The school department held its first assembly on date rape at CHS.

The selectmen and Cohasset Lighthouse Keepers agreed in principal to the form of an agreement for a 10-year lease of the duplex at Government Island. It will be advertised before being executed.

The used car dealer's license for Cohasset Imports was held up as other licenses in town were renewed. The issue will be discussed Jan. 6 at the selectmen's meeting.

more they win. Influenza can win at home, but Influenza can win on the road, too. You can call it names like "The Fightin' Phlegm," but it won't matter. Influenza is off to an impressive 3-1 start, the best start in its history against Cohasset. Data is unavailable as to how Influenza is doing around the South Shore.

Influenza lost one against the J.V. Boys (at Scituate) 61-54. Coach Ron Ford and his boys have shown it can be beaten, so there is a ray of hope. Additionally, history shows that Influenza tends to be a strong team in the first half of the season, but it's prone to weak finishes as teams adjust.

Both varsity teams are at Carver Jan. 3 (girls at 5, boys at 7 p.m.). The girls' teams travel to Rockland Jan. 6 while the boys play Rockland at home. Please attend, and check your street shoes and viruses at the door.

Trash volume up, RTF faces deficit

Trash at the Recycling/Tranfers Facility (RTF) increased by about 50 percent last summer — the increase seems to be hauled in by vehicles with dump stickers, according to the initial research of health department officials.

"It is coincident that the Hull landfill closed in July and that was when our increase began," said Health Board Chairman Sharon Becker.

The board of health is looking into several options to deal with the problem — some ideas have already been tried:

- fees for new dump stickers are $75, rather than $52. (People living alone are entitled to a special rate of $37.50) Old stickers expire Jan. 31.
- the fee will pay for only one dump sticker. The fee for a second car registered to the same family will be $25. (Health board members suspect some of the extra stickers issued in the past were given to friends.)
- by next year, it is likely the town will switch to a system where people pay per bag to dump trash — thus placing the cost of the system on the people who generate the greatest amount of trash. (Recycling would be free.)
- the cost of renting a surveillance camera is being looked into. The idea is to monitor whether some illegal dumping may be going on. The idea proposed by Health Board member William Baird

Election heats up: Tebbetts won't run

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts will not seek reelection.

Citing his health, Tebbetts told the other members of his board Monday he has decided not to run "primarily due to health."

Tebbetts was recently hospitalized for tests. The results showed problems with his blood sugar.

Tebbetts is completing his first three-year term on the selectmen. Before running for selectman, he was chairman of the capital outlay committee for five years. He served as a member of capital outlay for nine years.

Meanwhile this week Acting Town Clerk Marion Douglas said she will be running for the one-year unexpired term for that office. Douglas has not yet taken out nomination papers for the office. The papers for all offices will be available Jan. 13 in the town clerk's office. Frances Marks retired as town clerk at the close of 1991.

Douglas has been assistant town clerk for four years. Before that she worked in other capacities in town government, serving in the building inspector's office, the board of health office and the sewer department.

The signatures of 50 registered voters are required on a candidate's nomination papers. They must be returned for certification by the registrars of voters by 5 p.m. Friday, Feb. 28.

The election will be Saturday, April 11.

Tebbetts took the opportunity of making his election statement to toss another barb toward the Republican governor who has failed to provide relief to local communities through the cherry sheets.

Ralph Kidder - the consummate educator

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

When I saw Ralph Kidder for the first time ever he was standing on Election Row (Highland Avenue) with his school committee sign asking passers-by to elect him...and I yelled out "Yes! The candidate with the Batman name!"

Ralph is married to Linda Keller, interior designer, who kept her professional name when they married.

In his third year of a three-year school committee term, Kidder is not sure he's going to campaign for a second term. Good town government people always have a prior commitment, like a major, major job. Being Financial Director of Boston University's Law School (since 1989) is challenging in these days of decreasing students everywhere. Competing for students has become a way of life for public and private schools.

Kidder is the consummate school committee member. He taught in the public schools for years. He's been involved and is presently involved in a doctorate program. He's involved in higher education at a major university. And he wants everything to be better and he works to make it better. More important. Kidder is thoughtful. He doesn't necessarily come out of a conversation the same way he went in. Which is why in 1989 BU president John Silber tapped him for a high-level job.

A graduate of Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Penn., Kidder went straight from Lehigh University (which has no education department) to a school in the West Baltimore ghetto.

"My first year teaching was the year Bobby Kennedy was assassinated."

While he feels anybody can teach, including the Osgood School third-graders involved in peer editing, "Noneducators with an excellent grasp of their subject would need to acquire a solid background in teaching disciplines, and have some on-the-job teacher training." He noted that new certification requirements are going to guarantee that a teacher has a better exposure to the classroom during training.

"A teacher must know how to diagnose individual differences. And, they must plan effective programs and be able to access a student's progress," he said.

Cohasset's week

Quigley wins small increase

William Quigley, dog officer, won a the backing of the board of selectmen for a small increase in the hours he is paid for. Quigley, a part-time worker, said he already works more than the 12 hours a week he is seeking in the coming year's budget. He is currently paid for nine-and-a-half hours a week. The change would require further approval from the annual town meeting. Quigley pointed out his department is self-supporting from fees and fines.

The entire animal control budget for 1993, as recommended by selectmen, is $8,250, up from $7,514 this year.

Plaza Liquor violation hearing

A liquor hearing over an alleged violation at Cohasset Plaza Liquors will take place at 9 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 27, at town hall.

Selectmen set up the hearing this week upon the request of Police Chief Joseph Kealey.

Greg Doyon, selectmen's secretary, said the allegation involved int the hearing is "serving minors."

He correctly pointed out that the police report on the matter is not a public document.

Thompson & Bertolani

John Larkin Thompson of 268 Jerusalem Road and John Bertolani of 69 Summer Street were appointed to the Harbor Committee Monday by the unanimous vote of the selectmen.

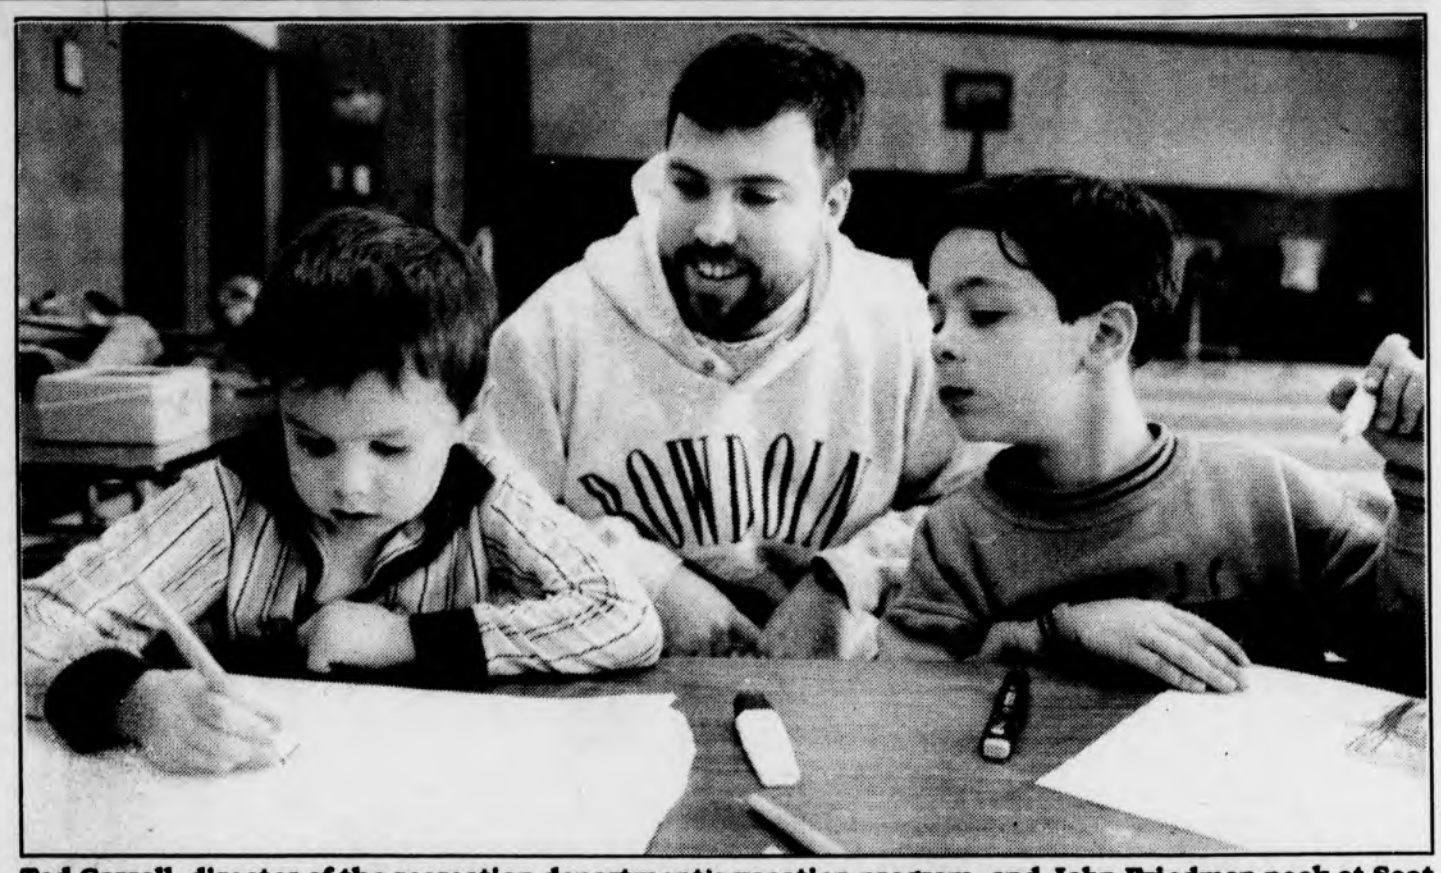
The two were appointed despite some questions raised by Selectman Martha Gjesteby. She complained that she felt threatened by Fritz XXX, member of the Harbor Committee, who had told her that if the two men who were suggested by the committee for appointment were not put on the committee, there would be mass resignations.

"I didn't mean to threaten you, Martha," XXX said. "There was no threat intended."

Chamber gift

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce recently voted to allow its gift of $4,000 to be used by the town for creating a new playing field at the Deer Hill School. The gift was originally intended for use at the Milliken/Lillard Field but selectmen asked the chamber to reconsider in view of the chance to build the new field in the coming season.

Selectman this week voted to thank the chamber.



Rabies epidemic on the way

Cats need to be immunized for rabies, according to Health Agent Joseph Godzik, who said the state is considering legislation on the point in view of a possible outbreak.

Godzik said rabies outbreaks are moving up the eastern coast and have reached Connecticutt. He said that while it is important to have dogs immunized, the licensing requirement demands rabies immunization.

"It is a greater concern that cats be immunized," he said. He pointed out that rabies are found elsewhere in the racoon population and that this makes cats a likely target.

In this state rabies have been found in a few bats.

Zoning board decisions

The zoning board of appeals recently handed down a series of decisions. They include:

• granting a special permit to Target Industries, 1 Pleasant St., to allow the business to expand its operation, which is in the flood plain.

The planning board opposed the expansion, claiming the company was actually engaged in light industry and thus a nonconforming use.

The zoning board held a hearing Dec. 5 on the permit request and reaffirmed a 1988 decision that the business was allowed since it refines optical lenses rather than manufactures them.

• allowed Dunkin Donuts to erect two signs at 347 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) "because of the corner location."

It agreed that Baybank and Artist's Sons had been granted similar relief from the bylaw.

The decision is conditional upon removal of the pylon sign at Cushing Plaza. No window signs are allowed.

The hearing took place Oct. 5 and Nov. 7.

• refused to allow an expansion of the product line sold at Verc Mobil Mart, 190 King St. (Route 3A). The decision was based on an appeal of the March 1989 decision of the board that allowed a variance of the front yard setback for the gasoline station canopy. That decision limited what else could be sold. The board pointed out that the 20 appeal period had elapsed but added that the members saw no basis to alter the earlier decision limiting goods sold to individual servings.

The hearing was held Oct. 3.

• allowed Margaret and Richard Tibbets Jr. of 90 Howard Gleason Road to operate a five-room bed and breakfast from their home with several provisions.

The decision gave a special permit to the couple upon condition that at least one of them live in the home eight months a year; only breakfast could be served; only one employee could work in the home; no advertising could be done on the premises, and the rooms could not be rented for functions.

The decision is not transferable.

The 14-room Tibbits home is located on a 1.5 acre lot.

The planning board had vote 1-0 against the petition.

The zoning board hearing happened Nov. 7.

• denied permission to redivide a lot at 330 North Main Street to Catherine Collins-Wooley.

She sought to subdivide her lot with 88.22 feet of frontage on North Main Street rather than 100 feet required to allow a land swap with the realty trust that owns the adjacent parcel.

F. Knoll Collins represented the applicant and the North Main Street Realty Trust.

The board stated in its rationale for turning down the variance request that: "It appears clear that the configuration has a primary purpose to produce the necessary width of 50 feet for the trust to build a street to the bulk of its 8.3 acres at the rear of the applicant's lot."

The hearing was held Oct. 3.

• granted a special permit to allow Stephen and Donna O'Connor of 37 Staunton Road permission to build a pier with a float.

Robert Johnston of 300 South Main St. expressed opposition at the hearing held Dec. 5.

Elsie Sladen turns 100

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

Elsie Eddy (Higgins) Sladen of Cohasset celebrated her 100th birthday Sunday at her Elm Court home with family and friends.

It was a relatively quiet celebration with a huge birthday cake, greeting cards and balloons. She is recovering from the after-effects of a bout with the flu.

Mrs. Sladen was born in Scituate Jan. 9, 1892, at the old Scituate hospital on Kent Street.

Her family moved to Cohasset shortly afterward, and except for a short stay in Dracut, she has lived in Cohasset ever since.

Mrs. Sladen says she loves flowers — her husband and his father had worked as florists at the Barron Estate which later became the Cox Estate — and that was evident Sunday when her children and grandchildren separately presented her with beautiful bouquets of mixed flowers, of red roses and pink roses.

In Dracut, her husband, John, a coppersmith by trade, helped build automobile radiators and the first washing machines with copper tubs.

Subsequently he worked as a coppersmith at Bethlehem Steel Company's Fore River shipyard until he became afflicted with copper poisoning and forced to give up his job.

He then worked for J. Parnell, a Cohasset architect, and as a Cohasset school custodian until he died in 1953.

The following year, the high school yearbook was dedicated to him, according to his family.

Mrs. Sladen has two sons, Sheldon Sladen of Cohasset and Donald Sladen of Scituate; seven grandchildren, 14 great-grandchildren and a great-great-grandson, James Mahan.

After her husband died, she worked at Hugo's restaurant and in the kitchen at Deer Hill School until mandatory retirement snuck up at age 65.

During World War II she worked at the Hanover Fireworks Company, making rockets that were used on the decks of LSTs.

She continued to keep busy after she retired, and until just two years ago, could be seen driving around town to do her errands.

"She outlasted the car," chuckled Sheldon Sladen. "The car was a 1967 Chevy II with just 57,000 miles on it. The engine was fine, but the floor boards just rotted out."

When she belonged to the Cohasset Senior Citizens, she regularly took part in their trips to faraway places, like Florida and Portugal.

Donald Sladen said until this recent illness, his mother never had a sick day in her life.

Until a few years ago, she enjoyed crocheting and made beautiful tablecloths, and just two years ago, he said, she had cataract operations on both her eyes.

She continues to enjoy reading, he said.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, sent Mrs. Sladen a proclamation from the House of Representatives, wishing her happy and healthy returns on her special day that she becomes a centenarian who is "young at heart."

Trash volume up, RTF faces deficit ...

• a temporary worker was hired to monitor dumping at the RTF for one month. He failed to any significant illegal dumping.

• there is a chance the town may seek a private operator for the RTF.

• and officials are looking into the possibility of breaking the SEMASS contract to seek cheaper alternatives for waste disposal.

This week the board of health met with its liason to the advisory board, Michael Putziger, to talk about the budget problems.

The board of health's line item for the RTF will run short for this year — the current estimate is the shortfall may be $66,000. That deficit is due to the increased volume at the RTF.

Until last July, volume trucked from thr RTF to SEAMASS was about 190 tons a month. In July the figure shot up and is now averaging 290 tons a month.

The figure for trash volume in December will be higher but that includes much Christmas wrap.

"It's mind-boggling," said Michael Sullivan, member of the board of health. "We don't have 50 percent more homes. We don't have more people. Where is the trash coming from?"

Joe Laugelle, the RTF manager, said he welcomes anyone spending time at the RTF to try to find the answer. He pointed out that the temporary employee hired to monitor the RTF found only a handful of attempts to violate the sticker system.

Becker said that in view of the recession, it's even more difficult to understand why there is an increase.

Sullivan asked if it were possible the scale at SEMASS might have gone awry.

Dr. Joseph Godzik, health agent, said the town has the right to ask that the scale be calibrated but it would have to pay for it.

Laugelle said the number of trucks hauling trash to SEMASS indicates the volume is indeed up. He pointed out that national statistics indicate each person generates six-and-a-half pounds of trash a day.

The increased price for RTF stickers will not cover the shortfall. What it will do is: ensure that the user fee pays the same percentage of trash costs as it has covered in the past. The user fee has been paying about 55 percent of the RTF cost. The rest is paid theough the tax rate. The increased price was computed by health officials based on the increased volume alone — the price of disposing of the trash may also increase in the future due to increased costs at the SEMASS incinerator.

The issue of breaking the SEMASS contract is separate from the problem of increased volume.

Monday the board of health met with the selectmen to discuss that option. Town Counsel Richard Henderson explained that he wanted to be vague to avoid giving away strategies in the event there may some future litigation — and he suggested the committee that recommended the long-term contract with SEMASS be reactivated to see if the incinerator is still the best option.

Members of the solid waste disposal committee are being contacted about the new charge.

The problem, as the health board sees it, is the increasing costs of the incinerator. Four years ago the town began an interim contract with SEMASS. The long-term, 15-year contract, has yet to kick in since the third boiler has not gone on line. Henderson said the clause referring to the third boiler is something the town might use to litigate the contract.

Once the long-term begins, the town will be charged $62 a ton. At the present time, under the interim contract, the town is paying $49 a ton. For the current volume, the difference would amount to $45,000 more a year.

Susan Nalband named volunteer of the year

At the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset, the "art of hanging" is capably handled by volunteer Susan Nalband of Scituate. To thank Susan for her dedication, time, and talents, the Art Center recently honored her as SSAC Volunteer of the Year.

Susan began volunteering at the Art Center three years ago after it moved to its 119 Ripley Road site. A former Special Events Coordinator for a retail clothing store, Susan took on the challenging duty of hanging all the exhibits. In addition to 10 annual shows, which include the enormously popular Juried Photography and All New England Juried exhibits, Susan coordinates the hanging of the three SSAC Art Festival exhibits at the Art Center and under the tents on Cohasset Common each June.

Noticeably surprised at winning the award, Susan said she loves her volunteer work. When not volunteering in the galleries, she's up in the SSAC classrooms learning the art of monoprint. Susan has lived in Scituate for six years with her husband and two children.

Also honored at the SSAC Volunteer Reception were Mary Alice Flynn, Virginia Newcombe and Julie Hawkins-Burnham, all of Scituate, Yvonne Gillis of Weymouth, Marya Walsh of Hull, Dudley Burke and Chris Rifkin of Hingham, Leslie Grilli of Cohasset, and Christine Vaughn of Marshfield.

Clinton & Cook attend course

Senator Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, congratulates Cohasset residents Helen Clinton and Deborah Cook upon completion of the eight-week Citizens' Legislative Seminar, which was held recently at the State House. Clinton and Cook were nominated by Hedlund and were among more than 50 Massachusetts residents who recently participated in the seminar.

Once a week, for six consecutive weeks, participants gathered at the State House for three hours to examine the legislative process.

The seminar included, but was not limited to, lectures from senators and representatives on topics such as the Formal and Informal Process and the Fiscal Year Budget. The Citizen's Legislative Seminar culminates in a simulated session where participants debate a

FEMA funds trickle in Local communities can expect to receive the first federal reimbursements for public cleanup costs associated with Hurricane Bob and the Oct. 30 coastal storm by Jan. 13, according to U.S. Rep. Gerry E. Studds, D-Cohasset.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency authorized the first payment of federal disaster relief funds — more than $19 million — to reimburse cities and towns throughout southeastern Massachusetts for the cost of public disaster relief efforts.

"Town officials have been waiting for months for these funds to come through," said Studds.

"Finally, the wait is over. Reimbursement checks should be in area mailboxes in a matter of days."

FEMA had stopped payment of all public assistance claims last April because its disaster relief fund was depleted.

Studds led efforts to release supplemental funds, and finally, just hours before the Thanksgiving recess, Congress passed a dire emergency supplemental appropriation bill which included $943 million for FEMA's disaster relief fund.

After the bill was signed two weeks later, FEMA began paying outstanding claims for public assistance, some dating back as far as 1989.

Additional FEMA funds will be released to Massachusetts as pending applications for public assistance are processed and approved.

Ralph Kidder- the consummate educator ...

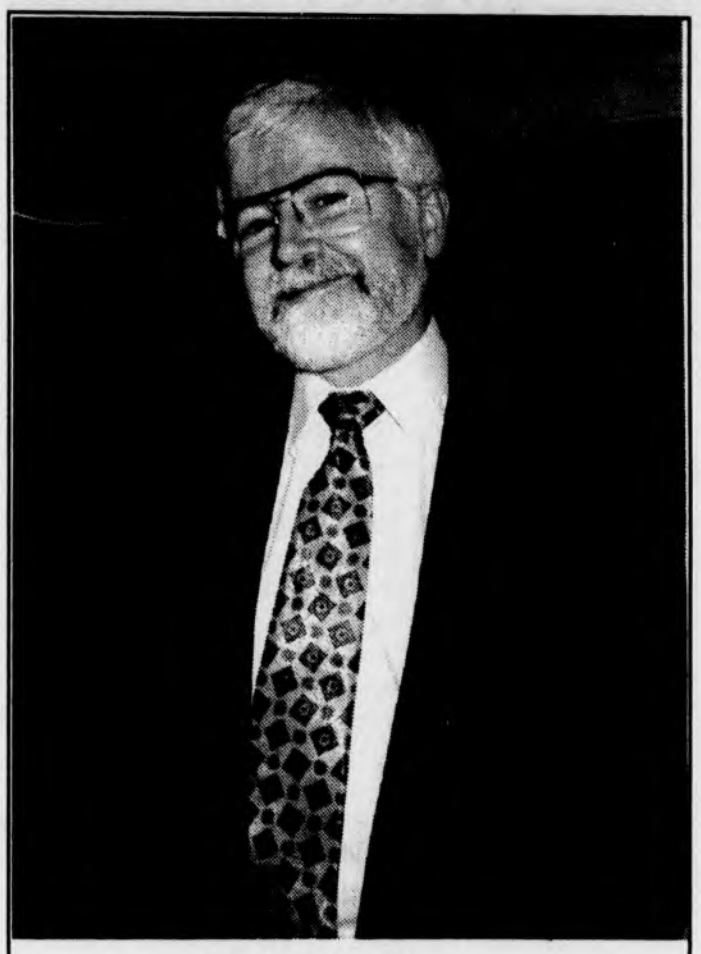
"We must emphasize excellence and know how to achieve it."

Kidder was born in Pittsburgh in 1946 – and in that year it was a gray city becoming grayer.

"I grew up in the inner city. My graduating class numbered 550 people. 62 people went to college and I went to Lehigh University."

In 1973 Kidder was at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, intensely involved in a four-year doctoral program in educational administration.



"I'm sitting in the qualifying exam, one of two eight-hour exams. One of the questions is: 'Assume you are superintendent of a suburban school with declining enrollments.' I thought —what am I doing here? If there's no need for teacher education, what am I doing here?"

For 15 years before it happened, Kidder said it was very clear there was going to be a dearth of students and a declining need for teachers and administrators. He decided to opt out.

He entered a Masters of Business Administration program at Boston University and got involved in mortgage banking as a controller, with a New York Stock Exchange firm.

But we're getting ahead of our story here. Because something else important happened in Ann Arbor while Kidder was attending to his doctoral program.

"I was a graduate teaching fellow, earning very little, and I applied for a Christmas job at a major department store in Ann Arbor. The department next to mine sold directors chairs. The first day I walked into my department I saw a director chair with the name 'Ralph.' As it turned out, Linda was the interior designer in the adjacent department, and shortly before I arrived she had created the 'Ralph' chair."

Mr. Ralph Kidder

So, I ask, what happened here?

"Fate," he said.

They met in 1976. They married in 1978. But after they met in 1976 they were never really apart. And there are now three little Kidders: Elizabeth (named after the Queen of England), age 12; third-grader Sarah; and first-grader Ian.

In addition to his career at Boston University, Kidder is involved in a doctoral academic program entitled business policy and strategic management. In researching his topic, he talks to general managers and CEOs. Cohasset students will enjoy hearing that "Mr. Kidder" finds academic writing difficult.

"Academic writing is proof writing; and I'm writing for a premiere journal. I imagine a problem and come up with a theory for solving the problem."

Additionally, Kidder feels in his heart what more and more of us are knowing, namely that television, and particularly game television programs, is contributing to the decline of education.

"It's (Nintendo) a passive activity. The computer is a tool. When you're playing a game with it, you're not using it as a tool."

With regard to Cohasset's need for another override, Kidder says he has to believe it will happen or valuable staff will be cut.

He sees educational regionalization as a "red herring," and feels voters will support an override in order to maintain "a quality school system."

Accordingly, he recognizes the town's unemployment factor, and the 20/80 factor (20 percent of homeowners have children in the schools).

He feels a major part of the local education budget must be funded by the state, as opposed to the local property tax.

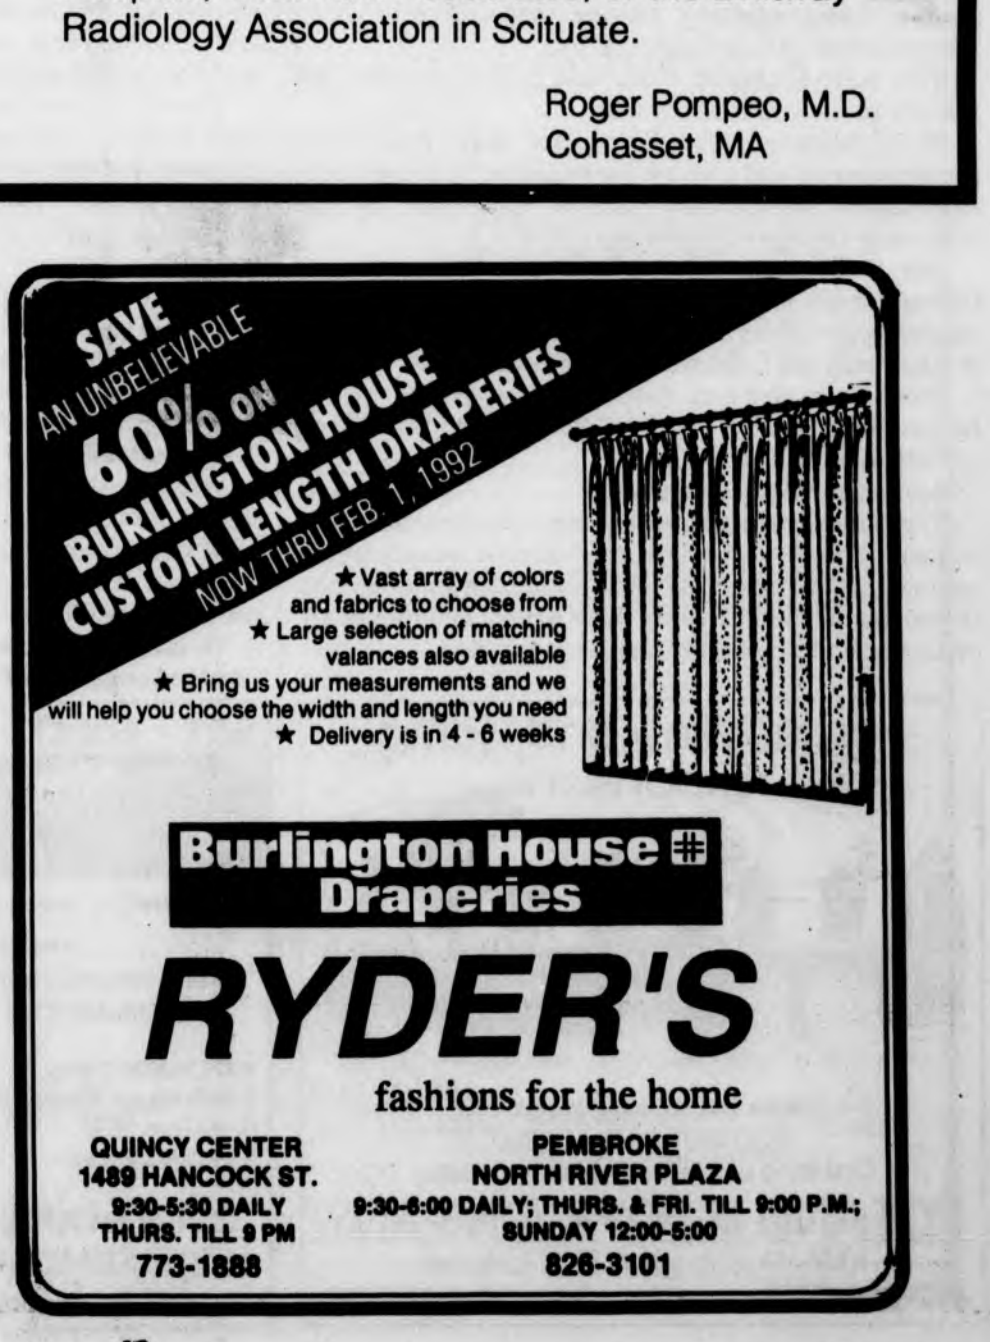
NOTICE



TO ALL MY PATIENTS

I do NOT recommend that you have a mammogram taken by the mobile van that is coming to Cohasset Saturday, January 11.

I do, however, recommend that appropriate mammograms be done at the South Shore Hospital, Columbia Associates, or the Driftway Radiology Association in Scituate.

Maine man offered contract including 'out' for town

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

John Nadeau of Sandford, Maine, is being offered a three-year employment contract as the town's fire chief at a starting rate of $47,000 a year, plus $1,500 in relocation fees and other benefits.

Nadeau would start Jan. 27. In the interim, Fire Chief Daniel Brock continues to run the department.

The vote was 4-1, with Selectman Rocco Laugelle opposing the offer. Laugelle said the salary was too high and added that he opposes paying relocation costs for any employee.

"I only want to say the price is a little high," Laugelle said. "I understand the difference of the cost of living there and here. I don't think it's a $17,000 or $18,000 difference."

Laugelle pointed out that Nadeau is 34 and that he doesn't feel he will stay with the department.

Selectman Diana Kornet disagreed. She said Nadeau talked about staying 10 to 12 years.

Nadeau is deputy fire chief is Sandford.

Laugelle and Jane Goedecke were on the subcommittee that negotiated the terms of the contract with Nadeau.

Goedecke said the meeting to negotiate the contract was a productive one, that Nadeau talked about his objectives as well as about the negotiations.

"Both sides were pleased with the results," Goedecke said. "I feel good about the outcome."

The pay for the first year of the contract is $47,000. The second year is $48,500 and the last year is $50,000. Chief Brock's contract, which expired at the end of 1991, was for $49,048 a year.

The new contract also has a clause providing severance pay in the event the town moves into a regional fire system.

Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts pointed out that the possibility of regionalizing the fire service was discussed during the interview with Nadeau before the actual vote on his selection.

Nadeau was the only candidate of the more than 60 applicants that was offered a second interview by the selectmen. He was the top choice of four of the selectmen after the subcommittee presented four candidates for interviews from the list of applications.

Nadeau holds an associate's degree in fire science from the Southeastern Maine Vocational Technical Institute and a bachelor's of science degree in vocational and personnel management from the University of Southern Maine.

From 1985 to 1990, he was deputy state fire administrator for Maine Fire Training and Education. Between 1982 and 1985, he served as supervisor of the Maine Fire Service Training. From 1976 to 1982, he worked for the Sanford Fire Department, achieving the grade of captain.

Sanford is a city of about 23,000.

His department managed to get throught the year without major layoffs due to a wage freeze agreed to by the union there.

In applying for the Cohasset job, Nadeau said: "My strong professional work ethic, 15 years of fire service experience, two college degrees, graduate work in executive leadership, proven work history and emphasis on customer service are personal assets that I'll employ to achieve your community goals and objectives."

Science Center director Barbara Easterday resigns

By Judy Enright
Mariner staff

Barbara Easterday, the director of the South Shore Natural Science Center for the past 18 months, has resigned.

Her resignation, which was effective Dec. 31, was for personal and professional reasons, according to J. Leonard Bicknell, chairman of the Board of Trustees. He added that the resignation came as a surprise. Easterday gave the board her resignation after Christmas, Bicknell said, and they asked her to make it immediate. She returned to the Center last week to clean out her desk.

Annellen and James Walsh of Cohasset enjoy the Restoration Ball in the lobby of the Wang Center in Boston. A Lexus was on display inside the theater lobby. Lexus sponsored the ball which benefits the capital improvement campaign for the Wang center.

Bicknell said the Center was fortunate to have Assistant Executive Director Susan Reynolds on board to fill the immediate gap, and to have Bill Perkins, a naturalist, educator and writer who has been associated with the Science Center for 18 years, willing to take the appointment as interim executive director.

Perkins spent 22 years in public education as a teacher and administrator. He is a member of the adjunct faculty at Antioch College, teaching graduate classes in math and science. He is also a math and science consultant to Addison-Wesley publishers and has been Naturalist-in-Residence at the Science Center since August, 1991.

Bicknell said the the Science Center, on Jacobs Lane in Norwell, "is still in financial difficulty but we have a plan to reach a balanced budget by the end of the fiscal year (March 30). We have made progress," he said. "I wouldn't call it a crisis but it's a tough business environment."

Easterday, who lives outside Worcester, never moved closer to her job in the time she was employed by the Center. Bicknell said she commuted for over an hour each way to and from work every day.

"She was a loyal employee and worked very hard to build the core business of this organization. I'm sorry to lose her," Bicknell said.

Mammograms offered

The Cohasset Social Service League will sponsor a mobile mammography service, according to Judy Fitzsimmons, public health nurse.

This fully-equipped office van makes it easier for women to have mammograms.

Most women who have not had one, give inconvenience and cost as the reasons. This service is convenient, inexpensive and is accredited by the American College of Radiology.

The best means of controlling breast cancer is through early detection. The survival rate for breast cancer approaches 100 percent if detected early.
It takes only 20 to 30 minutes of your time.

From 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 11, the van will be located in front of the First Congregational Church of Cohasset, near town hall.

Appointments are necessary.

The American Cancer Society recommends that women 35 to 39 years have one baseline mammogram annually; 40 to 49 years have a mammogram every one to two years; over 50 years have a mammogram every year; under 35, a doctor's order is required.

Mobile Diagnostics Inc. of Wellesley provides a fully-equipped coach which is comfortable, private and staffed by registered female technologists. The equipment is state-of-the-art low dose mammography unit. The Xrays are read by board-certified radiologists, and the results will be sent to you and your physician.

Recent Massachusetts legislation mandates that, with a few exceptions, insurance companies provide coverage for mammograms. The average area cost for mammography is $120 to $200. The total cost with Mobile Diagnostic Inc. is $102, and they will bill your insurance company.

If you have no insurance or your insurance does not cover this test, you can take advantage of the $80 cash price, payable on the day of the exam only, by cash, check, MasterCard or Visa.

Some HMOs require you to have a mammography at their own facility. All HMOs require written permission or referral forms. Beginning last January, Medicare covers the cost of a mammogram every other year. It is each woman's responsibility to find out her insurance coverage. If Mobile Diagnostics bills your insurance company and it does not pay, your bill will be $102.

To make an appointment, call the Cohasset Social Service League at 383-0771.

Cohasset Imports faces license hearing

The used car dealer's license for Cohasset Imports continues as it was in the past, pending a hearing scheduled for Jan. 27 before the selectmen.

Selectmen discussed the issue at some length Monday before voting to renew the used car dealer's license with the same wording as used in prior years.

Several residents spoke in favor of the present operation. Nearly a dozen customers of the dealership wrote letters to selectmen after the issue emerged last month. All the letters supported the operation.

Marge Ritter, a neighbor, appeared and complained that the dealer was keeping more than the allowed 20 cars on the lot.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson recommended the selectmen vote on the license renewal and then schedule the hearing if they were concerned about the number of cars.

Government Island plans

The Cohasset Lightkeepers Corp. will unveil its plans for the house on Government Island at a meeting of the selectmen Monday, Feb. 3.

Two models of the building and six drawing will be on view at the time, according to Joseph McElroy, who put the project together last year.

The models will be available for the public to see after the meeting at the new annex of the Cohasset Community Center, 9 Depot Court.

The Cohasset Rotary Club recently decided to offer the nonprofit group a $10,000 challenge grant for the work. The Lightkeepers must raise $50,000 to earn the Rotary money.

Few increases on the table

Selectmen Monday went over a series of budget under the discretion of the board. Few increases were approved. Most everything was level funded. Some budgets, such as insurance, were put on hold.

The Carpenters — Katie, 4, Robbie, 5, and Joel, 8, captured the holiday spirit at Independence Mall in Kingston last month. Joel turned 8 on Dec. 15.

Election heats up: Tebbetts won't run

"I'm still interested in politics," Tebbetts said. "I have attended conventions in the past and I hope to attend more conventions." He is a Democrat.

He said he has heard Ron Goodwin, water commissioner, and Michael Sullivan, health board member, may be considering a run for a seat on the board of selectmen.

"I would be able to back either candidate," Tebbetts said.

His term is one of two on the board that expires this year. Selectman Diana Kornet is also up for reelection. She has not yet indicated whether she will run for reelection.

Tebbetts said he felt comfortable leaving office because he is "pleased at the quality of work done by the other selectmen."

He noted that the budget situation continues to be difficult but that Cohasset has suffered far less than other places.

He said he has heard that there is hope additional money for education may be coming to the communities through state aid but that it will most likely be earmarked for the poorer communities.

When asked what he felt best about during his term in office, Tebbetts said, "We survived."

He explained that the quality of education, the police and fire departments and — despite cutbacks — the highway department are all delivering good service to the town despite the budget crunch.

He said looking at pot holes in other communities, he is pleased with what the town manages to offer.

He pointed out that Priscilla Tebbetts, his wife, does volunteer teaching in Brockton where she works with children in grades 5 and 6 who come from poorer families.

"It's the cities where they are really feeling the pinch," Tebbetts said.

"This is really a serious situation." He talked about the need to do something to help education.

The Tebbetts are doing something to help with the education of some of those children in Brockton.

Tebbetts said he and his wife have made a commitment to help some of the children she is teaching pay the cost of a college education if they go on to higher education.

Tebbetts said he felt comfortable leaving office because he is "pleased at the quality of work done by the other selectmen."

He pointed out that a program of the sort began a while back in New York City.

Aside from the town clerk's one-year unexpired term and the two three-year terms for selectmen, the ballot will also include slots for:

- one three-year term of assessor
- two three-year terms on school committee
- three three-year positions on the trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library
- one three-year term on the board of health
- one five-year term on the planning board
- one three-year term on the water commission
- one three-year term on the sewer commission
- three five-year positions on the recreation commission
- one five-year term on the housing authority.

Over his two seasons, Pat has been in on 19 tackles and recovered two fumbles.

The 1991 Cardinals posted a record of 3-5. Included in the victories were solid triumphs over Bates College (26-6) and Little Three rival Amherst College (32-15) as well as a hard-fought win over a Coast Guard squad (16-13) that posted a 6-3 record. All five of the Cardinals' losses came against teams that finished with winning marks. As a team, Wesleyan ranked 13th among NCAA Division 111 colleges for passing offense from its run-and-shoot formation, averaging better than 240 yards a contest.

Boys' hoop lose to Carver in OT

By Tad Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

The depleted ranks of the Cohasset basketball team walked into Carver Friday night and nearly pulled out a win after being down by as much as 16 points. It was Sheldon Morgan's off-balance jumper with only three ticks left on the clock that sent the game into overtime, 72-72. Morgan's jumper capped a five-minute 24-10 burst by Cohasset.

In overtime Doug Ellinger hit a jumper from the right side and gave Cohasset a 74-72 lead. These would be the only points for Cohasset in overtime; Carver would score the next six points and take the win, 78-74.

"This is the greatest game this team could have played without three starters," coach Arnie Reppucci said. Cohasset was missing starting center Kevin Bishop and the two starting guards, Joe Andrae and Kywon Edwards. The remaining players picked up the slack and almost came away with a win.

Joe Clemens, who scored 12 of Cohasset's 24 points in the waning five minutes of the game, did damage in the low post and finished with 17 points and 13 rebounds. Freshman forward Dorian Bryant had a more than impressive game, grabbing 10 rebounds and scoring 11. Regular starters Sheldon Morgan had 16 and Paul Bilodeau scored 14 for Cohasset.

The turning point for Carver came with 17 seconds left in the first half. Cohasset was leading 29-28 and two turnovers turned their one-point lead into a four-point deficit. Carver scored on a layup and a 65-foot luckball by Carver's Jon Holmes.

Hockey team iced in 1st period

By Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

Coach Dennis Walsh remains optimistic despite Cohasset's 11-1 loss against Hanover last Saturday.

"It's good to see a team like Hanover. It gives you something to shoot for," Walsh said. "They're definitely the team to beat, even more so than Hingham."

Hanover scored eight times in the first period and never looked back. Cohasset's only goal came from senior forward John Murphy early in the second period, with an assist from senior defenseman Kevin Murphy.

Cohasset suffered while Hanover simply controlled the puck and had nearly three times as many shots on goal. Hanover's last goal, with seven seconds left in the game, was the proverbial icing on the cake.

The Skippers on Ice are now 2-3, having won against Hull and Weymouth Catholic earlier in the season. Walsh thinks the wins will come with more experience.

"New Bedford and Rockland were close games," Walsh said. "Our team is spread out when it comes to experience; some can play, but others just haven't played enough hockey. It'll happen."

Cohasset played Scituate yesterday, and they'll face Abington at home this Saturday at 7:40 p.m. Cohasset's "home" ice is in Hingham – "behind Bertucci's."

Varsity gymnastic squad

The following girls made the 1991-92 season of Varsity Gymnastics: Senior Captain, Erin Sutherland; Junior Captain, Tara Gallagher; Junior, Nicole Haefner; Sophomore, Marnie DeMichele and Kara Protulis. Junior High Students: Tafana Fiore, Caroline DeLima, Megan Pratt, Erica Hettstrom, Julie Smith, Jodi Colwill and Managers Megan Fahey and Katie Medinger.

Coach Ruthann Sargent. Congratulations girls and good luck this season.

Roller coaster season

Consisting of one senior, two juniors, two sophomores, and six junior high students, CHS Gymnastics Coach Ruthann Sargent had a young group but positive outlook for the season of 1991-92.

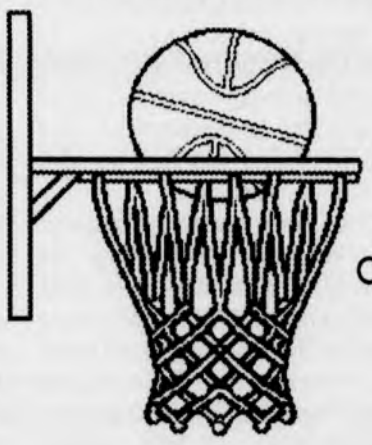
However, since the season began about a month ago, Cohasset has had its ups and downs. Top two All Arounds Tara Gallagher and Marnie DeMichele have both been fighting off injuries. Gallagher has been participating on only two events because of a serious elbow injury. And teammate DeMichele has been participating on only two events because of a back injury.

Sophomore Kara Protulis is out for most of the season after dismounting off the balance beam at a recent competition and tearing ligaments in her ankle. Teammate Nicole Haefner has also been out with a back injury.

Due to the amount of injuries with only a small number of participants Cohasset has to rely on Senior Erin Sutherland and apply a little pressure on the youthful but enthusiastic junior high gymnasts.

"This year and next will be a rebuilding season for Cohasset" Sargent said.

"One good thing is that the younger girls are gaining a lot of optional experience. These girls are getting out on two, or three events each meet. If the other girls were all injury-free most of them would only get up on one or two events."



At the first meet against Scituate, Cohasset scored a 98.50 to Scituate's 130.0.

"Frankly, I was so proud of the girls. We did not have a full lineup and had to rely on the younger gymnasts for scores, and they did okay. I would have thought we would have scored the same with the full lineup," Coach Sargent said.

At meet number two Cohasset ventured out to Carver High School with less of a lineup than the last meet and was still able to score 95.90. Vaulting was our biggest problem. So many gymnasts get mental blocks about the horse and Cohasset is not the only one having this problem.

"Cohasset has some real promising gymnasts coming up 8th grader Tafana Fiore has matured so much since last year and is much more confident with herself," said Coach Sargent. "Seventh grader Megan Pratt from the Center has mega talent and will be competing in the all around spot due to the injuries. Jodi Colwill another seventh grader is working real hard. She seems to excel more on the vault but can be put on any event where there is an open spot. Erica Hettstrom and teammate Julie Smith are also going to be good high school gymnasts like Colwill they can be put just about anywhere if they are needed. Just recently coming back on the scene is Caroline DeLima, an eighth grader. We need her on the horse and bars mostly.

"This year I noticed that the seventh and eighth graders coming on are good all around gymnasts. Most girls are usually only strong on one or two events. Most of these girls can be put anywhere. I believe this is due to the training all year round at their private gym, The Cohasset Center, and Compulsory routines.

Explaining the real meaning of 'no'

Before the Christmas school vacation the students at Cohasset high school had the chance to sit an assembly on date rape.

We think the school officials and community groups responsible for the program deserve a vote of thanks. They gave the young people of the high school a wonderful gift — the gift of honest communication, which is certainly a gift of love.

The Social Service League and the PSO paid for the assembly. The two agencies also paid the cost of a simple, but durable, handout on safe dating that was given to everyone at the assembly.

The Tufts University Players — four actors who care about the issue — performed a skit on the auditorium stage. A sofa was the primary piece of stage furniture.

It was the first time the Tufts Players had ever performed for a high school audience. The group got started in response to a problem of campus rape at Tufts. All four of the players — two women and two men, students and former students at Tufts — said they decided to get involved after a friend was raped.

The story opened with two young people planning a date. They were clearly interested in each other.

The pair separate. She talks to a girlfriend. He talks to a male friend of his own.

The scene moves to the date, a party. He brings her a beer she said she didn't want. But she accepts it anyway. (Later one of the players explains that if someone doesn't seem to think you mean no when you say you don't want a drink, you should worry about whether you are able to communicate with each other. Certainly, a worthwhile piece of advice.)

The couple decides to go to his place to listen to a record album.

She kisses him as they talk. He comes on more. She says no. He keeps trying.

The stage lights darken.

He says: Trust me. She says: No.

In the shadows, the couple seem to struggle.

The lights come up and the young woman bursts in on her girlfriend, who seems to be on a date of her own.

The young woman is distraught and jumps at being touched. Her friend gets rid of her date and they talk.

The young woman doesn't want to talk but her friend, who guesses what's happened anyway, pushes for more information.

In the aftermath, the young woman shows her turmoil and emotional pain. The young man denies he did anything wrong — he denies a rape ever happened. He talks about how they were having a good time, that it was a special evening.

The program might not have been great drama but it was certainly thought provoking.

The ensuing discussion between the actors and the high school students proved it.

Michael Gill, the school system's health coordinator, is to be congratulated for having the good sense to bring up sensitive issues. He should also be congratulated for bringing the issues up in a sensitive way.

Chamber chatter

By Paula Knowles
Cohasset Chamber of Commerce

My daughter got her license two weeks ago (thank you all for your sympathy) and I was reminded once again why I have my insurance policies with agents here in Cohasset. Years ago – what actually seems like centuries ago – we were having trouble getting in touch with our insurance agent in Hingham. He wasn't avoiding us; he was just always too busy to get back to us when we needed advice or an opinion. He was right on our doorstep come renewal time, of course; but it was getting harder and harder to reach him during the year. We had recently joined the Chamber of Commerce here in town, and had heard Bob Martin of Goodale Insurance speaking about how service-oriented local businesses had to be to compete. So, in desperation, we decided to see if his actions matched his fine words. Well, needless to say, they did – and more.

The personal service that had been missing from our other agent, the attempts to save us money on unnecessary coverage, the care and concern that impressed us at the start is still there. In fact, as he has gotten to know our needs better, he has saved us even more money, and found us coverage that protects us even better. Don Harrold has saved us an enormous amount of money and frustration on our health insurance plan, and Ernie Grassie has been outstanding with his accounting and tax preparation for us personally as well as in our business.

These are just a few of the service-oriented businesses that are waiting to serve you, right here in Cohasset. Your local merchants and business people offer you more than just good work and competitive prices – although they do offer you all of that – they offer you a personal service that just can't be beaten. They will take the time to get to know you, your family, your needs, and will offer advice and counsel whenever you need it. I don't want to sound like a bad commercial, but as syrupy as it sounds, it is true. It makes good sense financially to do business with your local people. They know you as a bigger concern outside of the community cannot, and they will gladly tailor their services to your individual needs. Even branch offices located in town will give you more personal service. Stores, banks, real estate offices – the people who work in them are your friends and neighbors. They have a stake in your satisfaction! And they are always willing to go that extra step to make sure you are receiving the service you deserve.

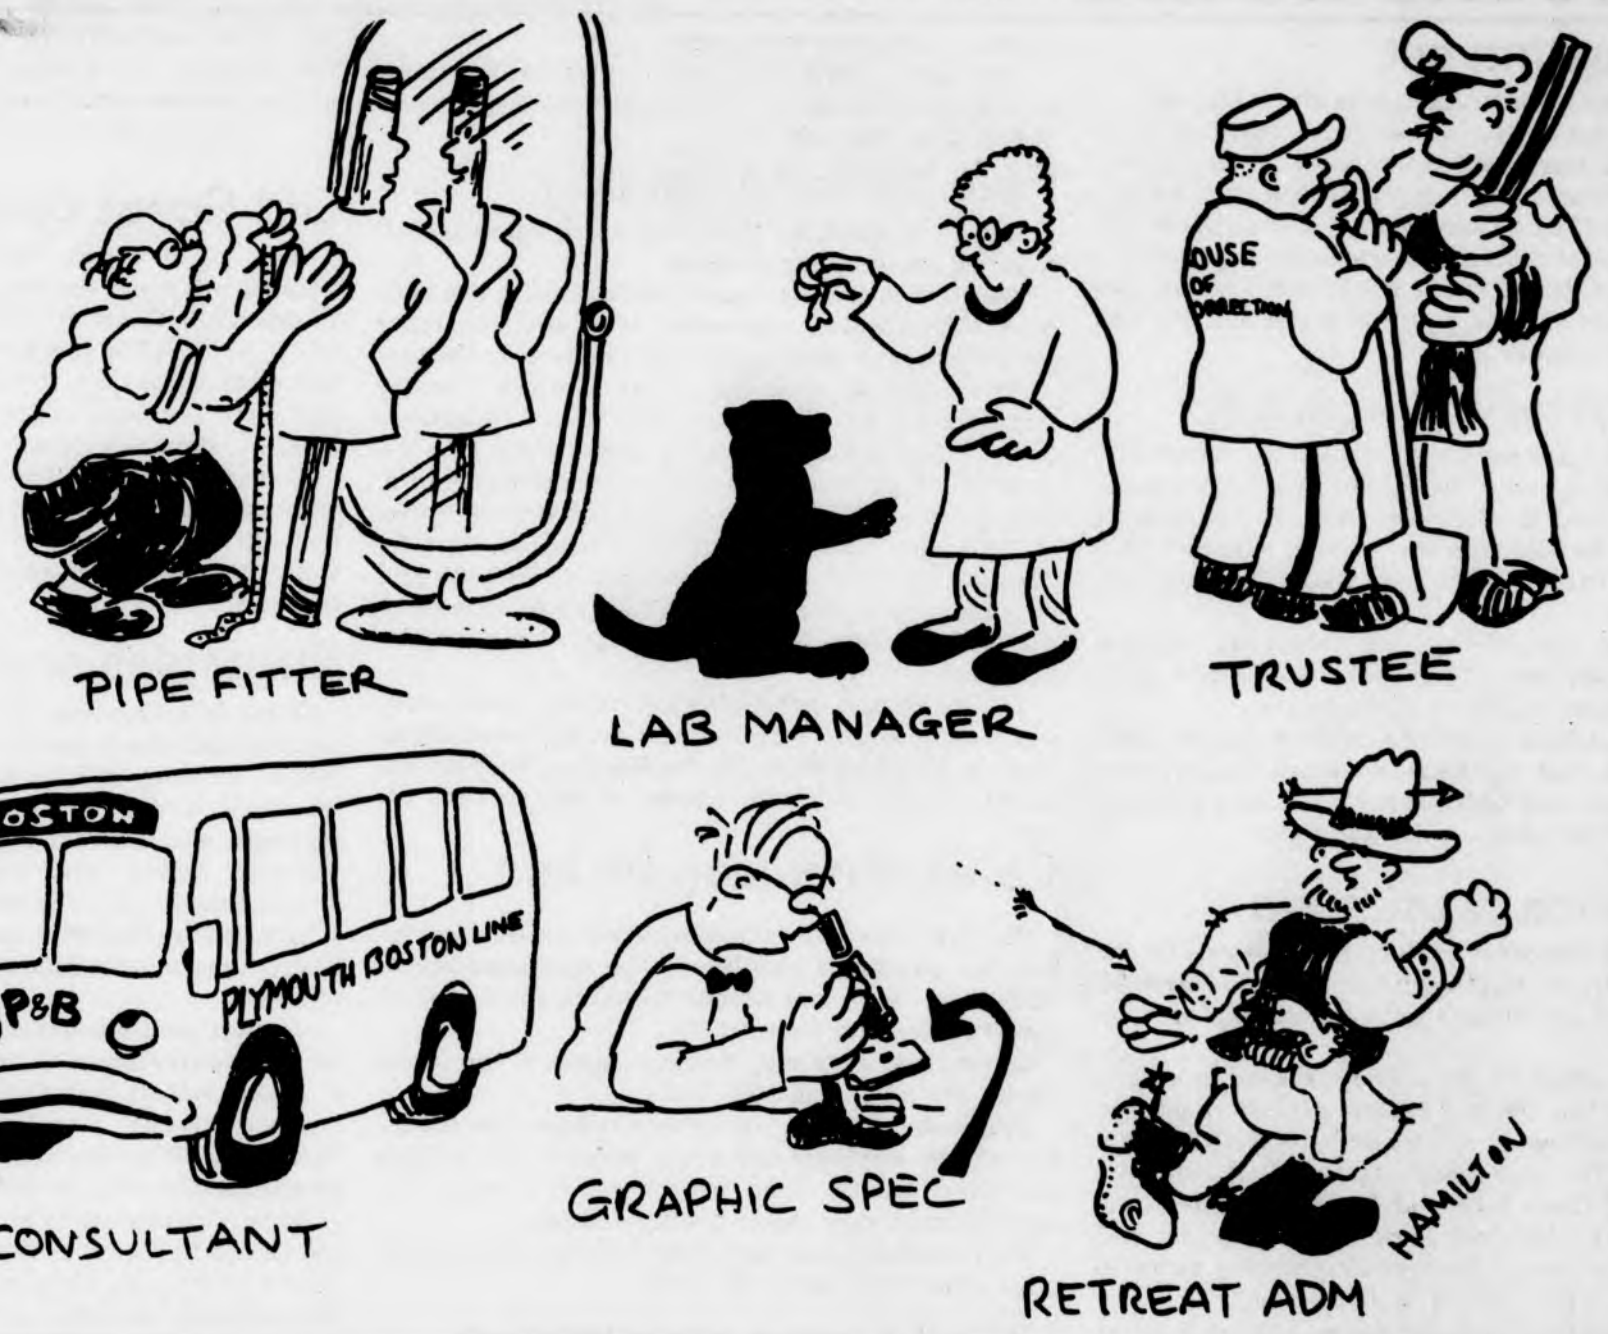
When that insurance comes due, tax time creeps up, you need a CD or savings bond for that christening or birthday; when you are thinking of remodeling that kitchen, adding a porch or sunroom, or rewiring or replumbing that "fixer-upper" you just bought; when the paint is peeling or the septic system fails – go to your local merchant, businessman, contractor or tradesman for help or a quote. Give Cohasset a chance. You may never go out of town again!

Provision of opportunity for youth

By John Worley
Recreation Director

Cohasset has an exceptionally high level of children and youth participating in numerous sports programs designed for ages 4 to 18.

While some reasons for the high level of participation remain obscure and difficult to isolate, other factors are more apparent and more identifiable. Both singularly and collectively, these factors are catalytic to the strong response of our children/youth towards involvement in sports programming.



Children have a natural inclination to engage in activity; be it highly structured, or loosely organized, seems to be immaterial. Their level of energy remains high, as does their curiosity to explore. Generally speaking, children do not suffer from the inhibitions that we, as adults are often influenced by. While children tend to develop strong preferences towards specific sports/activities, they also remain open-minded to exposure to new, different and unfamiliar activities.

The psychology of play is, of course, more complex than just these factors and includes a number of principles and theories. However, there are also some vital and essential external factors relative to the determination of participation levels among children and youth. As a pre-requisite to levels of participation there must be provisions of access and opportunity made available to children and youth, regarding pursuits of leisure time activities. This one factor alone, indeed stands paramount to all other external factors involved.

The Cohasset Recreation Commission has been providing access and opportunity to leisure pursuits, for all residents for the past 15 years. Our services are not just sports programs, rather they reflect a wider base of interests and ages than sports alone. Children and Youth Programs include a number of sport programs and much effort has been applied to this particular area of programming.

While participants of sports programs reap the immediate benefits of participating, it may be that the longer term benefits are just as important. Through continuous exposure and access to these sorts of opportunities, children learn to recreate. That is, they are developing and learning the habit of seeking leisure-pursuits via reinforced opportunities, to a variety of activities. It may be true that as a species, we have an inherent desire to seek play, however, the ability to gratify and satisfy this tendency remains incumbent upon provisions of access.

The general philosophy of recreation includes the provision of access and opportunity to all residents, at all times. This basic and primary responsibility of public recreation can often be more difficult to maintain than it might at first seem. Further, recreational sports are for all children/youth, regardless of capability. Sport for the sake of the sport—sport for fun and exercise—sport as exposure to opportunity—through specific program modifications and adaptations of design and delivery, sports programs can be offered to very young children beginning at age 4 in many cases. It becomes more understandable as to why Cohasset's youth are highly involved in these programs when some of the factors are identified. The presumption is that once developed through reinforced exposure and learning, the habit of recreating, will last a lifetime and only the content of exact leisure pursuit may change, as interests and abilities might vary.

The Cohasset Board of Registrars periodically issues a publication of residents which, among other things, lists their occupations - several of which are illustrated here.

It's not regionalization – it's a Fire Army

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Political Columnist

• We hear Habitat has put out a fund-raising letter on behalf of the Bates building, so it looks like there's some movement on the building.

Selectmen don't share a lot with us these days. On the other hand, Habitat has had a private line to Emerald City for some time, with selectmen trying to keep their loving correspondence covert.

• Officially, no one is running for selectman. But here is a list of persons, some of whom are strongly considering a run, while still others may have no intention at all:

Conservation Commission Chairman Merle Brown, Government Structure Chairman Roy Fitzsimmons, Finance Committee Member Wayne Sawchuk; Board of Health Member Michael Sullivan; Cable TV Political Commentator Wig Pierson; Water Commission Chairman Ron Goodwin; Recreation Commission Chairman Richard Barrow; Former Advisory Committee Chairman Arne Gjesteby.

• Eight letters to the board of selectmen and an unknown number of phone calls on behalf of Cohasset Imports have to be a record high for this time of year.

Jim Hamilton of King Street wrote:

"He sells used mid-priced foreign cars at a fair profit and backs up his cars with extended warranties which he honors without the usual hassle many of us have encountered when visiting dealers after the sale."

Surrey Drive's George Ellinger says:

"I do not know or care about the details involved. The broader issue is the attitude that our town takes with respect to business. Is there going to be a hostile or supportive environment?

"Not only do we need the broader business tax base – the town needs more concerned ventures that are run with a community conscience, such as is the case with Mr. Capozzoli. He supports many charitable groups in town without hesitating.

"After all, it is not as if his business is situated on Jerusalem Road. Route 3A is a natural commercial thoroughfare that we should all seek to enlarge. If we limit anyone's capacity to grow, we hurt ourselves in the process," Ellinger concluded.

Scituate's Lynn Bates and Hingham's Pamela Troy Stone also wrote in support of Cohasset Imports.

Robert Garvey of Cohasset said: "Cohasset Imports is tidily run and a credit to the Cohasset business community from this consumer citizen's viewpoint. If there be a just and reasonable cause to deny Peter's (owner Peter Capozzoli) license renewal, it certainly isn't apparent to me." (Nor me, Bob).

From Seymour, CT, former resident John S. Colocousis wrote: "Peter is not only a good business person, but also a good family man."

Cohasset's Chris Abbruzzese said: "I strongly urge that you act now to review Peter Capozzoli's license to operate Cohasset Imports."

John Timmers of Scituate said: "The building, with its window flower boxes and flower garden and the presentation of vehicles, along with the cleanliness, projects a very friendly and professional picture for the community."

Selectmen met Jan. 6 on whether to allow Cohasset Imports to operate under its own license pending the resolution of legal issues, but Jan. 6 is a little late in the game, considering Peter's license ran out Jan. 1. This vote should have been taken Dec. 16. Why wasn't it?

Selectmen should be reminded that it's hard to collect taxes from empty storefronts.

• In better news, William J. Salisbury, chairman of the government study committee in Hingham, has written to our government structure committee with regard to the creation of a regional school district, an article which he said Hingham and hopefully other towns will have on their April Town Meeting warrants.

Government Structure Chairman Roy Fitzsimmons informed our school committee of the letter this week.

Apparently, Hingham's new school superintendent has a strong regional background and empty schools to fill. It will be interesting to see if the school committee shows any curiosity, considering regionalization to be a red herring. Will this fall by the wayside, as did Scituate's offer to share a fire chief?

An article in a Sunday newspaper said six towns (including Cohasset) were weighing the unifying of their fire departments, but that "the main reason to combine departments would be to make operations more effective and not to save money." And there would be no layoffs, and no station closings.

They said there might be some savings, but this would happen only after years and years of study and negotiation. And of course we'd keep all the chiefs. Surely. We wouldn't want any mistakes.

None of this sounds like regionalization. This sounds like the creation of a Fire Army.

The selectmen could have privatized the ambulance last year, could have reduced the fire department running card, could have trained some call fire fighters in anticipation of a nasty 1992. But no. They sowed no seeds in 1991.

Nor did they get around to trimming the Christmas tree they never erected.

Storm damage results

To the Editor:

Thank you.

The Cohasset Conservation Commission would like to thank the homeowner's along the coast who received damage during the Halloween storm. This was a time of tragedy for coastal residents.

The land along the coast is under the jurisdiction of the Department of Environmental Protection (D.E.P.) Wetlands Protection Act, Chapter 131, section 40, the Cohasset Conservation Commission (C.C.C.), Wetlands Bylaw.

The D.E.P. allowed work under the state regulations to be done without going through the standard hearing process. This emergency act helped homeowners along the coastline to bring their property back to pre-storm condition if there was less than 50 percent damage. The requirement was to send a letter to D.E.P. and the C.C.C. explaining the damage and the proposed work to be done to restore the property. The C.C.C. reviewed the letters and either requested the homeowners to attend a meeting or would be sent a letter explaining the requirements under the emergency act.

The Commission sent letters explaining the Emergency Act to all homeowners along the coast; from Border Street to the end of Jerusalem Road and all the Clothesline project increases awareness about sexual violence

By Deirdre Galvin
Mariner staff

Two women, both survivors of incest, have formed a Plymouth and Brockton chapter of the Clothesline Project - an idea that started on Cape Cod and is starting to catch on throughout the country.

The group invites women to create t-shirts depicting their experiences with sexual violence and donate them to the project, which then displays them on clotheslines at periodic rallies.

A color code is used to dramatize the effect, with red for rape survivors, yellow and brown for women who have been battered, and blue or green for incest survivors. The white t-shirts, made by friends or family members, are used to memorialize women who have died as a result of violence. For the most part, only first names are used. Many include the date of an attack; some include the first name of the perpetrator. All include powerful thoughts and statements centered on the suffering that has occurred as well as the ways in which healing has begun.

The purpose of the Clothesline Project, according to their brochure, is to "demonstrate the extent of the problem of violence against women using a visual impact similar to the AIDS quilt or the Vietnam Wall." The effort is also meant to help with the healing process for those who have lost a loved one or who are survivors of violence.

The newly formed Plymouth/Brockton group met for the first time Nov. 20 in the Bryantville United Methodist Church. While response was limited, they are pushing forward with plans to attend an awareness event next month and are hoping people will gradually join the cause.

"This project is a real validation for women who have suffered abuse. They feel they're doing something, by speaking out in a way. They also realize they're not alone," said Susan Chandel of Hanson.

"We need to empower ourselves, and this is one way to do it," added Myrna Westgate of Brockton, who is co-organizer with Chandel. "One of the keys to healing is naming the perpetrator, but the law doesn't allow us this unless the person was convicted."

She was sexually assaulted by her stepfather over an 11-year period, and feels one of the obstacles to recovery is the fact the courts fail to address such cases.

Westgate says it took her 20 years to come to terms with the abuse she had suffered as a child. Many victims bury the experience for years, and eventually suffer post traumatic stress syndrome. Symptoms related to this include long term depression, poor self-esteem and isolation.

Chandel agrees that the court system is failing women who have been abused or raped.

"Too often the perpetrator is allowed to go back into the home, as long as he's getting counseling," Chandel said. But so many are never cured; their behavior doesn't stop."

Chandel also believes police and court officials tend to take the side of the men. However, she believes the reason for this is complicated and cannot be explained by sexist attitudes alone. "Often they (the perpetrators) come across as very charming, so they get off the charges. They come off looking a lot better than the victim, usually a woman, who's hysterical and angry because of what is happening. They're easier to deal with than the victim - but wouldn't you expect that?"

This situation is true in cases of wife abuse as well as child abuse, Westgate adds. "If you've been abused since you were three years old, and now you're 15, you're not going to be the most together person," she says.

Westgate believes three things must happen to stem the rising tide of violence against women. In Massachusetts one woman every 22 days is killed by her husband or partner.

"First, we have to treat abusers like criminals instead of trying so hard to keep families together. Second, women must get angry and act to help others and give financial support to groups that fight abuse. And last, we need to have more counselling available."

Chandel says the courts are beginning to change, but progress is slow. "Someone who commits family abuse should be treated the same as a stranger doing the same thing," she said. "Too often, signs of trouble are ignored because it's a 'family matter."

Both agree that increasing the public's awareness about the epidemic of violence against women will be essential to any change. And that's what Project Clothesline is all about.

On Oct. 14 in Hyannis, the Cape Cod project displayed 170 t-shirts in the town common for a daylong 'Take Back the Night' rally. Included were nine shirts from the newly formed Plymouth and Brockton chapter, representing the group's official inaugaration.

On Oct. 28, the same clothesline was brought to the State House. Governor Weld attended the rally and listened to a proclamation read by the Cape Cod Women's Agenda, the organization that first initiated Project Clothesline.

Other Project Clotheslines have been formed in New Hampshire, California, Oregon, Kansas, Illinois and Pennsylvania.

According to Westgate and Chandel, viewing the display of t-shirts helps people see the violence on a more individualized level.

In Hyannis, where over 400 people turned out, some viewers were overwhelmed and broke down in tears, while others expressed anger. Still others were afraid to come close enough to the shirts to read them. Westgate says men especially seemed hesitant to approach.

The messages printed on the shirts - written in the victim's handwriting in most cases - certainly have more of an impact than statistics.

One, designed by a woman who was raped, depicts a broken heart, with the words: New Year's Eve 1980, and signed by 'Denise, 1991.'

Another, designed by an incest survivor, has the message: "Break the cycle now. Incest kills innocence...children...love."

For more information about the Plymouth and Brockton chapter, call (508) 586-2320 or write: Plymouth and Brockton Clothesline Project, P.O. Box 327, Hanson, 02341.

streets and lanes in between. This major undertaking was completed by our secretary after many hours of researching the names and addresses of homeowners. The cooperation of the homeowners working with the commission is especially mentioned due to the stress that all parties were under because of the storm and this busy time of year. We would also like to thank our secretary, Pat Walsh, for all her efforts throughout this time. There were times when three to four people were in the office looking for answers and the telephone was ringing off the hook. With Pat's assistance, our jobs were made easier.

I would also like to thank all the commissioners for all your hard work and efforts throughout this time. I look forward to working with you in the challenging times ahead.

Lady Skippers lose good game to Carver, 45-37

By Tad Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset girls' hoop team came close to ending their three-game losing streak Friday night in Carver. The Skippers had the lead down to five points with three minutes left in the contest when they dug in on defense and created a host of turnovers. However, the girls failed to capitalize on them, costing them the game.

Guards Erin Murphy and Becky Golden lead Cohasset with eight a piece. Junior Jen Knowles had six along with Melinda Johnson and Kate Carrol.

Despite the loss, coach Laureen White is pleased with the steady improvement of the team. "We're just a very inexperienced team right now," White said. Cohasset's starting five consists of two freshmen and one sophomore.

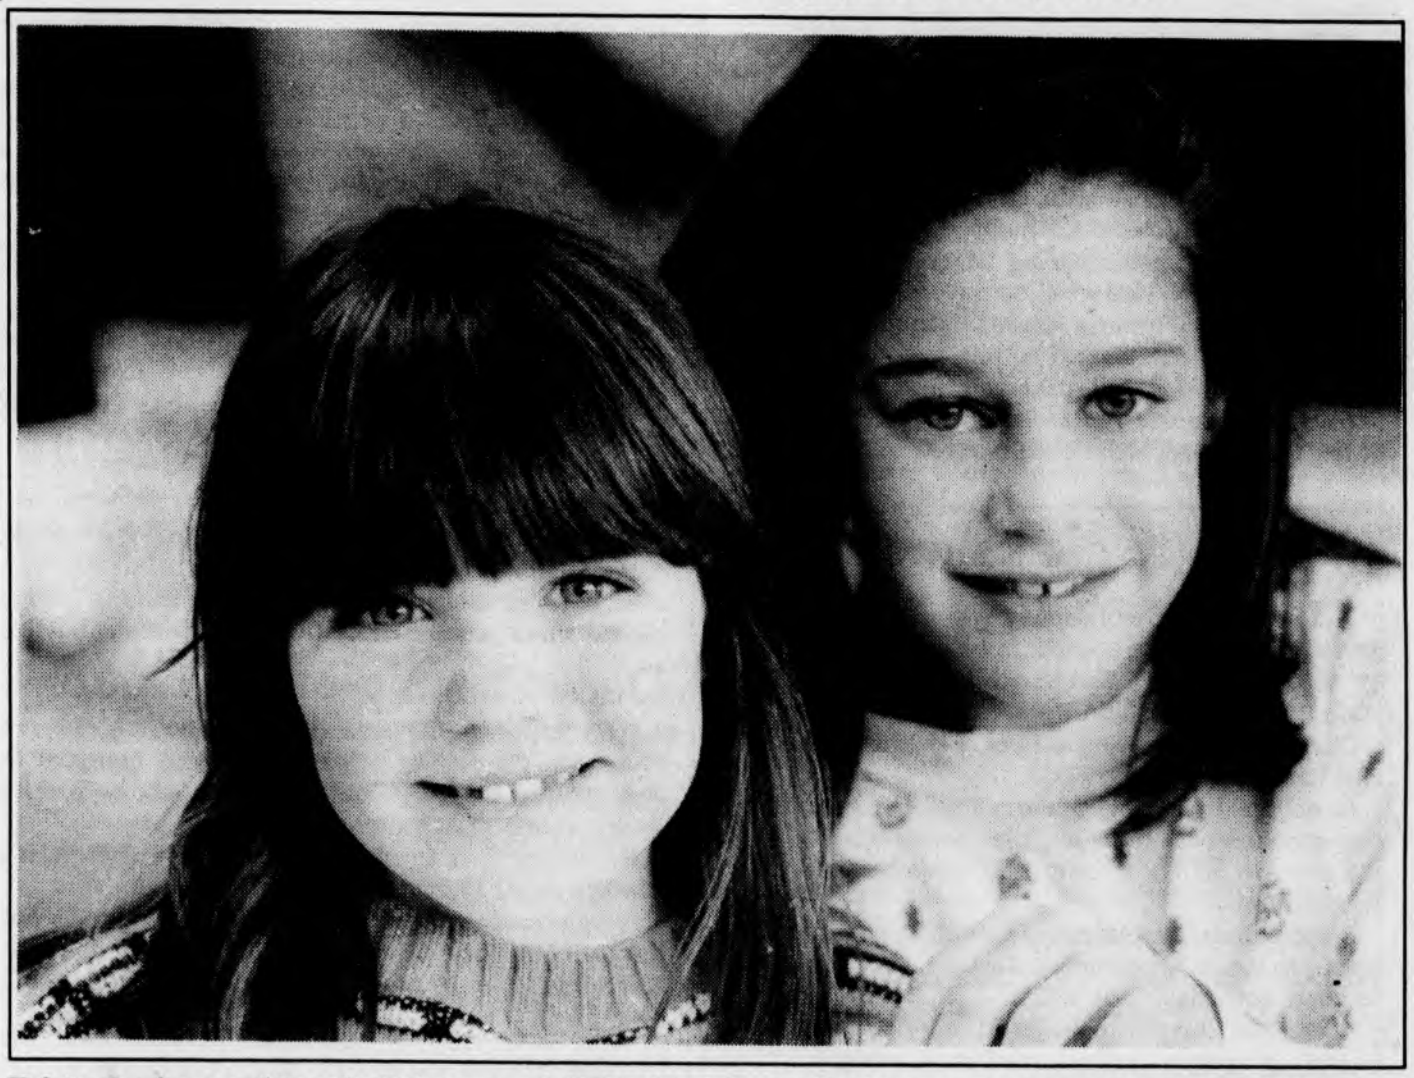
Cohasset showed poise after falling apart early, trailing by six after being down 16.

Margie Murphy scores

Senior Margie Murphy of Cohasset shot the winning two-pointer for the Salem State Lady Vikings in a holiday tournament last weekend at St. Joseph's College in North Windham, Maine.

Murphy, who graduated from Cohasset High School in 1988, has been playing for the Lady Vikings for four years, mostly as a guard, according to Coach Tim Shea.

In overtime, the team was down four point with 13 seconds remaining when one player rebounded and hit a three-point shot, Shea said. The opponent went to the foul line and the player missed.



Salem State rebounded and Margie ran the length of the court, shooting a 15-foot jumper at the buzzer, giving Salem State the 81-80 victory.

St. Joseph's was ranked fifth in New England.

The night before, Salem State beat third-ranked Clark University by a score of 68 to 60.

Murphy, who is only 5 feet 8 inches tall, scored 10 points in the final game, with eight rebounds and four assists; against Clark, she had 13 points with seven rebounds.

"She has been the most consistent player this season in our first 10 games," said Shea. The team record is 4-6.

KristenLavigne and Brooke Baker were delighted to take part in the vacation program at Deer Hill School last week. The program is sponsored by recreation.

from the state house

By Robert Hedlund
State Senator

Nov. 6 was bill filing deadline for Massachusetts' State Legislators. All bills that a legislator puts forward for the 1992 calendar session had to be in the hands of the Clerk that day. A Legislative agenda usually reflects the priorities and philosophy of the particular elected official.

I have sponsored approximately 20 pieces of legislation and have co-sponsored several others. Much of my legislative agenda is focused on tax relief, political reform and increased checks on government spending. Progress on all these fronts are essential to the economic revitalization of Massachusetts.

It is my continued belief that we must be assertive in redefining and restructuring State government. We must allow Massachusetts' taxpayers to keep more of their money. Citizens and businesses must be encouraged to invest and initiate new enterprises. I have sponsored a bill that will provide a $50,000 exemption from the Massachusetts Capital Gains tax. This grants citizens the ability to retain personal gain and encourages investment without being an open-ended formula which could be a tax break for the very wealthy. Another bill would increase the exemption on the Massachusetts' Estate tax (currently one of the highest in the nation) by adopting federal standards. The federal level provides greater protection from this death tax. This change should also encourage people to maintain their Massachusetts residence.

The state also needs to continue to target non-essential expenditures. I hope to establish a commission to approve certain new salaries above a certain level. I also have a bill to eliminate free tuition for certain state workers who attend state colleges. This benefit is outrageous when compared to the hard work that so many citizens must engage in to afford ever-increasing tuition and taxes to pay for these colleges.

I have filed a bill to eliminate pensions for elected officials who are elected in November of 1994 or thereafter. There should not be any financial incentive to being a career politician. Secondarily, this bill would relieve the Commonwealth of a continued fiscal obligation in the future and help to restore the concept of "public service."

Other reform bills I have filed would place certain restrictions on lobbyist and PAC contributions to state legislators. Augmenting these initiatives are bills I am co-sponsoring to further reform the Rules of the Massachusetts' Senate, and one bill which would prohibit convicted government workers from receiving government benefits. If a person has illegally utilized his position as a public employee, he does not deserve benefits paid for by the taxpayers whom he ill served.

Locally, I have filed a bill which would exempt several communities in our district who do not receive direct MBTA service from MBTA assessments. I will also continue to pursue the many local initiatives begun in 1991, and will work for a fair and equitable distribution of local aid.

The initiatives are examples of bills I have filed. I believe that passage of my legislative package will make Massachusetts state government more accountable, efficient and fairer to the working taxpayers of the Commonwealth. If you would like further information on any of the above-mentioned bills, or on any other matter, please feel free to call my office at 722-1646 or my district number at 740-4920.

Arts group seeks entries

The North River Arts Society is seeking entries for its fifth annual members' show to be held Feb. 7 through 27 at the society's headquarters at G.A.R. Hall, Old Main Street, Marshfield Hills Village.

Chairmen for the event are Peggy Bruno of Marshfield and Pat Gray of Norwell.

Although there is no entry fee, artists must be current members to be eligible.

Dues are $10 annually and may be paid during registration.

Registration/dropoff dates for delivery of artwork are from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 22, and from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, Jan. 25.

Acceptable media include oil, acrylics, watercolor, pastel, graphics, mixed media, photography and sculpture.

All work must be ready for exhibition; pieces to be hung must be wried, and sculpture must be accompanied by a pedestal.

Only one entry per artist may be submitted, and work should not have been exhibited in previous NRAS shows.

Prizes will be awarded: Best in Show, ›100; six Awards of Excellence, $50 each; and Honorable Mention ribbons.

Should the jurors determine there are not sufficient entries in a category, a prize will not be awarded. In addition, a popular vote will be tallied and a prize will be awarded.

Jurors will include Lois Griffel, a classical impressionist and director of the Cape Cod School of Art; Jan Selman, who specializes in pastels and was featured in American Artist magazine; and Elizabeth Pratt, a Copley artist and a member of the New England Watercolor Society.

For more information, call Kate Norton at 837-8091 between 9 a.m. and noon Tuesday through Friday.

The exhibit will be noon to 3 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, Feb. 7 to 27.

In case of inclement weather, the exhibit will be closed when Marshfield public schools are cancelled.

Democrats plan seminar

Only five of the 17 legislators representing voters in Plymouth County are Democrats, and many of the Republicans were not challenged in 1990, accordin to Jack LaLond of Abington.

He wants that to change. LaLond is chairman of Challenge '92 Plymouth County.

A grass roots group of Democrats has planned a half-day forum to be held Saturday, Jan. 11, at the Plymouth Sheraton Hotel to recruit Democratic challengers to run against incumbent Republicans.

Seminars on organizing a campaign, getting out a message, fund raising and wise spending will be held.

In addition, a district-by-district networking session is planned for Democrats to meet others in their district informally.

"We will be trying to reach potential candidates and people who would be willing to help Democrats get elected," said LaLond.

"The focus of the sessions will be on the nuts and bolts of getting elected."

All Democrats are invited and encouraged to register in advance by writing to Challenge '92 Plymouth County, P.O. Box 85, Abington 02351, or calling Jack LaLond at 871-8907 or faxing a response to 878-5119.

Children may register for as many programs as they wish that are age-appropriate.

The School Department operates a day-care program, at Deer Hill School daily, from right after school until 6 p.m. Should you desire day-care prior to recreation programs, until 3:30 p.m., or after the conclusion of recreation programs, until 6 p.m., you may register for day-care, on an hourly rate basis. Day-care registration forms are at Osgood, Deer Hill and the Recreation Offices.

To register for after school recreation programs, please complete the registration form calculate your fee, make checks payable to: Town of Cohasset, and drop off or mail to Cohasset Recreation Department, 41 Highland Avenue, Town Hall, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Programs are six weeks, meeting each day according to schedule, unless school is cancelled due to inclement weather. Programs begin the week of Monday, Jan. 27, and do not meet during the week of February school vacation, but continue through the week of Monday, March 9.

Dog Obedience Classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for Beginner and Intermediate Dog Training Classes to be taught by Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held Tuesday evenings, at the G.A.R. Hall, Scituate, beginning Tuesday, Jan. 21.

Beginner classes will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and the Intermediate Advanced class will be from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., both on Tuesday evenings. The fee for the eight-week program will be $40. Checks made payable to the Town of Cohasset, may be brought to the first class. Participating dogs should be a minimum of three months of age. The purpose of the Beginner classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered are proper use of voice corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on ownership and responsibility will also be included. The training will include those exercises beneficial to pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience. The Intermediate-Advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department Beginner Class. For the above classes, owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutely no spike collars allowed. It is also suggested that the handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for this session. To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791.

Furniture Restoration

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a furniture restoration-refinishing-revitalization class, to be taught by Kenneth Sargent of Cohasset Country Workshop, by calling the recreation office at 383-6791.

Sessions are five weeks long, meeting on Wednesday, or Saturday mornings, 9 to 11 a.m. The fee for this ten-hour program is $53 per person, and classes are restricted in size to allow for individual attention.

Participants should select a piece of furniture that is relatively portable, for class work. A chair or small table is ideal. Participants will not only learn the arts involved with restoration and refinishing, but will also have a completed piece of furniture by the end of the session.

Sargent has been a professional refinisher for a number of years in Cohasset, and has taught the art of restoration and refinishing to a number of classes over the years.

Participants will be required to bring some supplies with them to class. When you call to register, please indicate what piece of furniture you will be bringing to class.

The session is scheduled to begin Wednesday, Jan. 15 and Saturday, Jan. 18.

Cohasset Heights landfill plan calls for tons more trash

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The new — and two inch thick — version of the Environmental Impact Report for the expansion plan of Cohasset Heights Landfill, CHL, changes the plan somewhat.

The new plan would up the tonnage allowed per day at the facility from 299 tons to 500 tons. Another 300 tons would be accepted at the recycling facility and another 100 tons at the processing operation — the stockpiling and separation area.

The present landfill area would expand into 27.5 acres, 14.2 of which would actually be used for the landfill. The older version called for actual use of 15 acres.

The expanded facility would fill to capacity by the year 2000, according to the draft which is on file at town hall and at the Paul Pratt Library.

Calls placed to Paul Barry, one of the owners and the man who operates CHL, about the landfill were not returned. CHL is owned by a limited partnership including John and Paul Barry. The operation was purchased in 1983 by CHL from James Tyeryar, who operated a dump.

Since 1987, CHL has been prohibited by the board of health from accepting general refuse — only construction and demolition materials are allowed.

$5.68 million is bottom line as

School budget rises slightly

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The school committee began work on a proposed $5.68 million budget for fiscal 1993. The budget represents slightly more than a one percent increase over the current level.

The bulk of the increase is required for contracted step raises for staff salaries and a $20,000 request for a computer writing laboratory.

No regular increases are included in the proposed budget although the school system is currently engaged in collective bargaining negotiations. School officials would not comment on the negotiations, but Superintendent Stephen Hart said for every one percent of a negotiated pay raise would add $40,000 to $50,000 to the budget.

Although historically teachers had been receiving raises in the range of five to six percent per year, they received no raise for the current fiscal year.

Hart told the committee to assume any salary increase would require an override of Proposition 2 1/2. If the override failed, the school budget would have to be cut by the amount of the negotiated raise.

"With 80 percent of the budget going for salaries, it would be difficult to cut the budget without affecting personnel," he warned. "We already made substan-

Franny Marks retires - Cohasset is sad

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Political Correspondent

There were 100 politicians at the Sons of Italy Hall in Hingham last Saturday. One person said after eyeballing the crowd: "I think Franny Marks is the most brilliant politician in the town. Look at the strange assortment of people who came. Half of them detest one another!"

They were there to honor Frances Marks (nee Brady), married to retired Cohasset firefighter David Marks, mother of Christine Marks, Cheryl Fiori and Arlene Fiori (two Marks sisters married two Fiori brothers) and David Marks (king of the meat raffle). Grandmother to many, related to half the town.

Recreation Director Jack Worley served as master of ceremonies for the party, which was catered by the Borrowed Butler.

Franny's grandson, Paul Marks, gave the toast:

"My grandmother's been working longer than I've been alive. Good luck and live it up!" Paul said to Franny, who was lured to the hall via an invitation to attend a surprise 50th anniversary party for Ashley and Connie Jones (the real party's this November). Connie Jones was Fran's assistant town clerk for years before she retired, at which point her daughter, Marion Douglas, became Fran's assistant. Marion is now Acting Town Clerk.

(Just a note: long ago, when there was a Beechwood library, Connie Jones was its librarian.)

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray walked to the microphone to the tune of the Andy Griffeth's theme song. She was peeved that it wasn't the Marine corps hymn. She said, "I was disturbed when after the war David Marks married a girl from out of Cohasset."

David Marks reminded Murray that she had married out of town first.

"My dad always said people moved here because they loved the town, while we were just born here. He was right – we should always welcome newcomers," Murray said. Fran is a native of Brighton.

Murray pointed out that the party filled the hall, and that this was a great tribute. "You deserve everything. If they had gotten a bigger hall, that would have been filled, too."

She told Fran that she had never been an assistant town clerk in her eyes. "You did all the work anyway." Officially, Fran became the first woman to hold the elected office of town clerk in 1984. For 13 years before that she served as full

Our schools approached by Hingham for region

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

The Hingham school committee will ask town meeting voters to approve creation of a three-member committee to study the regionalizing of the schools.

Meanwhile Cohasset officials are just beginning to talk about the plan.

"I'm skeptical of the practicality of implementing a regional school, but it certainly makes sense to look into it," Mark Cullings, Hingham school committee chairman said Monday night.

Voters will be asked to approve a warrant article to allow the town moderator to appoint a regional school district planning committee, which will consist of at least one member from the school board. The committee approved the article at Monday night's school committee meeting.

"We should look into this, if for no other reason than the state aid formula to regional school districts is so favorable," Alexander Macmillan, member of the government study committee (GSC) said. In October, the GSC asked the school committee for its approval of a regional school study committee.

Ford nixes third term

When the spring election returns come in, the Cohasset school committee will change. Committee member Christopher Ford announced his decision not to seek a third term at Monday's meeting.

"Two terms, six years is a long time to serve," he told the committee. "It's been exciting, but there is so much talent out there, so many people interested.

"Everyone should serve their community in some way. I'm going to make room for them come next fall."

Rape program rapped

A local resident objected to a date rape prevention program offered at the junior-senior high school recently.

Owen O'Malley of 29 Sohier Street told the school committee he questioned the need for the program because date rape is not epidemic at the school. He expressed similar concerns about programs dealing with alcohol and drug abuse.

Referring to newspaper coverage of a play about date rape, O'Malley said, "All of a sudden, [the actor's] talking about safe sex. That, to me, isn't a decent thing to do to kids.

"The kids aren't asking for this," he continued. "It's a handful of adults bringing it in."

Committee chairman Barbara Bliss agreed that date rape was not a major problem at Cohasset high school, but supported the need for the program.

"If we are responsible for our young people, then these are subjects we must talk about," she told O'Malley.

O'Malley painted the date rape program as condoning sexual activity among teenagers. He specifically referred to a pamphlet containing the statement "safer sex is the only sane thing."

Health education director Michael Gill told O'Malley the statement was part of a list of possible responses to lines commonly used in dating situations. It was the suggested response to an assertion that safe sex "isn't the real thing."

Gill said it was the only reference in a list of 10 or more comments and responses that did not emphasize abstinence as the preferred course of action.

"We promote abstinence as our number one priority in dealing with both AIDS and pregnancy prevention," he said.

Gill also emphasized the date rape program was not a sex education program, but a safety program offered following concerns raised by students and the Social Service League.

Committee member Ralph Kidder responded to O'Malley's complaint about the lack of moral education in the school system by suggesting churches, parents and interested residents could get together to discuss how to teach moral education.

Committee okays regional options in education study

The school committee agreed to join Hingham in looking at regional options in education. The town government structure committee raised the issue in a letter to the school committee.

According to Superintendent Stephen Hart, the study group will explore regional programs, resources and "even a regional school district."

School committee member Nancy Sandell said Cohasset suggested a similar study a few years ago and found little interest among neighboring school districts. She suggested the regional solutions and options may find greater acceptance today because the districts are strapped for cash.

Committee member Ralph Kidder raised the possibility that regionalization may be a red herring issue.

"This is not a magical solution," he said. "It could very well cost us a lot more money."

Even if Cohasset could save money by regionalizing, the committee agreed saving money was not the sole criteria they would apply.

"We have very high standards," Chairman Barbara Bliss said.

Hart cautioned the committee to study the advantages and disadvantages to regionalization very carefully and in depth. Several communities have discovered to their dismay that once they join a regional school district, it requires unanimous approval of the regional district for them to leave, he said.

Kidder said residents should entertain no illusions about what regionalization involves. Although Hingham has invited only Cohasset to participate in the regional study process, Kidder hinted a regional district could not be quite so selective and elite.

"It would have to be a large scale regionalization to work," he said. "And a large scale regionalization must include Hull."

School Region...

Macmillan cited the Whitman-Hanson Regional School District as an example of increased funding through regionalization. "Whitman-Hanson last year expanded their regional school from grades 9-12 to K-12, and they have received upwards of $4 million from changing the regionalization."

While the vote to create a study committee was unanimous, several members said promises of increased state aid to towns that regionalize should be viewed skeptically.

"The pot is only going to go so far if everyone jumps in," school committee member Chrisanne Gregoire said after hearing Macmillan list a number of South Shore communities investigating regionalization.

"State aid is the wrong reason to chase it (regionalizing)," committee member Ted Underwood said.

The GSC, which was present for Monday's vote, left the meeting early to discuss the regionalization issue with the Cohasset Government Structure Committee. Cohasset is the only town, thus far, that Hingham has approached with regionalization inquiries.

Budget . . .

tial cuts in administration, library and enrichment.

"The budget cannot stand too many more assaults without doing mortal harm to the total budget."

Hart presented the budget for the all district accounts. That portion of the budget, totaling $651,523, covers the superintendent's office, pupil personnel services, the business office, the attendance office, transportation and special education costs. Although the budget for those departments is down nearly $18,000 from the current budget, it projects no increased special education costs. Hart said residential placements easily cost $30,000 per year.

Transportation continues to cause concern. Currently the buses are filled to capacity, requiring three students per seat. Hart said he was not considering major changes in the level of service either by adding a new bus or requiring a substantial number of students to walk to school.

Although state law permits the district to require more students to walk to school, hiring crossing guards to ensure their safety could cost the system $14,000 to $21,000.

Committee member Ralph Kidder warned that an accident involving the high number of children currently riding the buses would cost the district more than hiring two or three crossing guards.

"We really need to deal with this," he said.

The committee also took its first look at the budget for Deer Hill School, slated for $1.01 million. The budget is nearly $4,000 less than the current budget.

Principal Kenneth Ekberg said the savings result from the retirement of a teacher and substantial reductions in textbook requests.

Ekberg pegged the replacement salary at a lower level than the retiring teacher's. He said all textbooks have been replaced within the past five years as part of the curriculum revision process and reproducible worksheet masters now replace the costly workbooks previously used in mathematics classes.

The committee also reviewed the capital budget plan for big-ticket repairs and renovations to the school buildings.

On tap for fiscal 1993 are the final phase of the window wall replacement project at the junior-senior high school and the final phase of carpet replacement as Joseph Osgood School. Both projects are expected to come in considerably under the original cost estimate.

The final phase of the window wall replacement is budgeted at $80,000, down from the original estimate of $100,000. This phase involves the back wall of the front wing containing the resource room and the business education sections.

Hart said replacement is necessary because temperature fluctuations caused cracks in glass block wall. Ensuing water damage also weakened the structure, making it a safety risk. One wall replaced last year had shifted so far forward because of damage that only two bolts were holding it in place.

The bids for carpet replacement came in so low that the school will finish the process in two phases rather than three. Last year they were able to complete nine instructional areas and the library for $15,000. Only seven classrooms need to be carpeted out of the fiscal 1993 capital budget request.

Originally budgeted at $45,000, Hart expects to spend only $30,000 for carpeting and installation at the school.

For the remainder of the five-year plan, Hart proposes to repair the back-up boiler at the high school, complete the renovations to the acoustic system and seats in the high school auditorium, replace and repair the glass block window walls at Deer Hill School, improve handicap accessibility at the junior-senior high school, replace deteriorating wooden window frames and sashes at Osgood School and improve the Sullivan gymnasium at the high school by upgrading the lighting and acoustics.

Hart and the committee noted that the school has been able to save considerable sums of money because of the maintenance work undertaken by staff and students at the schools. They singled out John Jacobucci for particular thanks.

CHS moves into the high tech world

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The big screen TV at Cohasset Junior/Senior High flashed the face of John Packard as the town tuned into a satellite-dish system of ultramodern communication.

Imagine using a telephone to connect with someone at the other end of a TV camera miles away.

Imagine being at CHS and talking with a Nobel prize winner, an astronaut, a poet of some standing.

This week all that's possible.

For an simple expenditure of $2,500, the school system hooked up with the Mass LearnPike, a network that brings educational programming and experts in various fields into 135 school systems statewide.

After the first year, the cost of participation will be $1,000 a year, according to School Supt. Stephen Hart.

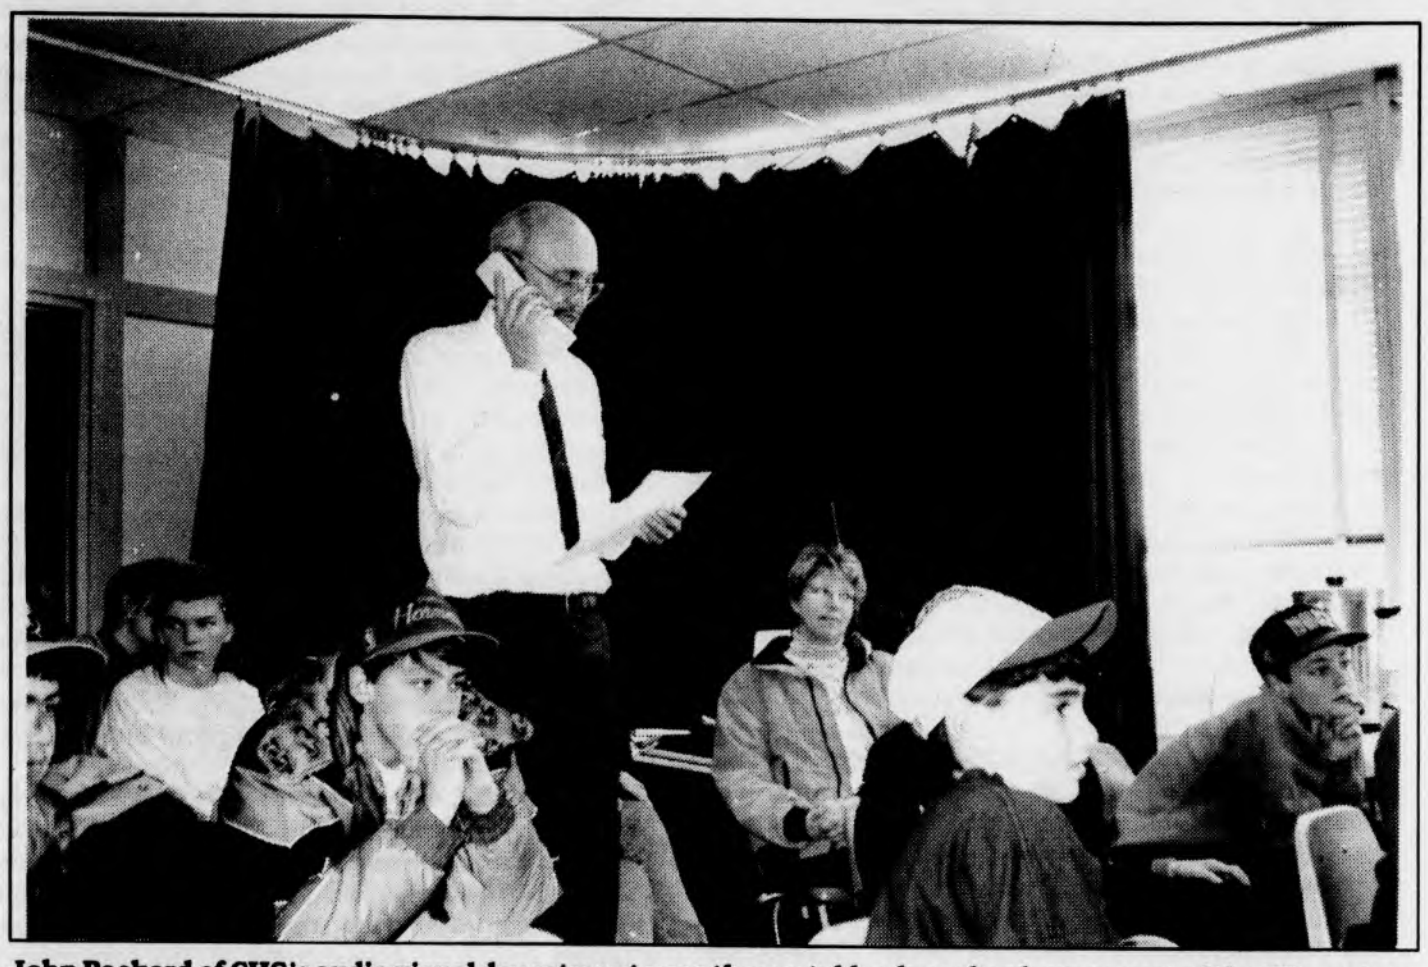
The equipment alone that the school system has received exceeds the cost. The new equipment includes a satellite dish already located in the school courtyard, a 27 inch TV monitor, VCR, portable cordless phone ready for interactive participation in programs offered on the network. The project is underwritten by the state.

The Mass Learn Pike is a satellite network that operates out of a facility in Cambridge. It relies on some help from the local cable company, something Continental Cablevision has provided, plus a lot of interest from educators and students who want to move into more sophisticated technologies.

The first day of interactive operation brought Cohasset students (and educators) into contact with students and teachers at six school systems.

The simple ceremonies involved some pleasantries and scripted phrases. Schools in Gill-Montague Regional, Newton North and South high schools, Wachusett Regional, Winthrop linked with Cohasset and the studio of the Massachusetts Corp. for Educational Telecommunications in Cambridge as Dr. Inabeth Miller, program director, talked the dignitaries through some basic background.

The one-way video, two-way audio link provides a sense of involvement not always included in the TV process.



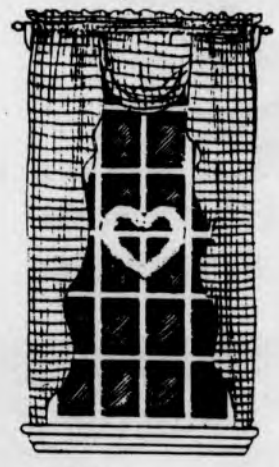
The network will offer 900 hours of educational programming this year. One program focuses on the Vikings.

A science offering gets into the ethics of some science research. \

Aside from the Mass LearnPike programs, the school will be able to tap into round-the-clock satellite coverage of cultural events in 30 countries, using 20 languages. Another network that is now on line provides staff development courses.

The Cohasset Technology Committee has been working on ideas about using the new programming.

That committee of school staff, parents and students includes: John Packard; Joel Antolini, Brian Bancroft, Beth Christoffel, Ken Cisneros, Jack DeLorenzo, Valerie Devine, Jan Dragoon, Donna Dunbar, Maureen Duffy, Sam Erbe, Wendy Forman, Meg Gallagher, Richard Hayes, director of the Paul Pratt Library, James Hills, Pat Keenan, Ralph Kidder, Ed Leary, Colleen Lucas, Susan McFadd, Dave Mgnussen, Marge Murphy, Paul Narkiewicz, Joan Pyfrom, Ryan Sawchuk, Colleen Foley Wheeler, Laureen White, Jo-Ellen Wood and Joan Wool.



John Packard of CHS's audio visual department uses the portable phone hook-up as part of the TV program on the Mass Learn Pike last week at the high school.

• We congratulate Jill Harrington this week. Jill, a 1987 Cohasset High School graduate, received her BA Degree from Emmanuel College a couple of weeks ago, and we wish you well in this tough work force, Jill. Here's hoping you find the job of your dreams.

• As you are looking ahead in your brand new calendar, be sure to mark June 26 through June 28 on it. That is the announced date for the Second Annual Harborfest, put together by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce in connection with the South Shore Art Center. The Commerce is sponsoring a planning meeting for the 1992 Harborfest at the Art Center on Tuesday, Jan. 14. If you have any super ideas let one of the committee members know.

• Received a nice note from Keith and Sue Megathlin recently, and they were proud to announce that they are brand new grandparents. Their son Shawn and his wife Kathy gave birth to a baby boy on Oct. 9, and his name is Reid Kristopher Megathlin. Keith and Sue said they were sure it would be a boy as there have been no girls in Kit's line of the Megathlins since 1796. Their son Mark is married and living in Albany and Craig, the oldest son, is in his sixth year of working for L.L. Bean and has been involved in computer projects regarding the catalogs. Sue turned the "big 50" last April, and went back to Nantucket where she was one of ten people to be born in 1941. That's quite a stat. They sound like a wonderfully happy crew, and we wish they were around here more.

• Also received a nice note from Walter and Nanci Sweeney. They are still living on their houseboat and loving it, and Walt is doing well in the T-shirt business. As Nanci said, Walt could sell a shirt to a shirt salesman. They asked to be remembered to all of their friends "around Town."

• Just to let Neil O'Brien and Pauline Keating know, it's freezing back here. While we were in Florida we had a chance to visit where they are and it is no wonder they love it there. They are avid readers of the Mariner and Around Town so from all of us a happy new year. May your every wish come true.

• We also heard from Greg and Molly Spalt over the holidays, and they had wonderful news. Their son, Charles, was born on Oct. 23 and was 21 inches long and weighed nine pounds. They love being parents, and their new house and all is well with them. We know their new year will be a super one.

• Received Wigmore Pierson's "Pierson to Person" schedule for the month of January and here it is: On 1/16 from 8-9 p.m., world famous periodontist and Tufts Dental School Professor Dr. O. Walter Donnerfeld. Dr. Donnerfeld will be discussing and displaying his ardent hobby as a painter as well. On 1/23 from 8-9 p.m., Margaret Thornton Conklin of Scituate will discuss the completion of writing her autobiography tentatively titled To Get You Through The Night. And, on 1/30 from 8-8:30 p.m., The book publishing industry: Cohasset resident David Replogel, Executive Vice President, Houghton Mifflin Co. of Boston. From 8-8:30, former Cohasset resident, Lydia Long, aka L.L. Blackmur, discusses her latest published novel, The Circle Mystery of Mynnia. Sounds like a good lineup, so be sure to tune in on channel 3 on times announced.

• Hats off to Suzanne M. Kecskemety who is a Junior Mayor at Nichols College for the 1991-1992 academic term. Suzanne is a junior majoring in public administration and a graduate of CHS. Perhaps her mayoral duties will enable her to run for office in Cohasset some day. Wouldn't that be grand?

Sally O'Neill, left, of Cohasset, owner of Little Harbor Studio, is honored as a local hero by the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association for her company's work in designing homes free of substances that trigger allergic reactions in some people. With her are Roz and Norman Vineberg of Randolph at the awards ceremony recently at the Pillar House in Newton.

• Had a nice note from Tom (Legz) Nelson over the holidays, and all is well with him. He is living with his mom after the recent death of his dad, and is working temp jobs while having lots of encouraging interviews. Tom wishes everyone a good 1992, and we certainly wish him the same...hopefully he'll come this way for a visit.

• The next Cohasset Community Red Cross Blood Drive will be held Tuesday, Jan. 28. The drive will take place at the First Parish House on Cohasset Common between the hours of 2 and 7 p.m. Past donors will be receiving a scheduling call from their group promoter. New donors are invited to call the Cohasset Blood Drive chairpersons, Shirley and Jack Cibell, at 383-2974. Start the new year off on the right foot by helping someone in need. Share the gift of life and be a proud donor on Jan. 28.

• That's the news from here for the week. I know that there must be lots in your house after the wonderful holiday. Please let me know what is going on with you and your family. We all love to read it.

Tons of trash . . .

Something called "materials processing" is a large part of the new plan. Some material would actually be altered by the process — for instance, wood would be chipped. Other materials — like bricks and concrete — would be stockpiled "over the entire landfill area wherever the working face of the landfill is located," the report states.

A temporary stockpile would be located to the northeast of the current operation — but could be shifted from place to place.

An actual recycling plant would be built on a 4.3 acres of a parcel about twice that size. The pre-engineered structure would be 150 by 350 feet in dimension. This land is not part of the 27 acre expansion site — but is adjacent to it.

"Enclosed within a visually screened, fenced yard, the recycling facility will house separation and processing equipment, such as, conveyors, glass crushers, shredders, bailing and storage areas."

It would accept paper, glass, aluminum, recyclable plastics and other unlisted items.

The facility would process 150 tons of recyclable material a day — with the possibility of expanding to a 300-ton-a-day operation.

"Other types of materials can be accomodated as they are either included in the regulatory ban from landfilling or as their recycling becomes economically attractive," the report says.

There will be no composting on site, according to the report. There was a composting facility called for in the earlier version of the plan.

The plan also calls for a gas collection system in both the new and old landfill areas.

But the plan says the potential for air quality and odor problems will actually be eliminated when it is finally capped or closed (about the year 2000).

The report talks about a small percentage increase in traffic along Route 3A. It claims the new area will have no effect on the water supply but admits measures will be required to prevent runoff water from affecting the Great Swamp.

The plan calls for the operation to be unseen from Route 3A. The new portion of the landfill will rise to 200 feet above sea level on what is now the northwestern side of Scituate Hill. The hill is currently 180 feet above sea level at the peak. A liner system will be used to contain runoff, something required by state regulation.

In time the plan will change the emphasis of the operation from a direct landfill to a recycling and processing facility.

The facility, if allowed, could operate in 1993.

Among the alternatives studied by the consultants paid by CHL is the possibility of an industrial park, which is termed "a worst-case optional-use development scenario."

It says the industrial use would increase traffic as well as create potential problems with transportation of hazardous waste. The report goes on to say the economic conditions do not favor such development.

The present landfill will be closed in 1994.

Vo-Tech's Dr. Easton gets $11G severence package

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The regional school committee unanimously approved a severance contract for Vo-Tech Supt. Dr. Clifford Easton during a recent meeting.

Easton is resigning effective April 30, 1992.

In the contract, Easton will received accrued vacation and sick-leave benefits and a retirement incentive, with a total value of about $11,000.

The regional board also approved a four percent raise for Easton retroactive to July 1. Easton's current salary is $62,903. His new rate is $65,419 minus two months because Easton will leave at the end of April, treasurer Robert J. Kelley explained.

Abington's representative, Walter E. Easttey, was the only member opposed to Easton's salary hike.

The regional school board recently named ten semi-finalists for the superintendent's position which pays an annual salary in the range of $58,000 to $62,000.

Interviews to narrow the field are set for this month; all members of the eight-town regional school district will take part in the selection process.

Qualifications include a master's degree and ten years experience in occupational education.

So what's the furor about the pipe?

Where were the people from Stop the Outfall Pipe, STOP, the past 10 years while plans for the sewer outfall off the coastline of Boston were being moved along inside courtrooms and state office buildings?

We doubt the pipe is a great idea. Moving the guck from the inner harbor into the open seas won't solve anything. It will only move the problem. The experts talk about dilution and say the guck will dissipate with more open water.

The pollution will certainly cause problems. We doubt the new study proposed by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority will have any meaning. So, they will assess the degree of pollution and find it is real. Anyone with common sense knows that.

We think the problem needs a different approach.

Let the MWRA go ahead and operate the new sewer outfall — BUT upgrade the inner workings of the sewer treatment system into a more modern and more technically sound basis.

The system being built for the so-called harbor cleanup program is called secondary sewage treatment. Secondary is better than primary, in the order of sewage treatment.

There is something beyond. It's called tertiary treatment. And while it doesn't do magic. It does make the guck a lot less guckier.

It's time to address the problem closer to the source. Years ago state officials predicted the harbor cleanup would never take place because of the cost. Well, something is taking place — and it's costly.

The catch may well be, as these new people on the scene are saying, that what was once a problem for the harbor beaches will become a problem for beaches throughout Massachusetts Bay.

We all have an interest in learning more about the situation — late as it is. We want to know where William Golden was hiding all the years that the planning was going on. We want to know why these people are waking up so late.

In case anyone has missed the irony, let us point out that Golden was the Quincy city solicitor who sued the state over the old sewage system. The state of pollution at Wollaston Beach was the point of that suit, as far as Quincy was concerned.

Golden has consistently painted himself as an environmentalist. But after getting the ball rolling on the plan, Golden must have lost track of the detailed planning stage when complaints like that of STOP would have been less expensive to address. At this point in the project, changes will mean certain delay and high expense.

But the phrase "Better late than never" was coined for situations just like this one.

No one wants to see the sands of Hingham, Nantasket, Cohasset, Scituate and Cape Cod mucked up by the residue of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority's new outfall.

No one wants to see pollution moved from one place to another to reduce a problem that needs a radical solution.

We would like to see the treatment plan upgraded so that the 9.5 mile pipe can be used without causing damage to the marine life and outer harbor waters.

We think it's time the state begins to understand this is a serious economic threat to the whole region. It's time to move ahead on the pipe, upgrading sewage treatment at the same time.

Breast cancer is serious issue

To the Editor:

Of all the worthwhile projects the Cohasset Social Service League undertakes, one of the best is their scheduling Mobile Diagnostics to come to town to facilitate women's testing for breast cancer. Mobile Diagnostics is certified by the American College of Radiology and endorsed by the American Cancer Society. Therefore, I was dismayed that Dr. Roger Pompeo put a Notice in the Mariner stating, "I do not recommend that you have a mammogram taken by the mobile van that is coming to Cohasset Saturday, Jan. 11." (Cohasset Mariner, Jan. 9, 1992, page 5). The unusual number of cancellations and no-shows for the test may have been a result of Dr. Pompeo's statement.

As Public Education Chairman for the American Cancer Society, South Shore Unit, I frequently encounter women of all ages at Health Fairs, Senior Centers and the workplace who have never had a mammogram. The National Cancer Institute and the American Cancer Society encourage women to take an active role in the early detection of breast cancer by getting a routine mammogram after age 40. Mobile Diagnostics facilitates early detection by making it convenient and economical for women (insurances accepted or a reduced fee charged). The American Cancer Society only endorses testing by a certified facility (American College of Radiology), and Mobile Diagnostics is used by the American Cancer Society for their Mammography Project.

What a tragedy it would be if one of those who canceled or didn't show up could have been helped by this very important screening for breast cancer.

Red Cross issues its thanks

To the Editor:

The American Red Cross — South Area would like to extend a loud and clear "thank you" to all who gave in contributions, time and handiwork for the 1991 Holiday Assistance Program. Without people like you, we would never accomplish our goal in serving the community.

The holidays were brightened for over 620 youngsters in Head Start, homeless shelters, and crisis centers, as well as our American Red Cross food clients who received filled Christmas stockings, toys, or knitted goods. Recent disaster victims, already being aided by the American Red Cross, also received filled Christmas stockings.

Your heartwarming response and continued support of programs sponsored by the American Red Cross enables us to better serve your community — the South Shore area. This was an especially difficult year for many but because of the wonderful response from the public, we were able to accomplish our goal.

An idea that's already tested

To the Editor:

It's not $75 for the 1992 dump (I wouldn't grace it with any of those fancy names) sticker! That's only for one car. Now the "illustrious five" have spoken and it's $25 for all additional stickers in multi car households!

Well, how about "neighborhood car pools to the dump!" Three households get together, one of them purchases the $75 sticker using the $25 each household contributed, and each week a different family takes the combined "load" in the same automobile. Sure will cut down on traffic! Just an idea.

After all "ridiculousness breeds deviousness!"

Consumers now protected by new law

To the Editor:

The signing of the home improvement contractor law on December 30, 1991 was the culmination of five years of intensive work by local consumer groups, the Attorney General, legislators, consumer organizations and contractors to provide real protection and redress for consumers in home improvement transactions. We would like to commend Representative Frank Hynes, who was instrumental in moving the bill through the legislature and convincing the administration that regulation would benefit both homeowners and contractors. Without his leadership in the House of Representatives and his commitment to consumers, the bill might never have become law.

The statute, which takes effect March 30, 1992, will require contractors to register with the state, create a guaranty fund for limited restitution, mandate written contracts in jobs costing more than $1000, and certify arbitration programs so that consumers will have alternatives to court for resolving home improvement disputes.

The law will also prohibit contractors from acting as brokers in arranging for second mortgages to finance home improvements. Those few irresponsible contractors who tarnish the image of their industry by failing to perform or complete work, doing shoddy work, or misleading consumers about the terms of the transactions will be prevented from continuing to operate with impunity.

Registration will be handled by the state Department of Public Safety. Administration of the guaranty fund and approval of arbitration programs will be done by the Executive Office of Consumer Affairs. While these systems are not in place yet, consumers and contractors can get general information about the provisions of the new law from those agencies. As more details become available, our member consumer organizations will help disseminate the information so that people will understand their rights and responsibilities under the new law.

Pratt and McNabb report they're 'rumors'

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Political Columnist

My friend Jean makes all of her Christmas presents. The people who receive them treat them as heirlooms. In fact, they are willed to people.

So my friend Jean calls me before Christmas to ask what I am "giving" to people and by this she means what I am making, not what I am buying.

So, I tell her, I have made grape jelly-jam and green tomato preserves and pickles, because those damned Big Boy Tomatoes never did get red. One of my garden club experts (I am beginning to trust these people less and less) told me to cut the green tomatoes off with their stems and put them in paper bags not touching, and they would turn red.

Well, while some did turn red, a quarter of them developed an ugly fungus. So, I pickled and preserved what was left. Several of my friends looked a little worried when they received their gifts this year. One of them made me call the Thornton Burgess kitchens in Sandwich to check on whether the pickled tomatoes should have been processed in a hot water bath.

Thornton Burgess said nobody does that anymore, that the hot water bath was just a male myth, created to keep women working twice as hard for no reason at all.

Now, I told Jean, my delicious Tinytown orange marmalade with crushed pineapple, almonds and cherries got as hard as tar.

I put the marmalade "pitch" in old glass punch bowl cups, the matching punch bowl having broken while being used as a hospital for fish with fungus.

Several friends, remembering what I used to do in my punch bowl, called to ask if my punch bowl cups had ever been used for the hospital fish. Of course not, I said, you know it would be cruel to put a sick fish in a punch cup.

It is doubtful that the selectmen are capable of holding a hearing on Cohasset Imports.

This writer's not aware of their holding even a dog hearing in recent years. And now on Jan. 27 they're going to hold two hearings in a row – which the majority of the town will attend because people are savage over one of the issues.

They know very little about the licenses they issue, and they seldom respond to people problems. They put Greg "on it," (selectmen's executive secretary). Only we didn't elect Greg to ask the tough questions. We elected them.

A citizen shouldn't have to hire a lawyer to talk with the illustrious board of selectmen. But in Tinytown, the selectmen are in training. At the Cohasset Imports hearing (Jan. 27) they will be learning how to run a hearing. It will all be very puzzling, they will ask many questions of Greg and town counsel. And Greg and town counsel will try to guide them, but as I have said many times before, in the future voters must either elect selectmen who already know their numbers and letters, or who are quick studies.

It is cruel to have town counsel be ordered to research things like the history behind a majority vote. Like Rich Henderson might have to go back to the Articles of the Barons to give a clear answer.

And none of this would have to happen if the selectmen rolled up their sleeves, asked some questions and learned how their town works.

If the board of selectmen really feel there is an issue here, they should refer it to Myrna Putziger on the Zoning Board of Appeals, because the ZBA is better equipped to examine this nonsense and determine it to be superfluous.

Is it any wonder the whole town is threatening to run for selectman this year?

Some people call them "The Monday Night Selectmen" because they only go to town hall at "show time."

The Scituate Town Administrator suggested sitting down to talk turkey about sharing a fire chief and the selectmen never got around to calling back...didn't have time, didn't want to, didn't think it would work, went skiing.

They could find no time in their busy lives to sit down with Scituate and say what do we have here? Can we work something out? It's incredible. The dump's running a $60,000 plus deficit, advisors are predicting a 10 to 15 percent cut beyond level funding...and what is your board of selectmen doing? Not much, ladies and gentlemen. Not much.

John McNabb called my tape last Friday to announce that he's a possibility for selectman.

At Frannie Marks' retirement party, Burt Pratt pulled me aside to tell me he's also a rumor, and indicated that several former selectmen might be interested in re-uping.

Sure do wish them all the best. Can tell you one thing. Anybody waging a serious campaign better have a strong economic message for the voter. The cereal box advertising of years past "Select Me; Vote for Excellence; He Does His Homework," ain't gonna fly in 1992.

Went to some interesting Christmas parties this year. At one I was told that on certain illustrious streets in this town you can make the high offer on a home and lose to the low bidder, because in Tinytown the neighbors have a say in who lives in the house. Shortly after making the high bid for a waterfront beauty, a man was asked to fill out an informational form for the neighbors who were interesting in knowing what his old community associations were, and what his intentions were regarding town clubs. He said he chucked the form.

Another resident was told that although she and her husband were the high bidders on a certain property, the neighbors would prefer the low bidders to get the house. This kind of stuff is so fascinating to us on South Main Street.

A Few Thoughts For the Middle of January: The controversy over the license renewal for 1992 for the Cohasset Imports continues with a hearing Jan. 27. We hope that the selectmen will take heed of all of the calls and letters that they have received in favor of the renewal, and also continue in the direction of cooperation with business that they have taken in 1991, and come up with a fair and equitable solution to the problem. All those interested, should try to make it to the hearing and support Peter Capozzoli and his business, in person. Let the Selectmen know that you value a good and reliable businessman, and want to keep him in town.

Lead poisoning threat

Lead poisoning is the most common environmental disease in children under 6, yet many cases go undetected or untreated. Many children show no symptoms. Others have symptoms that are mistaken for a cold, fatigue, or behavior problems.

Too often, parents and physicians alike assume that the threat of lead poisoning is limited to poor children in ghettos. In fact, the threat of lead poisoning is greatest for any child under 6 living in a home built before 1980.

Joanne Parker, a public health nurse advisor with the Massachusetts Lead Poisoning Prevention Program, will discuss prevention, detection, and treatment of lead poisoning in young children at 7:15 p.m., Thursday, Jan. 22 at Cohasset High School. Parker's presentation will focus on the sources of lead poisoning that : re most prevalent in Cohasset homes and neighborhoods.

As part of an ongoing effort to provide Massachusetts' elderly population with affordable health insurance options, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts received approval to add two new lower cost Medex products to their existing menu of Medigap options.

In addition to offering the new products, Blue Cross and Blue Shield said it is pleased to serve on Secretary Gloria Larson's working group on Medigap insurance. The two products, Medex Silver and Medex Core, are designed to provide supplemental coverage to Medicare with premiums lower than the most popular plan, Medex 3.

To address further the needs of the Massachusetts elderly, Blue Cross and Blue Shield strongly supports Secretary Larson's working group on Medigap insurance. Last August, Tringale called for formation of a blue ribbon commission to develop future benefit reforms and identify board-based sources of subsidy to be paid to low income elderly.

"We need to think creatively about potential funding sources. Too many of our members and potential members are on fixed incomes and cannot afford to spend a significant proportion of their income on health insurance," Tringale said.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield lost nearly $18 million last year in providing Medex benefits to 270,000 members. Tringale says Blue Cross and Blue Shield can no longer afford to bear these costs.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield will continue to offer managed care coverage to Medicare beneficiaries in 1992 through HMO Blue.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield is a non-profit health services company providing a full range of managed care and traditional health benefits products and services to business and individual customers, to health care providers, and to federal, state and local governments.

Marks . . .

time assistant town clerk to her husband's brother, Charlie Marks, who was tenured town clerk with part-time hours.

Introduced as the host of "Monday Night Live," Selectmen Chairman Ned Tebbetts said he and Fran lived in the same neck of the woods as kids, Ned having grown up in Newton. He wished her well.

Town Moderator William Weeks could not attend, but sent a nice letter which Worley read to the group.

Cheryl Fiori said she was worried about her mother's being able to retire, but was pleased one day to discover Fran couldn't come to the phone because she was glued to Sally Jessy Raffael. "I knew then everything was going to be ok."

From Polly Litchfield came a moving statement: "Thank you for being my friend, my confidante. The days when I was discouraged, you told me to stay, and I did, and I'm glad I did. Thank you for being there for me when I needed you." Litchfield said her brother, Selectman Rocco Laugelle, couldn't be there because he had an operation on his shoulder.

Joe Laugelle confessed to wearing pantyhose then wished Fran luck. Joe was very, very funny...but there's no way to paraphrase what he does. You had to be there.

From Acting Town Clerk Marion Douglas: "Thank you for sharing your knowledge with me. Make this your time in the sun – reach out and take hold of today." Marion then presented Fran with a gift from those assembled.

Fran is the youngest of four, her mother. Her mother passed away when she was only seven. Her father was a driver for an Army captain stationed at Fort Devens, and for many years he was employed as a chef at nursing homes in the Boston area.

Fran attended Boston public schools where she was trained as a secretary. She worked in industry for several years, and then met David Marks.

They married in the late 1940s, and "We came right to Cohasset," she said. "David worked at the post office, and then moved over to the fire department."

After her children were older, she went to fill in for a sick employee in the town clerk's office one day and stayed. In 1984 her brother-in-law retired from the position of town clerk, and she campaigned for the position.

She said she feels lucky she had no challengers for the office, because while she knew the job backwards and forwards, she was still nervous that something awful would happen that year. And it did.

She and her workers counted the votes backwards, forwards, upside down..every which way. There was no doubt about it. Mary Jane McArthur and Doris Golden tied in the race for selectman. Fran faced the first recount in the history of the town, as its first woman town clerk.

Everybody was angry there was a tie. The town was using old-fashioned ballots; in order to secure the ballots Fran had to "borrow" the town treasurer's safe – which she felt was "bizarre."

During her first year as town clerk she campaigned for her own safe, state-of-the-art ballots, and other necessities, and she got everything she asked for. The town clerk's office entered the modern age.

A lot of people don't realize that Fran Marks did a lot of work behind the scenes to get town boards and committees to comply with posting of meetings and the open meeting law.

Shortly before her retirement, the board of selectmen suggested that the town clerk's position be made part time. She said she was puzzled that the selectmen never asked for her opinion.

"If they had checked with me, first, they would have realized that the state has mandated that the town clerk's position be full time, for legal reasons."

She further explained that while the selectmen had savings in mind, making the hourly employee full time would have resulted in greater expenses. "The assistant is an hourly employee. When she works overtime she is paid at time and a half."

Asked if the town clerk's office ever becomes embroiled in the contests, Fran said no. "We just want to do it right, and we want it to be over."

Fran said she has enjoyed working with several excellent chairmen of the board of selectmen over the years: Helen Scripture, Mary Jane McArthur, Frank England, Henry Ainslie, George McLaughlin, Rocco Laugelle.

"You saw them at town hall every day. They stopped by, they wanted to know about your problems."

Fran gets a little chuckle over the state legislature's suggestion that cats be licensed and be given rabies shots.

"We could barely take care of the dogs. I'm sure people aren't going to put their cats on the census. Maybe the board of health can take that part of the town clerk's job over for Marion," she smiled.

Fran's husband David may be the perfect husband.

Since he retired from the Cohasset Fire Department 10 years ago he does all the cooking and cleaning. Plus, he did all the entering of dog licenses in the town clerk's books.

David said: "For years the town had two Marks for the price of one."

In her retirement, David will require Fran to set the table at mealtimes and attend to her flower garden. (Way to go, Fran.)

She will enjoy reading something besides law books, and she plans to start shopping, immediately.

She said she will never, ever run for any office in the town again.

But she said that before her retirement party.

Before she knew her powers.

Paul Pratt Memorial Report

The Board of Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library are happy to report a good year of library activity in Cohasset. While the library felt the constraints of the poor economy and tight budgets, several factors contributed to maintaining a healthy equilibrium for the library during FY 1992. Most important of these were the Friends of the Cohasset Library, an annual budget which permitted the library to continue being open 53 hours a week during the winter and 50 hours during the summer, the library's excellent staff, the Old Colony Library Network, an enthusiastic public, and attentive Trustees.

The Friends of the Cohasset Library, under the leadership of Patience G. Towle, have again made an enormous difference in the quality of Cohasset's library. More than 50 persons volunteered more than 2100 hours for the library, helping at the loan desk, in the office, shelving books, and visiting nursing homes. Had taxpayers paid for this volunteered time, the library budget would have been almost 10 percent greater; had these services not been provided voluntarily, the library would have been forced to cut open hours and reduce book purchases, according to Sheila Evans, Chairman of the Trustees.

In addition to providing volunteers, the Friends also raise money through their annual membership drive, with about 16 percent of Cohasset's households making tax-deductible contributions. The Friends also raised almost $1,000 through its annual book sale. With these funds, the Friends supported the library's book budget with $4,500, the children's summer reading incentive program with $250, and provided family passes to the Museum of Fine Arts, the Children's Museum, the Museum of Science, and the New England Aquarium. These passes may be reserved by Cohasset residents by calling the library.

The annual budget of $234,076 for the library, voted by Town Meeting, represents less than 2 percent of Cohasset's operating budget but permitted the library to continue without cutting the number of hours it is open to the public, and to continue to qualify for State Aid Grants by maintaining the book budget at 19 percent of the library's total operating budget. This State Aid Grant, $4,500 from the Friends, and income from the library's endowment funds added almost $22,000 to the tax support received from Cohasset. Combine this with the value of volunteer time, and one must conclude that Cohasset taxpayers are receiving good value from their investment in their local library.

The staff of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library continues to be one of its chief assets. Under Richard E. Hayes' able leadership, they offer to library users friendly and effective service, and to volunteers helpful guidance.

The Old Colony Library Network (OCLN) is the computerized network of 21 libraries to which Cohasset belongs. Terminals in the library give the user easy access to the collections of all member libraries. The staff can use the electronic mail feature of the system to ask for books from other libraries which are delivered daily to Cohasset. It is expected that circulation of library materials in Cohasset will be handled electronically before 1992 is over.

Cohasset readers use their library! In FY 1991, 82,600 items were borrowed, which averages to be 291 loans per day and 32 per hour. For every household in Cohasset, 32 times were borrowed during the year. Of these loans, 2,200 were to school classrooms and over 100 were obtained from 33 other libraries by library staff. In addition to taking books out of the library, Cohasset residents use its resources at the library. Staff help users in some way at a rate of 17 such transactions per hour.

The Trustees, elected for three-year terms, meet monthly. In addition, they may consider special issues in small groups, such as investment of the endowment, need for maintenance and repair, liaison with the Friends, and so forth, and report back to a Trustee meeting. We are responsible to you Cohasset residents for the management and operation of the library, and would welcome questions, comments or ideas at any time.

Auditions for the women

Cohasset Dramatic Club will audition women ages 20 to 60'ish, to cast 30 women and one pre-teen girl (age 10-12) for the forty roles in "The Women," by Clare Booth Luce, at 3 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 26, and at 7 p.m. Monday, Jan. 27, in the Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium. (Performances will be March 27, 28, 29 and April 3, 4). The show's director is Sherry Campbell. For further information, contact Darcy Pratt, 545-2429.

"The Women," set in 1936, is the story of young wife and mother "Mary" (played by Norma Shearer in the film version) and her well-meaning friends, who play havoc with her marriage. What will a woman do to "get her man?" Luce's play was at the time an indictment of scheming Park Avenue women and their values. Campbell's concept of the play is a question: Have we come a long way? Hilarious lines and situations in a fun setting in Luce's tight script, which can be checked out from Paul Pratt Library in Cohasset.

Housing Authority residents misled

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said this week, "Many residents of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull Housing Authority units have contacted my office during the past week concerned about the sales of public housing units. They have received information that the intent of the Governor's Regulatory Reform package was the privatization of public housing units. I would like to allay their fears and clarify this confusion."

The Governor and the Executive office of Communities and Development (EOCD) are committed, at a minimum, to maintain the current stock of public housing. Presently, there is a prohibition to sell any public housing units for any reason. During the past few years local housing authorities have requested permission from EOCD to sell certain units that have become unsuitable for housing for families or individuals. These are typically one and two family housing, not part of a development, and purchased many years ago. They are so dilapidated that renovations would be more costly than the sale and replacement. Other local housing authorities have found units purchased in condominium developments to have become too costly to operate because of condo assessments or fees. In the local housing authorities' requests for permission to sell the units, they have also indicated proceeds from the sales would be used to purchase replacement units.

Section six of the Governor's Regulatory Reform package is intended to address the absolute prohibition on the sales of any housing units for any reason. Its goal is for a unit for unit transfer or replacement of any housing sold. This would result in no loss of public housing. Section six would create a mechanism to accomplish this. Present law does not require the local housing authority to develop unit by unit replacement housing; it requires that only twenty-five percent of the units development on a site be for low income persons or families.

Under the proposed legislation, EOCD, would allow local housing authorities, in very limited instances, to sell unsuitable housing units and would require authorities to replace the sold units. Any sale would occur only after a request by the local authority, after a very thorough review process by EOCD, and under very strict guidelines. This should maximize public housing availability in the Commonwealth and allow EOCD and local housing authorities to manage their housing units in a more effective manner.

"It is most unfortunate that residents were needlessly alarmed! As stated, units would not be sold unless a sale was requested by the local housing authority, then only under strict circumstances and units would have to be replaced unit for unit with other public affordable housing," Murray said.

S.A.F.E. urges residents to comment on Report

S.A.F.E. recently urged Cohasset residents to review and comment on the Supplemental Draft Environmental Impact Report (EIR) submitted by Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL) to support their proposed 27.5 acre, 500 tons per day landfill expansion.

"The CHL "Area V" expansion poses a potential threat to our water supply, Lily Pond, " said S.A.F.E. President Alix White. "This landfill expansion should be rejected by the state unless they can show that the landfill expansion will not endanger Cohasset."

"We were successful last year in persuading the state to reject the Draft EIR," said S.A.F.E. Vice-President John K. McNabb Jr. "We hope that the participation of many Cohasset residents in commenting on this supplemental DEIR will help convince the state to yet again reject this project."

The deadline to comment on the SDEIR is 5 p.m., Friday, Feb. 7. Comments should be in writing and be sent to Susan Tierney, Secretary of Environmental Affairs, 100 Cambridge Street - Room 2000, Boston, MA 02108, and refer specifically to the SDEIR as "EOEA File #7223."

Two copies of the SDEIR, a 150-page document, are available for review at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Anyone who wants a copy of the report may receive one — free of charge — by requesting a copy from Mr. A. Raymond Quinn, SAIC Engineering, 10 Riverside Drive, Lakeville, MA 02347 (phone 508-946-3500/FAX #508-946-3509).

State regulations require that CHL, through SAIC, its engineering firm, provide a copy promptly to anyone who requests one. Failure to do so may allow Secretary Tierney to extend the comment period beyond Feb. 7.

S.A.F.E. ("Stop Any Further Expansion") is a Cohasset-based group which opposes any further expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill.

Wrestling whoops it up, hoop wrestles with flu

By Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

Torin Sweeney's wrestling team is now 2-0 after a 45-27 win against Scituate, and it continues to win at tournaments. Sweeney modestly hopes to stay above .500 for the year.

"Anything above .500 is a bonus, anything below is a little disappointing," Sweeney said. "We're doing well now, but we haven't met the toughest teams yet."

The Skippers hosted Scituate last Wednesday and did the fans proud. Ryan Freeman (112 lb.), Nate Fiore (135 lb.) and Jed Terry (145 lb.) all won by ten points. Max Nivaud and Danny Baird each won by decision, and Scituate forfeited against Ray Jones, Andy Church and Carlo Lagrotteria.

"They forfeited mostly because they didn't have the guys to wrestle," Sweeney said. "I think they chose not to go against Ray because they heard about what he did in Marshfield." Jones won the 152 pound championship in Marshfield last month after being seeded 16th.

Sweeney said the best match against Scituate was Steve Harrington's. "I bumped Steve up from 140 to 145 so that he could go against their best guy," Sweeney said. "It was the best way to clinch a win." Harrington lost 7-5, but that didn't deter anyone.

"I have the guys wrestle at higher weight classes once in a while for competition. I'm a firm believer in it, and sometimes I'll do it when we've already won or lost the match just to keep up the competitiveness," Sweeney said. "I do it more than a lot of other coaches."

Cohasset's showing at last Saturday's nine-team tournament in Whitman proves that Sweeney's tactics pay off. Fiore won his weight class, pinning his opponent in the semis and finals round, and is still undefeated for the year. Freeman took third, and Jed Terry lost his first match then won his next three to finish in third place as well. Baird made the finals and lost by decision to his Lynnfield opponents.

Jones, seeded first after everyone "misjudged" him in Marshfield, won in his class. "Ray came from behind in the semis and the finals; he won the finals with five seconds left with a five-point move," Sweeney said. "The coaches voted him Best Wrestler at the tournament."

Sweeney is more than pleased. "Coach Rourke and I are very happy with what we've seen so far. All we have to do is stay away from injuries and the flu, and we should be set." The Skippers wrestled Carver yesterday, and face Foxboro and Sharon tomorrow at 3:30 p.m. at Cohasset.

Boys' hoop coach Arnie Reppucci had a party the other day, but it wasn't a birthday party or an anniversary. It was to celebrate the first time this year the whole team was at practice.

"We're still banged up," Reppucci said of his 2-6 team. "You hate to make excuses, but everyone on this team has had at least a touch of the flu." As of last Sunday, guards Joey Andrade, Kywon Edwards and Chris Condrat were officially on the sick list.

Nonetheless, the Skippers have had some close games. Last Wednesday's game against Norton saw Cohasset tied at the half, 29 apiece. After a brief lead, some key turnovers and Norton baskets put them behind by 10 or 12, and the Skippers lost by that much, 61-49. Paul Biledeau was the lead scorer with 14, followed by Sheldon Morgan with 10 and Kevin Bishop with nine.

Cohasset had a disappointing loss last Friday when they faced Hanover and came within a point, 48-47. After being down six at half-time, Cohasset played catch-up until Hanover threw a couple of tricky zones at them. Biledeau led again with 22, followed by Doug Ellinger with 11 and Morgan with five.

Hopefully, Reppucci's party raised spirits and lowered temperatures. "I'm appreciative and impressed with the character of the players through this very frustrating part of the season when we've been seriously undermanned," Reppucci said. His team plays at Norwell next Tuesday at 5:15 p.m.

Margie Murphy scores

Senior Margie Murphy of Cohasset shot the winning two-pointer for the Salem State Lady Vikings in a holiday tournament last weekend at St. Joseph's College in North Windham, Maine.

Murphy, who graduated from Cohasset High School in 1988, has been playing for the Lady Vikings for four years, mostly as a guard, according to Coach Tim Shea.

In overtime, the team was down four point with 13 seconds remaining when one player rebounded and hit a three-point shot, Shea said. The opponent went to the foul line and the player missed.

Salem State rebounded and Margie ran the length of the court, shooting a 15-foot jumper at the buzzer, giving Salem State the 81-80 victory.

St. Joseph's was ranked fifth in New England.

The night before, Salem State beat third-ranked Clark University by a score of 68 to 60.

Murphy, who is only 5 feet 8 inches tall, scored 10 points in the final game, with eight rebounds and four assists; against Clark, she had 13 points with seven rebounds.

"She has been the most consistent player this season in our first 10 games," said Shea. The team record is 4-6.

Cohasset High gymnastics scores success

On Dec. 30 Cohasset gymnastics had their first victory of the season against Notre Dame. Cohasset was 95.30 to Notre Dame 94.60.

Even though Cohasset has had a number of injuries, sicknesses and vacationers over the Christmas break, they managed to out score nonleague Notre Dame by a slight 7 tenths of a point.

Top scorers for Cohasset on uneven bars were Tara Gallagher 7.1, followed by teammates Caroline Delima and Erin Sutherland 5.20. (Top scorer for Notre Dame was Camille St. Cyr.)

Moving over to the beam was not Cohasset's best event for the evening. Cohasset experienced a number of unnecessary falls.

Captains Tara Gallagher and Erin Sutherland led Cohasset on the beam with a 6.45 and a 6.15. (Notre Dames' top scorer was Camille St. Cyr.)

Top scorers on the vault for Cohasset were Captain Erin Sutherland, followed by teammates Jodi Colwill and Caroline Delima. (Top scorers for Notre Dame were Tia Gardner and Heidel Vietze.)

On the floor exercises, Cohasset had one of their best nights. The young women beat Notre Dame by three points on the event.

Top scorers captain Erin Sutherland, followed by Tafana Fiore and the highest score on floor for Cohasset was Julie Smith.

Top all around was Tia Gardner of Notre Dame with 26.50 followed by Cohasset's Erin Sutherland with a 24.50.

Coach Ruthann Sargent thanks Megan Fahey, Katie Medinger and Marnie DeMichele for assistance with scoring and paper work.

Lady skippers celebrate

The girls' hoop team has apparently been drinking from the same glass as the boys. Illness has left only seven players untouched, as far as the latest practice goes, and they have yet to win a game. Coach Laureen White is clocking the team's improvement.

"We were getting beaten by a lot at the start of the year, but the games are closer now," White said. "We're such a young team now, and they're doing an excellent job filling the positions."

The starting team is senior Heather Bass, junior Jen Knowles, sophomores Katie Carroll and Renee Prisble, and freshman point guard Erin Murphy. The girls are looking for their first win when they travel with the boys to Norwell next Tuesday; they play at 3:30 p.m.

Hockey hovers around .500

By Peter Kasperowicz
Mariner correspondent

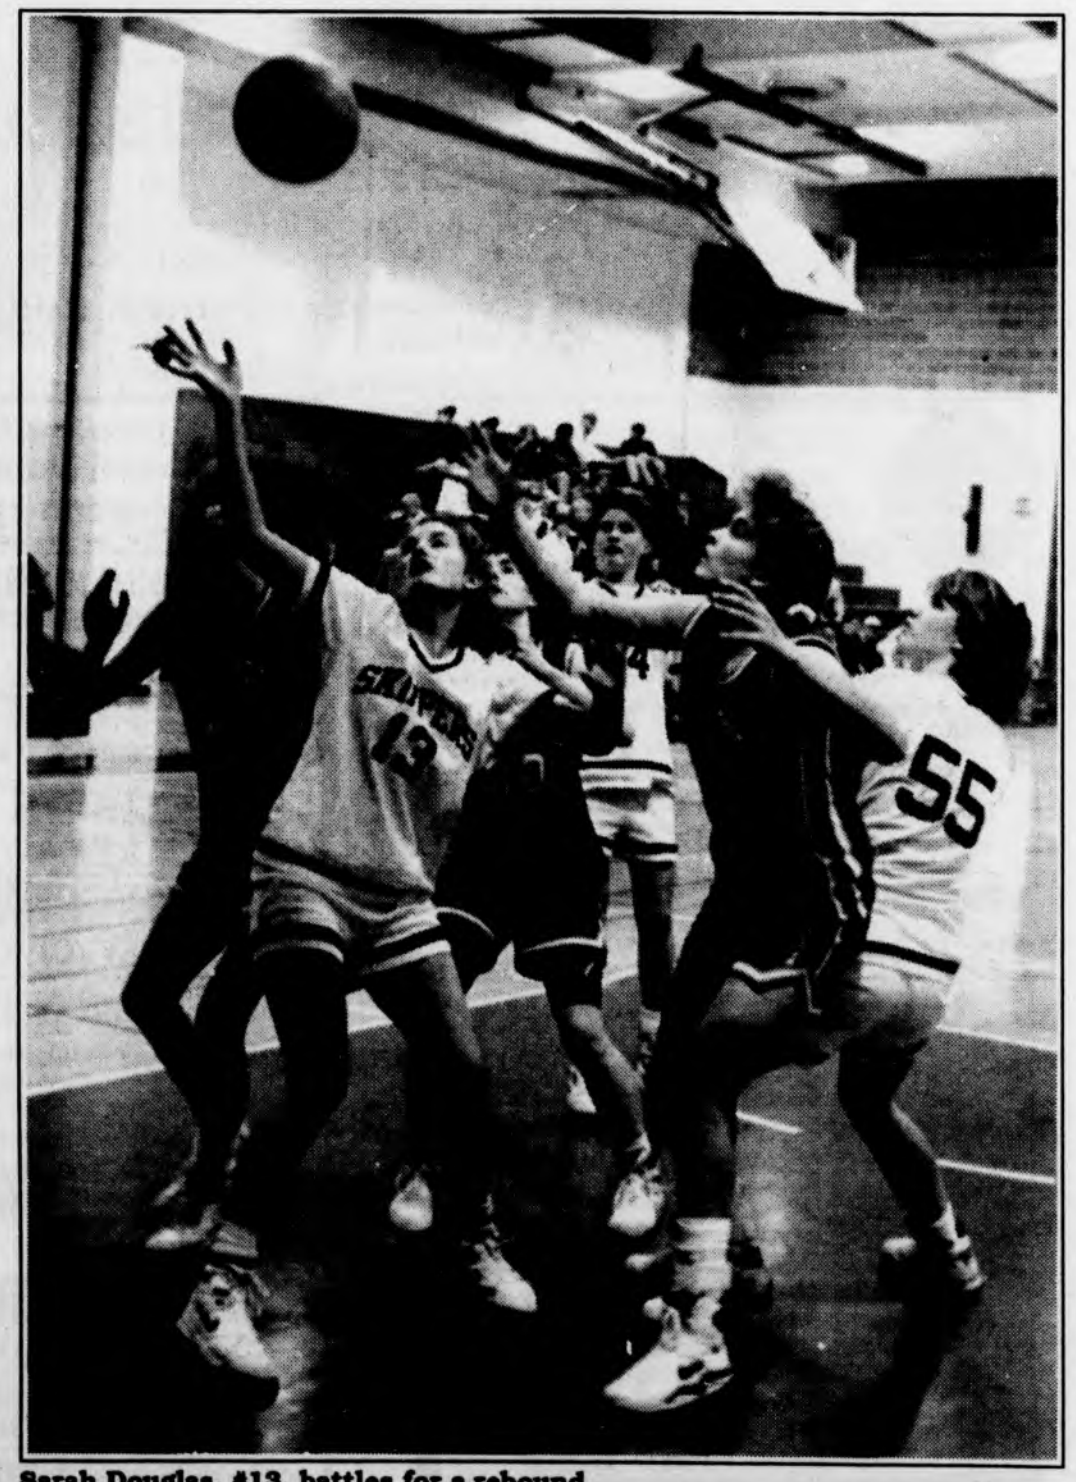
Skippers hockey gave up a close one to Abington last Saturday and are now 3-4 on the season. Cohasset nearly came back from the dead late in the game, thanks to junior forward Mike Reynolds' third period hat-trick, but Abington was up 6-4 when the final buzzer sounded.

"Abington was a team we could beat if we woke up," coach Dennis Walsh said. "The third period was great, but we have to play like that for all three periods. No one hustled in the first two; they just skated around."

Abington was up 6-1 at the end of the first two, but they were seriously threatened seven minutes later after Reynolds had scored twice on a power play. Reynolds scored again with 4:06 left in the game after the entire team scrambled to keep the puck at Abington's end of the ice.

The first two periods were just too much to overcome. Abington had the uncanny ability to linger in front of Cohasset's net long enough for them to score. Abington scored first with 4:22 left in the first period by backhanding the puck past goalie Jeff Stone. Less than two minutes later, Abington took advantage of a momentarily confused defense and scored again. It was 2-0 Abington at the first intermission.

"We gotta score the next goal," Walsh said.



A lone Abington player killed that idea less than two minutes into the second period. As if that weren't enough, Abington scored three more times in less than two minutes. Forward Charlie Endris' goal just before the end of the second put Cohasset on the board, but it was too little, too late.

Crowd Chants "Mulcahy." Gets Mulcahy

A much better game to watch was last Wednesday's, when Cohasset beat Scituate 8-5 in the most exciting game this year. Leading 6-4 going into the third period, Cohasset was caught by surprise when Scituate scored in the first 20 seconds of play. Cohasset answered when Mike Reynolds fired a few shots and finally hit with 11:18 left. Senior defenseman Kevin Mulcahy finished off a hat-trick of his own a few minutes later when he slapped home the last goal of the game. Cohasset had won, and Scituate fans took home a lot of sore throats.

"Yeah, that's my fan club up there," Mulcahy said of the opposing fans who taunted him for most of the game. The plan apparently backfired; Mulcahy scored twice in the second period. Reynolds scored once every period, even though no one was yelling "Reynolds." Actually, senior forward John Murphy scored Cohasset's first two goals, but no one yelled "Murphy." Hmm.

"We weren't looking for as much offense as we had," Walsh said. "We were lucky we had it though. I thought it would be 2-1 or 3-2." Walsh thought he heard someone yell "Walshie," but he wasn't sure.

Sarah Douglas, #13, battles for a rebound.

Winterfest is coming!

Set aside the weekend of Jan. 31 to Feb. 2 for "Winterfest - Drug Free Weekend." The DFW committee is putting the finishing touches on a group of events with something for everyone. Friday night, Jan. 31, will usher in the weekend with back to back boys and girls H.S. varsity basketball games vs. Carver H.S. A free throw contest and kick-off activities are also planned, and every Deer Hill student who contributes a poster to "deck the gym" will receive free admission for him or herself and two adults! Saturday will bring an ice castle building contest, food bazaar, movies and an adult semi formal dance. On Sunday you can take part in (or watch!) a volleyball tournament, see a performance of "The Improbable Players" and join your friends at a 99 cent all-you-can-eat spaghetti dinner. For more information, or tickets, call the Senior Center at 383-9112 or any member of the committee or Paula Knowles (383-1331.

Police budget carries new guns, 4 new cars

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Police Chief Joseph Kealey criticized the selectmen Monday for failing to be supportive enough of the police department at Town Meeting.

He presented what was basically a level-funded budget for the coming fiscal year to selectmen, who accepted his bottom line of $868,762. This is actually up about $50,000 over the 1992 budget of $829,636.

Included in that amount are four cruisers—including a new car for the chief to replace his 1984 Ford and funds to purchase semi-automatic weapons — if the current drive of the police association should fall short of the mark.

The police association is still soliciting funds for the new guns. All other departments in the area have the semi-automatics. Police sources say most criminals have authomatic or semi-automatic weapons. The weapons carry more ammunition than the old manual revolvers.

For the past two years the chief has tried to get the money for new guns through the regular budget without success.

Actually, the chief's budget offered the selectmen a choice of several capital outlay plans — they could have opted to trade in fewer cars this year — something they had been doing from year to year. Last year two cruisers were traded in.

The chief complained that the police officers had "their butts kicked" at town meeting in the recent past.

"And I think they are doing it the right way." He pointed out that the union offered to accept a zero percent increase and that was voted down.

Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts said the selectmen supported the contract, which is again under negotiation.

"What I'm talking about is getting clearer. Get a united front going," Kealey said. "You can't go lower than zero percent."

He said someone needs to speak out on town meeting floor. The chief did not talk on the question at town meeting.

Kealey said the editorial in the Cohasset Mariner that supported the contract is still on the bulletin board at the station.

"I don't know what happened after that ran. Something changed," Kealey said.

The advisory board opposed the contract, which was defeated, because of wage increases in subsequent years.

History made

A Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset Massachusetts, by E. Victor Bigelow, has been reprinted by Higginson Book Company of Salem. This book, originally published in 1898, had been out of print.

A Narrative History of Cohasset contains interesting information about the early days of the town, as well as facts about its founders. The reprint, which is 561 pages long plus maps and illustrations, is a facsimile edition, hardbound in high-quality buckram with the title stamped on the spine in gold. It is available by mail from Higginson Book Co., 14N Derby Square, Salem, Massachusetts, 01970, for $56.50 per copy plus $3 each for shipping.

Higginson Book Company has been reprinting histories and genealogies for over 20 years, and is currently involved in The American Local History Project, whose aim is to reprint hundreds of out-of-print county and town histories published before 1935, during the heyday of interest in local history. Over 100 scarce old books have already been made available through this program.

Landscaping at the Lothrop House

By Burt Pratt
Special to the Mariner

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset, in furtherance of a long-standing partnership with the Historical Society, has initiated a new landscaping and planting plan at the Lothrop House. A new front and side lawn, seeded recently, is already green and growing. Mulch areas, established early in the summer, will soon be filled with various plantings including an espaliered tree against the red brick wall on the East side of the house. Additional improvements will be made to an existing hedge around the brick terrace at the rear of the house.

Tinka McLean serves as Liaison between the Community Garden Club and the Society. The landscape plan was designed by Barbara Power. Maintenance of the entire grounds, including the new plantings, will be the responsibility of the Society. A committee for this purpose is headed by Mary Campbell and includes Doris Flint, Betty Grassie, Betty Madden, Phyllis Peck, and Curator David Wadsworth.

We are deeply indebted to the Community Garden Club for their continuing interest in, and donations to, the Lothrop property.

Additionally our grateful thanks go to the Cohasset Garden Club who, for many years, have kept the old fashioned gardens at the Wilson House and Maritime Museum in immaculate condition and blooming throughout each summer season.

Harbor planning underway

The newly expanded Harbor Committee is working up a new set of priorities to update the old harbor master plan.

Last week the committee began talked over the current situation at the waterfront:

- the dredging project in the Cove remains in stalemate. Permits have yet to be issued. The earliest the dredging can happen is next fall since the window of opportunity closes in February.
- when the dredging is accomplished, the rocks by Kimball's will not be blasted.
- the Roy docks, as currently configured in the planning stages, will require dredging of their own. Some approvals have been granted for the project.

New fire chief starts Jan .27

John Nadeau, the new fire chief, begins work Jan. 27. His employment contract was signed Monday.

Selectmen discussed at some length whether Acting Fire Chief Daniel Brock would continue to work for one week after the new chief begins. The decision was to leave the matter up to Greg Doyon, executive secretary, who said he would confer with Nadeau.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle complained that an overlap had never been an issue in the past. He said it was unfair to handle the matter any other way.

Other selectmen favored no overlap to an overlap of a few days but the final vote was to leave it to the new chief and Doyon.

South Shore Coalition backs harbor cleanup

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

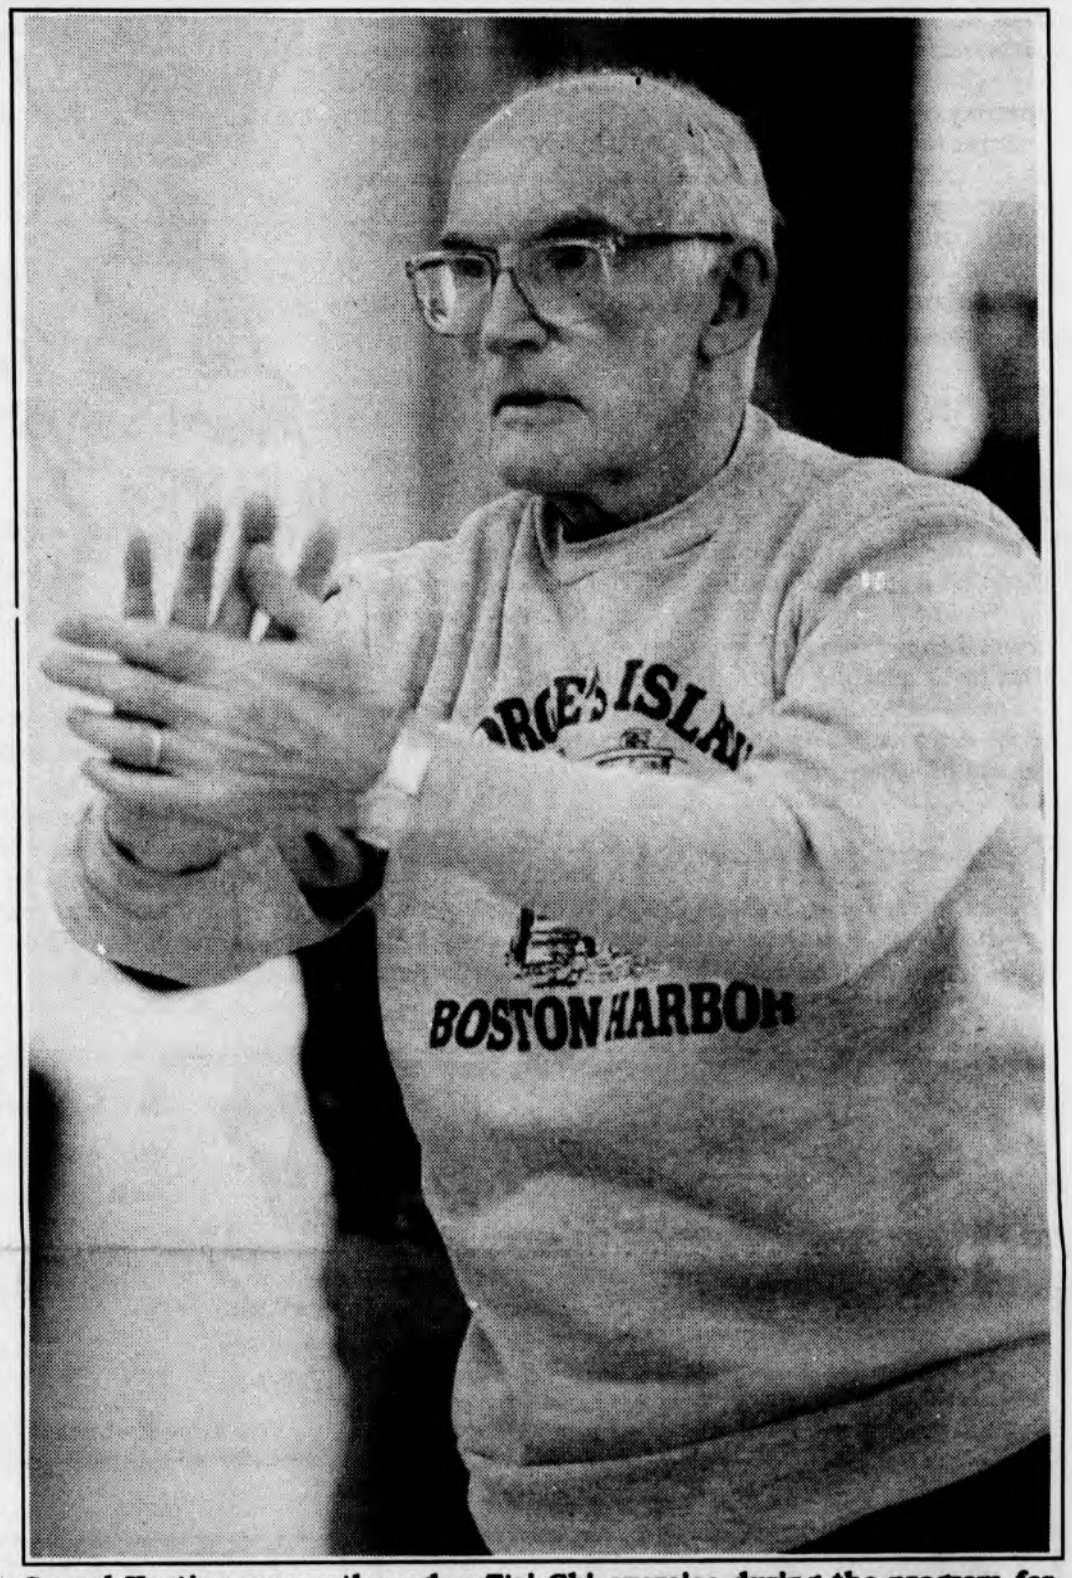
An expert from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, MWRA, appeared before members of the South Shore Coalition Jan. 16 with detailed sketches showing the impact of sewage on the beaches of Hull, Cohasset, Scituate and Marshfield.

The expert, Michael Connors, science advisor to the MWRA, said the situation as it exists today will be alleviated ten-fold when the nine-and-a-half mile sewage outfall pipe is completed a year-and-a-half from now.

Meanwhile debris and the effluent from the sewage treatment will continue to find its way to the beaches of the South Shore. The currents generally flow in a southward direction.

The coalition — which operates under the chairmanship of Martha Gjesteby — voted last week to back a statement of principles that reaffirms its support for the current plan and goes one step further by endorsing the continued monitoring of the project by the Cape Cod Commission.

William Golden, the former state senator who put together the South Shore Coalition, started action in the courts on the harbor cleanup suit and is now working to halt the outfall, was not invited to the meeting.



Martin Pillsbury of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council pointed out that the outfall issue seemed settled in 1987. He went over the charts and background showing what would happen if the outfall were placed in a different position. The data indicated worse damage would result.

If the outfall were kept closer to the harbor the South Shore beaches would be hit to a greater degree by the currents carrying the treated sewage. If the outfall were placed deeper in the ocean, the fishing banks would be impacted, Pillsbury said.

He joked about what he called the Margaret Thatcher solution — "send the pipe to England."

When Norwell Selectman Rebecca Freed asked why tertiary treatment was not being used in the current plan, Pillsbury replied that it was more expensive and that the federal

New bank president seeks to bolster the public trust

By Steve Adams
Mariner staff

Since taking over as Rockland Trust Company's chief executive officer last month, one of Douglas H. Philipsen's major challenges has been bolstering public confidence in the bank.

Philipsen is quick to discourage parallels between the bank's financial troubles — chiefly, its amount of non-performing assets — and such well-publicized cases as the Rhode Island credit union crisis and the savings-and-loan bail-out. Those debacles were the result of profiteering and inadequate regulation, Philipsen said.

"This has been a problem caused by a depression in real estate property," he said, "as opposed to being caused by personal greed."

Philipsen succeeds Donald Godby, whose resignation last August was ascribed to personal reasons.

Rockland Trust's difficulties are the result of an unexpected downturn in the real estate market which caused customers to default on their loans, Philipsen said.

"If you go back two or three years, there were very few people who foresaw what we have seen in the last few months," he said. "A few years back, people thought anything to do with real estate had to be good because there's only so much of it."

Philipsen's reputation as a trouble-shooting executive at Berkshire Bank and Trust Company from 1983 to 1987 impressed the board of directors.

"He has been through a difficult situation before over an extended period of time," said John F. Spence Jr., chairman of the board at Rockland Trust. "He

Service begins in May

Paramedics are on the way

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Advanced life support (ALS) service won't be available at South Shore Hospital until May, according to Peggy Cass, the hospital's emergency medical technician (EMT) coordinator.

Delayed state approval, Cass said, is the cause for pushing back the original January commencement date.

The goal of the ALS service is to increase survival rates by improving prehospital care. The service will operate from South Shore Hospital and be available to the towns of Hingham, Cohasset, Hull, Norwell, Scituate, Abington, Rockland, Whitman, Pembroke, Holbrook, and Hanover. "We are one of the few areas without this level of service in eastern Massachusetts," Cass said.

ALS will improve emergency medical services in these communities by providing response personnel with a higher degree of medical expertise than would otherwise be available, Cass said.

"These towns are staffed at the EMT basic level. ALS will augment the services by staffing two paramedics."

There are three levels of EMT training

Senior citizens move into action

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The instructor stands as part of the circle, his hands float gracefully to shoulder height.

The dozen or so people in the room follow his movement, practicing the ancient Chinese system of T'ai Chi. They don't fight their bodies or the elements as they move. They channel their energy. They concentrate on removing obstructions from the flow of the energy.

Anthony McAlear Jr. has been teaching the course in T'ai Chi to senior citizens since last September. He's been practicing the system himself for nearly 15 years.

"Relax, relax, relax," McAlear tells his class as he switches from the Floating Hands exercise to a more meditative exercise.

He asks the group to close their eyes and feel the sun.

"Can you see the sun," he asks, not yet expecting an answer from the silent students.

The system is "pay as you go" for the course. It costs $1.50 a class for the seniors who probably wouldn't fit in at a health spa anyway.

McAlear explains T'ai Chi can be used for health and that is how he teaches it. He won't say whether he believes it but he says the Chinese believe the body's energy — which is the Chi — can be focused to heal any part of the body.

As he teaches the class, he asks his students to visualize the energy and create an energy wave in their body. The energy moves from the intestines — a spot the Chinese call the tin tan —

Poster contest at Deer Hill

More than 240 posters have been made by Deer Hill students to help with the kick-off of Cohasset's first drug-free weekend. These posters, all drawn on the theme of drug, alcohol or tobacco misuse, will be on display in the high school gymnasium during the varsity basketball games and official Winterfest '92 kick-off on Friday night, Jan. 31, starting with the girls' Cohasset vs. Carver game at 5:15 p.m., and at the volleyball tournament and $.99 spaghetti dinner on Sunday, Feb. 2.

Some of the posters will also be displayed at 9 Depot Court and in downtown stores during the festivities on Saturday, Feb. 1. All students who have handed in a poster will receive free admission for him/herself and two adults to the games on Friday night.

Call Karen Hettstrom at 383-6584 or any PSO school representative.

Bank acknowledged

Cohasset Savings Bank, a full service mutual savings bank with offices in Cohasset and North Scituate, was cited in a recent issue of Forbes Magazine.

Commenting in the January 6, 1992 issue, Gerard Cassidy, a Portland, Maine regional banking analyst for Tucker-Anthony, sees Cohasset Savings Bank as one of thirteen, 'smallish savings banks' in New England that he is 'growing cautiously bullish' on.

Cohasset Savings Bank presently ranks number one of all 125 mutual savings banks in Massachusetts in capital to assets ratio.

50 or so articles face annual Town Meeting

About 50 articles were submitted for the warrant for the annual town meeting which closed Tuesday, Jan 21.

Town meeting will be Saturday, April 4. A special town meeting will also be held within the annual meeting.

One article would grant the First Parish Church the right to use the Common for a septic system.

William Becker appeared before selectmen Tuesday night to ask in the name of the church about the possible use of the land. Becker, who is on the music and worship committee of First Parish, said there is a proposal to create a vestry within the church.

There is no running water in the church. There never has been in the 244 years of its existence.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she thought there might be a conflict on the issue if the voter were up to the selectmen. Four of the five members of the board of selectmen are also members of the church.

"Martha, you are not going to get in trouble over church," Selectman Rocco Laugelle, who is not a member of First Parish, said.

"I — and all of you — have a letter from the state ethics commission and it has nothing to do with church. Because of the fact you are a church member you are not in conflict. Believe me, that is the least of your problems."

Two other articles for the warrant deal with the possible addition to town land in the Great Swamp. The town may be interested in acquiring a four-acre parcel of land owned by the estate of Myra Tower. The heirs are not interested in paying back taxes to redeem the land. The Trustees of Reservations are also interested in the land. Selectmen have instructed Greg Doyon, executive secretary, to prepare articles that would allow either option.

E911 needs more work, South Shore Coalition says

No one is watching the regulations of the state-backed Enhanced 911 program, according to Jean Christensen, planner for the South Shore Coalition.

And those regulations are soon to be set in concrete.

"We are now waiting for the standards," Christensen said at the regulation coalition meeting Jan. 16 in Norwell.

The coalition includes Hingham, Weymouth, Cohasset, Marshfield, Hull, Rockland, Hanover, Norwell, Duxbury and Scituate.

State law requires the telephone company to pick up the initial cost of wiring for the 911 emergency number.

All towns in the coalition area have agreed to work on plans for the E911 program. Towns in this region do not have working 911 emergency numbers as yet. Most use an exchange plus 1212 for emergency police calls. Fire emergency numbers vary more.

The towns using 911 must designate one location for all emergency calls. Only two towns in the coalition area — Hanover and Norwell — use a central location for emergency calls. The rest employ separate emergency numbers for fire and police emergencies.

Once the central dispatching location is designated in the communities and the initial wiring in place, further changes in the system would require the expenditure of town funds.

Christensen said there has been some talk of employing a regional dispatching point but there is no financial incentive for such action.

Hingham, Hull and Cohasset discussed establishment of a central communications center but that talk has not been followed by any action.

A state board is currently working out the regulations. Once they are established, the communities will have one year to come up with a plan for implementing the new program.

When the enhanced 911 system is in place, a caller would be readily traced as soon as the line connected into the emergency number. Making this part of the project a reality requires the phone company to rewire some areas along the border of certain communities to ensure the right emergency center gets the call.

Voke's Abington campus in jeopardy

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

If a state law is allowed to expire — it could mean the end of the Abington Vo-Tech campus.

Vo-Tech business manager, Robert J. Kelley, Jr. said last week that by statute South Shore Vo-Tech is reimbursed for 65 percent of the rent it pays to lease a school building in Abington.

He said if the governor allows the law to expire June 30 — it could cost Vo-Tech about $142,000 out of its FY'93 budget. Vo-Tech recently signed a one-year lease with Abington officials. The regional school committee hoped to have more information this week from State Rep. Michael Sullivan (R-Abington), Kelley said. Kelley said it was unclear if South Shore could be "grandfathered in" if the law expired.

But in the interim the regional school board formed a subcommittee to study the possibility of consolidating the regional high school on its Hanover campus.

Hanover's representative Louis Crescenzi said that the school board should look at closing the Abington campus at the end of this school year. He said the budget — which Supt. Dr. Clifford Easton has proposed be level funded to last year's level — can't take a $140,000 cut, which is what would occur without state reimbursement.

Easton tried to persuade the regional school board that they could "buy another year" by reducing the budget in a combination of areas without hurting direct services to the kids should reimbursement not occur.

Larry Mitchell of Cohasset said the school "needed a year's grace to merge everything in Hanover."

School committee chairman, Robert Molla Jr., appointed a subcommittee consisting of Abington director John Kosko; guidance director, Pam Titus; Mitchell, Kelley, and a member of the teaching staff to examine the possibility of consolidation.

Bank president . . .

is exceedingly decisive. He makes up his mind after he has studied an issue, and he gets it done."

Although Philipsen admits a full economic recovery is unlikely in the immediate future, he predicts an eventual revival both for his bank and the South Shore in general.

Philipsen's optimism about the bank's future is fostered by the nature of Rockland Trust's investments, which are primarily residential real estate loans.

"I think the residential market is going to climb out one hell of a lot faster than the commercial part. I think that could be here for 15 years, and we just don't have as much of it," he said. "That makes for an enormous difference."

Declining interest rates have set the stage for a recovery of the residential real estate market, Philipsen noted, and first-time homeowners have more incentive to buy.

Banking was not Philipsen's first career. After receiving his master's degree in business administration from Cornell University, the Vermont native went to work for Ford Motor Co. At Ford, one of Philipsen's major duties was to rein in the research department's $200 million budget.

One of Philipsen's reasons for choosing Ford was his ambition to work in the company's South American division, but the outfit soon was consolidated with the European group. Philipsen then went to work at W.R. Grace & Co.'s Dewey and Almy chemical division in Cambridge, again with the thought of working in the Latin American division. When Grace eliminated its own division, Philipsen, who had two children by this point, considered changing careers.

"I thought major changes were coming down the pike in banking and said, 'That's where I want to be,'" he said. "Maybe I was guessing, but I was right."

When Philipsen entered the banking industry in the early 1970s, there had been few changes in the way most financial institutions had been doing business for decades. But as Philipsen had predicted, his early years were accompanied by such innovations as the creation of the NOW account, savings banks' introduction of checking accounts, and the deregulation of the banking industry.

Now, after serving as an executive at three Bay State lending institutions since 1972, Philipsen is beginning the task of righting Rockland Trust's affairs.

Why should customers choose Rockland Trust? Part of the answer, Philipsen said, can be found in the old business adage of "location, location and location." The bank and its sister affiliate, Middleborough Trust, have 30 branch offices. Industry studies have determined that most people select their banks based upon convenience.

"The reason retail customers do business is because of convenience. We have the locations, there's no question about that," he said.

Philipsen acknowledged that the bank has plans to close "a couple" of branches in the near future but declined to provide further details at this time. Those plans notwithstanding, Philipsen is wary about seriously diminishing the bank's services.

"The greatest value of Rockland Trust is our distribution network. Those branches and ATM's (automated teller machines) are what makes it convenient," he said. "I'll be damned if I dismantle that network."

Bank customers also appreciate seeing a familiar face behind the teller's window, Philipsen said, and Rockland Trust has been successful at minimizing staff turnover.

Rockland Trust also is committed to assisting small businesses, although tighter lending practices have limited the range of projects the bank can finance, Philipsen said. The bank is nonetheless actively seeking loan customers, he said.

Philipsen served as chief financial officer, senior vice-president, and later executive vice-president of Essexbank in Peabody. In 1983 he joined Berkshire Bank and Trust Co. in Pittsfield before becoming president and CEO of Bank of New England-Worcester. Philipsen resigned from BNE-Worcester in November 1990 because he "didn't enjoy the way the bank did business. I really didn't think BNE understood community banking," he said.

His experience with BNE reenforced Philipsen's philosophy of community banking.

"First and foremost, remember that what pays the bills are the customers," he said. "And you need a highly-motivated and knowledgeable staff. You've got to remove the turmoil factor.

"What it boils down to is bigger sometimes is not better," he said.

Paramedics . . .

and the first level is basic. The third and highest level of training is paramedic.

ALS service will supplement, not replace, existing emergency medical services in the communities. Cass said that most routine medical emergencies will continue to be handled by the towns' fire departments or ambulance companies, with the ALS service accompanying them to the life-threatening emergencies.

The ALS service will not have ambulances at its disposal, other than those already available to the towns. Cass said the hospital is purchasing a four-wheel drive vehicle, similar to a Bronco, to allow the ALS paramedics to reach victims quickly, regardless of terrain or weather problems. Victims will continue to be transported to the hospital in the towns' ambulances.

"As long as we coordinate, no problems should arise," Hingham Fire Lt. Lincoln Hersey, emergency medical service director said.

Hersey said he is awaiting the hospital's plan for integrating the two levels of service. He added that the integration of Hingham's Fire Department procedures with those of the ALS service would require a "total commitment by everyone."

Dispatchers will play a pivotal role in the coordination effort because they receive medical emergency calls and direct the emergency medical effort within the towns. By May, the dispatchers will also be responsible for directing the response of the ALS paramedics.

"The town dispatchers will have a list of guidelines of when to call the paramedics," Cass said.

Reducing response time, she said, will be a priority of the service. "They might meet the towns' EMTs at the scene of the accident, or they might meet them enroute to the hospital," Cass said.

Two paramedics will staff each ALS response trip and the cost, according to Cass, will be approximately $400. She said insurance carriers' would pay for the service.

Having received state approval three weeks ago, Cass said she will be hiring eight full-time paramedics and training the local dispatchers in the near future.

She added that the service's annual operating cost of $350,000 will be absorbed by South Shore Hospital.

Does the town do enough for seniors?

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The personnel board and selectmen met Tuesday to go over reasons behind the Council on Aging's request to upgrade the pay scale of COA director Kathy Bryanton.

There was no immediate decision in the matter.

Several members of the COA attended the meeting to back up Bryanton. The council wants the director paid at the same rate as the recreation director and harbormaster.

The selectmen left the room before the meeting was over since their own agenda called for other town business transactions. The selectmen spent about an hour and a half listening to the details of the senior center's operation.

In the six years of operation as a senior center, the COA programs have increased from two to 20.

"How far does the town want go in expanding its programs for this population?" Personnel Board member Joan Brown asked selectmen.

The majority of the board said that was not the question at hand — but more than one of the members echoed Selectman Rocco Laugelle's comment that, as far as he was concerned, the town wasn't doing enough for the seniors.

Selectman Jane Goedecke pointed out that it wasn't up to the personnel board to question whether the programs should expand. She said the task was to decide whether the town was paying at an appropriate rate for the work required.

Bryanton answered questions patiently about the level of service and her level of involvement during the legnthy meeting.

Since it was welcomed to share space in the Community Center in January of 1986, the council's major programs have functioned out of one office and one function room.

Now the center is ready to expand into new space within the Community Center. Seniors will be given rent-free for the next nine years in exchange for helping with the fundraising drive for the expansion.

Since 1986, the COA has served its membership with a plethora of programs including:

•OUTREACH, which offers seniors and their families at-home counseling;
•SHINE, which provides seniors with a pre-retirement program and planning series;
•special needs exercise programs;
•home delivered meals;
•health and wellness clinics;
•recreation and socialization programs;
•employment assistance and placement counseling;
•educational programs; and •transportation assistance.

The COA is responsible for serving all of the 1,500 senior citizens living in Cohasset.

The age group amounts to about 20 percent of the town's population.

Possible Blue Hills merger is in the wind

By Denise Falbo and Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Although the Vo-Tech school board chairman said "not interested" — the regional school committee has invited its Blue Hills counterpart to the table to discuss a possible merger of the two districts.

The joint meeting is set for 7:30 p.m., Feb. 5 at the South Shore Vo-Tech library.

Regional school committee chairman, Robert Molla Jr., said recently that the merger — which was proposed by Blue Hills — was just "idle chatter." Molla said he's been on the Vo-Tech school board long enough to read the votes of the regional school committee, that — in his view — would nix the idea.

But after the Vo-Tech meeting last week, Molla said the regional school committee would at least hear what Blue Hills has to say.

"Philip Doherty (Blue Hills board chairman) called me to set up a meeting to see what it's all about," Molla said. "We'll just sit down and discuss it and see if we should talk about it further." Blue Hills Supt. Director Wilfrid Savoie said a merger would benefit both regions.

"In these times, if there is any opportunity for cost savings we owe it to ourselves and the students to consider it," Savoie said recently of the merger proposal. "If cost savings were not significant, we would not do it."

But after the board meeting last week, South Shore Supt. Dr. Clifford Easton said the merger might be cost effective, "But at what price?" He said "because of access" a merger would diminish the numbers of high-school age youngsters who attend South Shore Vo-Tech from the eight-town region.

South Shore Vo-Tech's member towns are Norwell, Hanover, Abington, Rockland, Hanson, Whitman, Cohasset, and Scituate. The high school also draws heavily from Marshfield and several other out-of-district towns.

Easton, who is about to retire as superintendent, also said if there had not been a void in leadership at Vo-Tech due to his pending retirement, the idea probably wouldn't have come this far.

Savoie, who said he will propose himself for the job as superintendent/director of the merged district, said the administrative change at Vo-Tech "was a window of opportunity to make the change."

He said concern over local control, fear of change, and fear of losing programs would be the greatest obstacles to the plan. "Everyone is facing this local control issue when they talk about regionalizing things like schools and fire departments. We have created these artificial limits called city and town boundaries. We (Blue Hills vo-tech) have shown that regionalization can work. Governor Weld has encouraged superintendents to be multi-district managers," Savoie said.

Savoie said student life would remain virtually unchanged by his plan, which would affect mostly administrative functions such as the finance office, purchasing, and data processing. Joint purchasing and combining offices would result in savings, he said.

About 800 high school and 90 post-graduate students attend Blue Hills, which has a capacity of 1,150. South Shore Vo-Tech has 385 students, with a capacity of 1,200.

Bowers returns to Conway

After 22 successful years as one of the top producers for DeWolfe Real Estate in Hingham, Arlene Bowers has returned to Jack Conway and Company, Inc., where she started her real estate career in the early 1960s. She left DeWolfe at the end of the year.

Bowers will work out of Conway's Cohasset Office, where she worked from 1960 to 1967. Said Cohasset Manager Mary Ellen Neagle, "Having Arlene back home in Conway's Cohasset Office is a real coup. We've been impressed with her high sales record at DeWolfe, as well as her knowledge and expertise in today's South Shore real estate market."

A resident of Hingham, Bowers worked in the Hingham Office of David Chase and Company (now DeWolfe Real Estate) where she was one of the top brokers for the past 22 years. In that time Bowers accumulated numerous awards as a "million dollar" realtor each year, reaching the three million dollar annual sales figure in home market sales on a number of occasions. She holds the coveted real estate designations GRI (Graduate, Realtor Institute), CRS (Certified Residential Specialist) and CREA (Certified Real Estate Appraiser).

In making her decision to rejoin Jack Conway and Company, Inc., Bowers said, "It was an easy decision to rejoin Jack Conway and Company, because I know first-hand that Jack has the utmost respect for his sales associates. It's good to be back home."

Paul Tsongas in perspective

Winner declared in the cold war — Japan

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

analysis

"The cold war is over and Japan won," the candidate said. Unlike his peers in the presidential race, though, his follow-up wasn't filled with the "America-first, America-best" rhetoric that is standard fare for this year's campaign speeches. Unfortunately, he was also odd-man out in the charisma department.

"We are going to have to build better products, kids are going to have to go to school longer and we'll have to save more."

Like the man himself, Paul Tsongas' message, delivered to the New England Press Association in Boston last Saturday, was refreshingly sincere. And likely devoid of marketing potential.

He walks funny, he talks funny, his gestures appear self-conscious and he's physically unattractive. If he has a handler, he should be fired. Beyond the exterior, though, he is arguably the most well-informed candidate running for President. The question is: Does anyone care about substance in a presidential race?

A Call to Arms , his 96-page treatise on fixing America, does the unthinkable and commits to non-erasable print his views on the economy, environment, education, energy and foreign policy. A Call To Arms is Tsongas' reaction to the Bush campaign of '88,"One thing is clear. Democrats must avoid, at all costs, emulating the 'Pledge of Allegiance/Willie Horton/ Read my Lips' campaign of George Bush. That campaign was designed to win in November, not govern in January.'"

Tsongas' problem is the reverse: he is ready and able to govern in January, whether or not his intellect alone can get him elected in November remains to be seen. He's studied the issues, not the angles.

The thrust of his message is to shore up the domestic manufacturing base. It's not a sexy subject and lacks spin value. He's rightly made it the center of the campaign.

According to Tsongas, the United States today has only 17 percent of its total workforce in manufacturing, down from 26 percent in 1970. The Germans have 33 percent of their companies in manufacturing and the Japanese have 28 percent.

He is full of examples of the U.S.'s economic decline: In the '70s the U.S. paid its production workers the highest wages in the world and still maintained a positive balance of trade. Today, Tsongas says, nine other nations pay higher wages than the U.S. and still the U.S. trade balance is chronically negative.

Tsongas doesn't blame any other country for America's problems. He blames the Reagan-Bush leadership, "They pumped up the economy with debt. The debt was like steroids are to a football player- great game now and shot knees later."

Tsongas' recommended surgery doesn't include protectionism,"It says to the American manufacturer 'No matter how bad you make it, we'll buy it.' I owned a Ford Pinto and Chevy Vega. I learned my lesson."

He's resolute that there is no quick fix to this problem, unlike other candidates. He says corporate America has to start investing revenues back into companies, and not distribute it to shareholders. He wants to limit corporate liability to shareholders, citing it as an obstacle to long-term corporate success through reinvestment of profits versus distribution of them.

Tsongas has overcome long odds before. The concept of a booklet with specific proposals as a marketing tool was privately lambasted by political consulting firms. The front-runner in the New Hampshire primary, Governor Bill Clinton, has recently announced he also will introduce a book of sorts, as has Bob Kerrey.

Fellow democratic candidates, so prone towards one-upmanship in the early days of a campaign, praised Tsongas' economic solutions during this week's democratic debates.

For an informed voter, the success of his campaign hinges on the public's tolerance for swallowing a difficult truth. There is no easy answer and to paraphrase Tsongas, life is not a beer commercial. The United States cannot turn around its sliding rank in the world marketplace without self-sacrifice and hard work. The message isn't really new to anyone with a responsible parent. Unless you only brought home As.

Science Center might affiliate with Audubon

By Judy Enright
Mariner staff

South Shore Natural Science Center trustees met last week and discussed the possibility of affiliating their organization with the Audubon Society.

A six-member committee was formed, headed by J. Leonard Bicknell, chairman of the board, to report back on proposals including the reconfiguration of the organization and reassessment of staff requirements at the Norwell nature center. He said he hoped the report could be finished within four to six weeks.

The trustees' action followed by several weeks the resignation of Barbara Easterday, director of the Center for the past 18 months. Her resignation was effective Dec. 31. She cited personal and professional reasons, according to Bicknell. Bill Perkins, a naturalist, educator and writer who has been associated with the Science Center for 18 years, was appointed interim executive director.

Bicknell said that preliminary talks have already been held with David Clapp and Gary Clayton from Audubon. "They are interested in expanding their programs on the South Shore and there is a possibility of streamlining our organization and using their expertise." He added that Audubon would like "to do more with environmental education.

"In some ways," Bicknell added, "we're paralleling their work."

Bicknell said the Science Center "is running normally. We':re not missing a beat."

He added that the cash flow for December was positive. He had said earlier that the Center "is still in financial difficulty but we have a plan to reach a balanced budget by the end of the fiscal year (March 30). We have made progress. I wouldn't call it a crisis but it's a tough business environment."

Lead poisoning threat

Lead poisoning is the most common environmental disease in children under 6, yet many cases go undetected or untreated. Many children show no symptoms. Others have symptoms that are mistaken for a cold, fatigue, or behavior problems.

Too often, parents and physicians alike assume that the threat of lead poisoning is limited to poor children in ghettos. In fact, the threat of lead poisoning is greatest for any child under 6 living in a home built before 1980.

Joanne Parker, a public health nurse advisor with the Massachusetts Lead Poisoning Prevention Program, will discuss prevention, detection, and treatment of lead poisoning in young children at 7:15 p.m., Thursday, Jan. 22 at Cohasset High School. Parker's presentation will focus on the sources of lead poisoning that are most prevalent in Cohasset homes and neighborhoods.

Just a good, brave man

The late Sidney Hook, noted political philosopher, distinguished two types of heroes in history. The first and most common, are those made by history. In other words, they happen to be at the right place at the right time. They ride the crest of the wave of history to fame and what passes for immortality on the human plane.

The other type of hero is the person who makes history. These heroes make events, unlike the former type who are made by events.

Martin Luther King Jr. was a hero of the latter category. Of course, the historical stage was set for him, and his work was the culmination of centuries of black involvement in the history of the United States.

After the integration of the armed forces in the Korean War, and the Supreme Court decision in Brown vs the Board of Education, American blacks would not/could not tolerate second-class status any longer.

The question was how to achieve the political and social goals of equality. The southern-born, northern-educated King founded the Southern Leadership Council in 1957 to combat racism and segregationist laws. In this effort he followed the work of the late Mahatma Gandhi, adopting his non-violent methods.

Last Monday we celebrated (along with most of the country), the birthday of King. In many respects the dreams of equality he sought to manifest have been realized.

Institutional racism is by-and-large a thing of the past. The many legislative civil rights acts have tried to right institutionalized wrongs. Although there are de facto pockets of segregated housing and education, they are no longer in existence de jure. This change, although mightily significant, is the easy part.

The difficult part, as King himself noted would be in changing individual hearts and minds.

King was killed before his 40th birthday. He was a man who would never see his young children grow to adulthood. He never knew the pleasures of being a grandfather. However he was aware that his work would lead to a better world for both his children and grandchildren...for all of our children and grandchildren.

During and after his brief life he had his detractors. Some say the measure of a man is in his enemies. If this is the case, King was a great man for he affronted both sides, the white status quo establishment and the radical black factions.

The former attacked him for his human weaknesses, although he never claimed sainthood for himself. The latter attacked him for his dedication to non-violence and the rule of law.

Today he is honored by most Americans as a good man with the courage of his convictions. He is a light for all people in all conditions. His unwaivering commitment to his principles and his enormous personal courage are examples of the best of the American character.

Who among us would face down charging police dogs...tear gas tossing sheriffs...racist courts and judges? Who among us would give up our lives knowingly, for others and the future of our country?

No, Martin Luther King Jr. was not a saint. He was just a good, brave man who helped change history.

As with all social/political heroes, King's life points beyond itself. In this sense a national day of recognition is fitting. For in honoring King, we honor all who have stood up for right against injustice.

In an era where the Klan still intimidates and would-be Nazi skinheads strut our streets, it's good to honor just a good, brave man.

Society offers Bigelow town history

letters

To the Editor:

Two stories dealing with matters of concern to the Cohasset Historical Society, appear side by side on page 20 of last week's Mariner.

The first story, nicely boxed and shaded, is a reprint from the Society's Fall newsletter and deals with a cooperative venture between the Society and the Community Garden Club for the enhancement and care of the Lothrop House grounds. It also pays tribute to the Cohasset Garden Club for their attention to the plantings at the Village museums over a long period of years. We appreciate having the Mariner run this piece.

Our reaction to the abutting story is quite different. We are shocked and dismayed to read that a book publisher in Salem has reprinted A Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset" by E. Victor Bigelow, originally published in 1898, and has placed a statement in your paper that this book was out of print. This is not true.

This book has been reprinted by the Cohasset Historical Society twice. It was reprinted during the 1970 Bicentennial celebration, and again more recently. It is in good supply and sells for $20 plus Mass. sales tax. Anyone wishing to purchase this outstanding work may do so by calling, writing, or visiting the Society headquarters at the Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset, MA 02025, telephone 383-6930.

It is regrettable that the company went forward with this project without checking the status of the book with any community entity as is the usual procedure in cases of this kind.

Dr. Pompeo's notice criticized by the SSL

To the Editor:

In response to Dr. Pompeo's notice of Jan. 9, 1992:

The best means of controlling breast cancer is early detection. The Social Service League of Cohasset, a non-profit service organization, and the Cohasset Board of Health bring the Mobile Diagnostics Mammography Van to Cohasset to give the women of Cohasset and surrounding access to mammography screening.

Mobile Diagnostics provides women with a convenient, safe, and less expensive means of having baseline or annual mammograms, and is not meant to be a replacement for a physician's care. A copy of each patient's mammogram is sent to her doctor for her records. If the X-ray is abnormal, the patient's physician is notified within forty-eight hours by phone.

Women are notorious for taking care of the health of their families, while perhaps shelving their needs until a more convenient time, or crisis arises. The Social Service League of Cohasset and the Board of Health seek to encourage women to take better care of themselves. Since the Social Service League sponsored visits began in 1988, 134 women have had mammograms taken. Breast exam and mammography remain the only two means of early detection available to women at this time.

Mobile Diagnostics was selected because they have a fully equipped, hospital quality, permanently mounted, state of the art, low dosage. General Electric, CGR mammography unit. Radiation level is well below the recommended dosage. They have not only met the requirements of the Massachusetts Radiation Control, but also the American College of Radiology.

The Social Service League and the Cohasset Board of Health will continue to promote public awareness of critical health issues with educational and preventative services and to provide the means for prevention and detection whenever possible. The Mobile Diagnostics Van will continue to be a part of that effort by providing a means of early detection in the fight against this dreaded disease — Breast cancer.

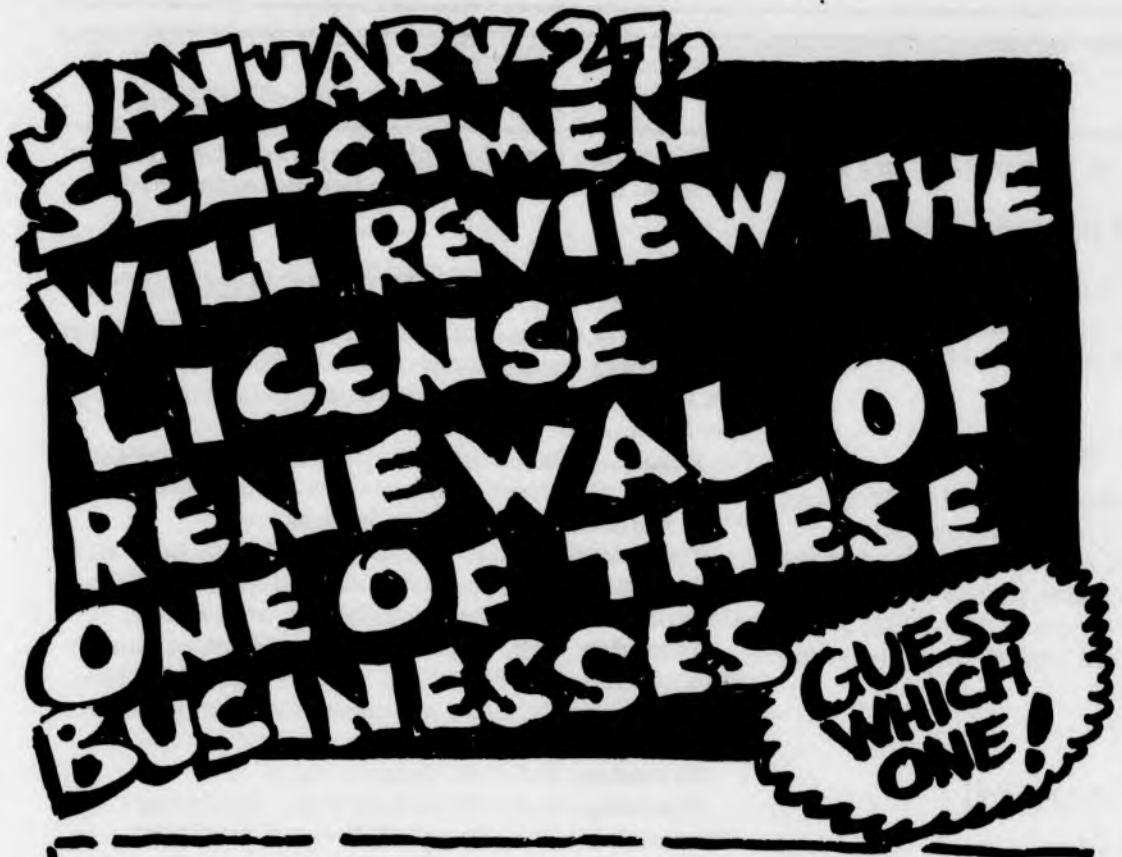
SAFE plans study of CHL report by Feb. 3

To the Editor:



As you have probably read, the Cohasset Heights re-application for expansion has been released. They have applied to expand 100 percent in size and accept 900 tons per day of general refuse and recyclables. The general public is given only 30 days to comment on this application.

Public comment is critically important in affecting the state's consideration of the future use of CHL. Last time, letters from various town boards and citizens helped get their application sent back for further research. The public comment period expires on Feb. 7, so letters must be mailed by Feb. 3.

SAFE is asking for a very small commitment from you. We are asking that you attend one short meeting (two are scheduled) and write one letter. Meetings will be held at the Unitarian Parish House on Wednesdays, Jan. 22 and 29, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Participants will discuss the contents of the application and the proper format for responding.

Sooner or later...we all leave Osgood Play Park

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Political Columnist

Now, while I have certainly been stern with the Tinytown selectmen over the past year I am upset when they are criticized unfairly.

In the Jan. 13 film Police Chief Joseph Kealy reprimanded the selectmen for not championing the police contract at a special town meeting last fall. And do you know what they did? (Censored by PD).

Do you know what they should have done? They should have said:

"Where were you last fall, Joe?

"Don't we pay you to be the leader of this department?"

Another important missing person at that October special meeting was Atty. Robert Garrett, the selectmen's labor counsel. He spent months, years, decades negotiating that contract for the selectmen, and we paid him well, but does he bother to show up at the special in case there are any questions?

Naw. Cohasset town meeting always passes the police contract. No problem.

Only last year there was a problem. The economy. One couldn't pick up a newspaper without hearing about it.

Neither the selectmen nor the personnel board were able to answer very many questions about the police contract at that last special meeting.

Police Association President Paul Laugelle was left hanging in the wind, with no labor counsel or chief to put in a few good words for the association or its contract.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson tried to pull some of it together, but he doesn't negotiate that contract and why should he have to pull Garrett's weight?

And then along came Joe...four months later.

But I'll give him credit. After telling his bosses where to get off, he won their support for four new cruisers and $9,000 towards the purchase of semi-automatic weapons. (The police department is very sensitive about having up-to-date weapons. That sensitivity stems back from the time Boston Magazine called them the gang that couldn't shoot straight and mocked their uncoordinated weaponry. And, the guys took it hard.

Mercy days.

Someday when I am Selectqueen I shall order the police chief and all special counsels with articles before the meeting to attend the meetings at no extra charge to the town. They will either be there or I'll have their heads.

commentary

Ms. Leigh-Anne Walsh, daughter of Angie and Dan, called me with a sales pitch so strong, so good, and described the Girl Scout cookies so deliciously that I ordered six assorted boxes, thought about the mouth-watering adjectives she used on those wonderful "Tag-a-longs" for 15 minutes, and called back and ordered four more boxes.

Other friends of mine have reported similar stalwart sales tactics from the Girl Scouts this year. Simply irresistible.

Should Greg Doyan be parking clerk? This is one of those questions that only persons like Richard Barrow — who plays Tinytown trivia 365 days a year — care about.

Barrow appears to be correct.

According to the General Laws, Chapter 90 Section 20A, the selectmen shall designate or appoint a parking clerk "who may also perform other municipal functions except police functions."

The Commonwealth, in its great wisdom, wished the persons who write the tickets and those who collect the money and/or who must appeal to the parking clerk, to remain separate for obvious reasons (graft and corruption).

There is no doubt that Doyan performs police functions. He meets with Chief Kealy weekly and directs Kealy and his department through the board of selectmen. Also, Doyan, through the board of selectmen, can issue tickets for bylaw violations which makes him some kind of super cop, we guess.

In summary, Doyan performs police functions; therefore, Doyan should not be parking clerk.

John McNabb, who is no longer a rumor, and who is a candidate for selectmen, has created an article for annual town meeting which would require the selectmen to cause to have published in the annual warrant a listing of the status of lawsuits settled or on-going accompanied by money spent. An excellent idea.

Many towns have similar articles.

Is this usurping the power of the board of selectmen? Definitely. They should be doing this on their own, and they should have this information at their fingertips. They won't, they don't.

While the average citizen can request that this information be made public, a citizen cannot require government to "compile" information. And the town's legal bills, etc., need some sorting out.

When the selectmen refuse to know, the public needs to know more than ever.

Monday, Jan. 27 the selectmen hold two hearings...Cohasset Imports and Cohasset Liquors.

Tuesday, Jan. 28 Government Structure meets at town hall with the vigilante fire study group (note all lower cases) and the Cohasset School Committee — both with regard to regional issues.

In last week's Mariner School Committeeman Ralph Kidder "hinted" that a regional (school) district could not be selective and elite. And added: "It would have to be a large scale regionalization to work...and a large scale regionalization must include Hull."

Well, that's the way it goes, Ralph. Sooner or later we all have to leave Osgood Play Park.

government did not require it.

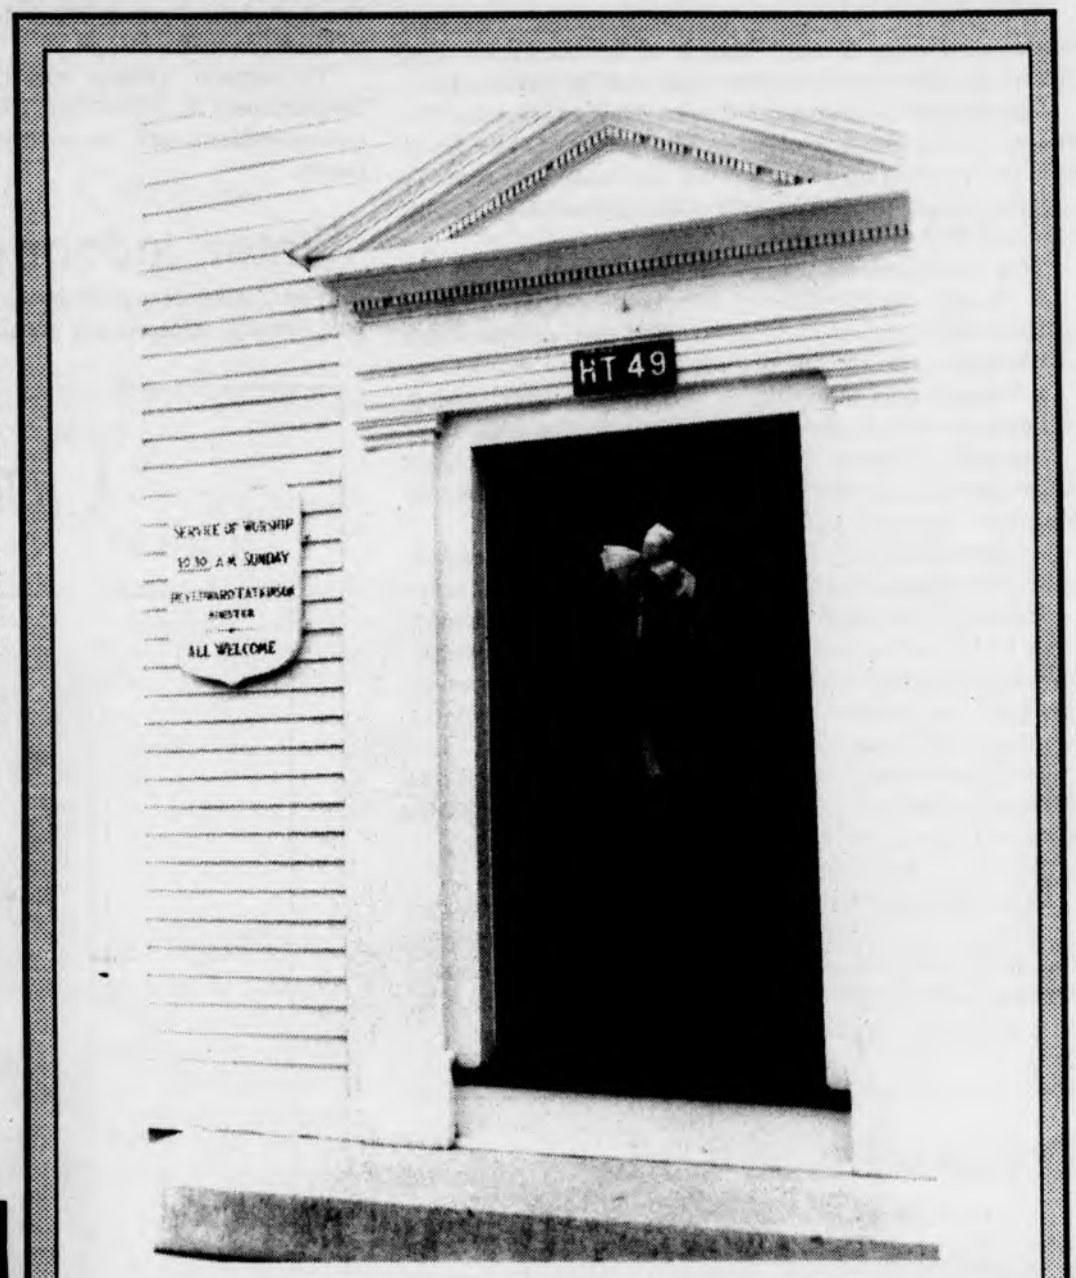
Tertiary treatment is one step beyond the secondary treatment called for by the plan. The older system employed for years by the regional sewer system provided for only primary treatment of the sewage. At times of high water, untreated sewage has been regularly dumped into the harbor.

It would cost $3 billion for tertiary treatment, according to Connors. The outfall is a $12 million project. The entire cleanup project is expected to cost about $6 billion.

The price of the cleanup project means bills for those on the MWRA sewer system will rise from an average of $500 a year to $1,500 a year by the end of the century.

Connors said the MWRA has spent $2 to $3 million on studies since the decision in 1987-88 to be sure the site of the outfall was at the best possible place.

"So far the results have verified the decision," Connors said.



Sen. Robert Hedlund and other South Shore legislators plan to meet soon with MWRA officials on some tests that prove the extent of impact on South Shore beaches. Hedlund (commenting after the coalition meeting) said he is concerned about the test results handled by the US Geological Survey. The test involved the release of 350 drifters — small twoo-foot long yellow umbrell-shaped objects. Only 26 percent of the drifters were recovered from beaches after the tests — 60 percent of those were recovered along a 30-mile stretch between Scituate and Plymouth.

Connors said the only way the outfall could fail would be in the event of an earthquake. If that happened, treated sewage would be discharged directly into the harbor at Deer and Nut Islands.

He pointed out that this is what is already happening — but the degree of treatment will increase when the secondary treatment plant is constructed.

When asked if the new system would result in shellfish beds being reopened along the South Shore, Pillsbury said the problem isn't the MWRA discharge. He blamed boaters, septic systems that discharge into the water and smaller sewage treatment plants in this area.

"We have to look to our own backyard for the bacteria," Pillsbury said.

The door to the First Parish Church on the Common. There are no toilet facilities inside the 244-year-old church. An article in the warrant of the annual Town Meeting will ask the voters for a maintenance easement so a septic system might be installed in the Common. A small vestry would be constructed if the approval is granted.

Frosty Frolic & "Happy Days"

The Cohasset Community Center's Annual Frosty Frolic Dance will be held Saturday evening, Jan. 25 from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m.

The theme for this year's gala fundraising event is "Happy Days," featuring fifties decorations and music, spotlight dances, and lip sinc contests.

Darlene Hubley, Jane Goff, Laura McAuliffe, Barbara Henderson, and Carolyn Bailey have been working together using their creative ideas and talents to ensure a fun and festive atmosphere.

A DJ will be on hand to provide a wide variety of music for dancing and listening pleasure. Ladies pull out those saddle shoes and poodle skirts from high school. Gents try on those letter jackets and crew neck sweaters and join us on the 25th! Dress is very casual!

Ticket donations are $30 per couple and may be reserved or purchased at the Community Center Office.

through the chest and head and back to the resting place.

McAlear talks about the importance of moving the Chi back to the tin tan after the session. At the close of his hour, he asks the participants to lock the energy in place by visualizing a tying movement going clockwise and counter-clockwise.

Some people use T'ai Chi as a martial art. As a fighting art, a student learns to use the strength of the opponent against himself. McAlear isn't teaching fighting skills in his hour-long session.

"I teach T'ai Chi for health," he said. "I've seen people become healthier as a result of the practice."

McAlear's own story of how he discovered the stress reducing properties of T'ai Chi goes back about 25 years.

"It was 5 o'clock in the morning in Hong Kong, having jet lag I was taking a walk when the sidewalks, parks and every open space filled up with people doing a slow moving exercise. At 6 o'clock they all disappeared. My introduction to T'ai Chi," McAlear says in explanation of his background.

"If all these people thought it was important enough to get up at 6 o'clock in the morning to do this then this was something I should learn more about.

"In the next 10 years I read about it and learned of its connections with stress control (a modern business problem if there ever was one). But I couldn't locate a master and learning from a book did not seem to work.

"Then I was referred to Professor Eugene Liu who lives in Milton and taught in Boston. Professor Liu learned and practiced T'ai Chi for over 40 years with three masters on mainland China and Taiwan before coming to the USA. Professor Lui practices and teaches Yang style T'ai Chi as taught by Chin, Man-Ching, the great Taiwan master."

The course for senior citizens in specially adapted for the age group. McAlear teaches several other courses in the area for nonspecific age groups.

He says the results of the stress reduction techniques take some time — but he isn't talking about years.

He said the Chinese believe sickness of the stomach comes from fear; sickness of the chest comes from anger and allergies arise from stress.

Anthony McAlear, T'ai Chi instructor, leads the seniors class at 9 Depot Court in the expansion area of the Cohasset Community Center.

Gospel music comes to Old Ship Church

More than 30 voices strong, The New Temple Singers of Cambridge will perform a program of gospel music at the Old Ship Candlelight Concert in the Meeting House, 90 Main St., Hingham, at 4 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 26.

The group is directed by Dianne Thornton and was originally formed to provide a missing dimension to Sunday morning worship services at St. Paul AME Church following the pattern of a former choir.

Helen Brown, spokesperson for the group, said "The name New Temple Singers reflected the special spiritual transformation many of the members had begun to experience."

The inspiration of the choir seems to have imbued the spirit to many others. Since 1972 the choir has been invited to participate in services and programs all along the eastern seaboard. They have appeared on the television programs "Higher Ground" "Lift Every Voice" and in 1989 appeared with the gospel singer Wintley Phipps on the WCVB-TV Channel 5 production, "We Sing the Dream: A Tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr."

The New Temple Singers include instrumental support from conga, traps and African percussion. Their program will include performances of "Call Him Up," "How I Got Over," "Didn't My Lord Deliver Daniel" and variety of traditional and contemporary Gospel music.

The celebration of great music in the warm historic environment of Old Ship Church has been a tradition in Hingham for two decades. The concerts are funded in part by free will donations from friends of the Candlelight Concerts at Old Ship Church. The next performance in the current series is scheduled for April 12 with a concert by the Lark Quartet. For additional information call 749-3259.

A Christmas Tale through the eyes of a performer

By Caroline deLima
Grade 8 student

Part One

Christmas in May? BAH HUMBUG! It's strange but true. May is the month when the experience of being in the Huntington Theater's production of "A Christmas Carol" began. This experience opened my eyes to the time-consuming, energy-draining, but exhilarating world of professional theater. The production of the show was divided into three general categories: the auditions, the rehearsals, and the performances.

The auditions were by far the scariest of the three processes. My mother told me that the theater was looking for a girl to play the character "Belinda," which was a part that I had played a year earlier in a local production of "A Christmas Carol." I immediately jumped at the chance and drove into Boston with my mother, who was also auditioning for a part. I was as nervous as a bride at a wedding! I kept saying to myself, "There is no chance that I will make it, but the audition will give you more confidence for when you try out for local shows." I had prepared a simple English carol to perform for what turned out to be a surprisingly small audience: The director, the producer, and their various secretaries.

Afterward I thought it had gone surprisingly well, but I was still shocked to hear, a week later, that I had been called back for a second audition. Now my mom was telling me not to get my hopes up, as was the little, rational voice inside of my head.

For the "call back" auditions, in early June, I was given lines from the play in which Belinda had a significant part. I spent hours memorizing the lines and also practicing my English with my British mother. Finally the time came. Having commuted to Boston once again and walked apprehensively into the audition room, we each performed our lines and were finished in five minutes. Then all that was left to do was to wait and see if we were cast or cut. We were told we probably wouldn't hear any news until the end of July because the casting directors were going to New York to hold auditions there as well. This put the lid on the can. We knew that our chances of being cast were so slim we just carried on with our lives and tried to forget the play.

In the beginning of July, I went to the summer camp that I had gone to the year before and on the second weekend I was there my mother unexpectedly called. She told me that we were both cast; she as the laundress and me as Belinda. I was so astonished I couldn't speak, but after a few minutes I definitely got my voice back and, to the surprise of the innocent secretary, to scream. The first process was over and now I could rest easily until November, and rehearsals.

Rehearsals started at the beginning of the month and lásted for four weeks. The first day we met the cast and the director, Larry Carpenter, who told us what he expected of the cast and crew. He also told us what his vision of the end product would be. When he had completed his pep talk we read through the script, all of us as our separate roles. Then we adjourned.

The following day the true rehearsals began: a strict schedule of eight hours a day, starting at noon, six days a week. This schedule was unusual because professional theaters normally work from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. In this production, however, there were so many kids that the management decided to schedule rehearsals around the school day. This schedule had some advantages and some disadvantages. On the positive side, the director had the chance to work with the adults alone, but on the negative side, the adults might have practiced a specific scene before three o'clock, when the kids usually arrived. Therefore, they would have to do the same scene over again with the kids. Overall, I think this schedule worked out with all of the kids except for me. Transportation was a problem, since mom also had a busy schedule. However, a combination of driving by a family friend, the public transportation system, and my own two feet eventually brought me to the theater in time. It was a long haul but it was fairly easy.

For the first two weeks, the rehearsals were monotonous but intriguing. Those weeks were intended for learning our blocking, lines, various carols, the placement of scenery. The following week was for bringing the scenes together, putting them in order, and for obtaining the sense of flow, rhythm, and (as the director whispered feelingly) "unanimity" that he felt the show lacked. The last week before the run of the show was the most exciting. During this week we moved into the Wilbur Theater, where the show was to be performed, and practiced with props, scenery, microphones, lights, and pyrotechnics. Finally we were ready for the run of the show.

The performances started on Dec. 1 and ticket sales were booming. Even though the show got mixed reviews, after the first week the "orchestra" section of the audience was practically sold for the run of the show. My schedule during the performances was rather hectic. There were eight shows a week (we had Mondays off) and some of the cast, including me, had understudy rehearsals and caroling in department store windows as well. The production process was the most exhausting one of my experience. It was more than a little tiring to arrive home at 1:30 because of a photo call, a semi-obligatory cast party or, in one extreme case, a fire drill, only to wake at 6:15 to get ready for school. Although the continuous late nights were exhausting, they were extremely exhilarating. At the end of the run, Dec. 29, I experienced a horrible anticlimax. The wonderful people, the excitement, and the fun of turning into a completely different person will definitely be sorely missed, but life has to go on.

Part Two

When I thought of theater, I mostly pictured actors and lights. These aspects are not even half of professional theater. In fact, the play could not take place without the technical and costuming contributions to the show.

The technical segment of the theater amazed me because it is so much more than lights and sound, although both of these aspects are important. The tech crew has an extensive job. Not only does it make sure every prop is bought or made, but it also builds and paints the scenery. During the show, it makes sure every prop is in its assigned place, operates the wagons (pieces of scenery that move on or off the stage mechanically), operates the lights, works the volumes of the microphones according to who is speaking. The crew worked very quietly back stage but made sure they didn't miss any of their cues.

Also, this specific show required a lot of difficult pyrotechnic, light, and sound cues. Our tech week was particularly grueling compared to other professional theater companies. The pyrotechnics were especially complex because they had to be discharged simultaneously with the sound of an explosion. We had to practice this several times before it was adequate. The sound cues were timed to correspond with footsteps, verses from various carols, and from different lines that the characters would speak.

Providing the lights was also extremely arduous because there were so many of them. The crew had to figure out which ones to use and for what scenes. Combined, they made a very tedious week for the actors but, in the final result, these aspects tied in very nicely with the director's view of the end product. Larry's idea was not quite completed yet. It lacked costumes.

Costumes were what turned the show into the picturesque scene that Larry was looking for. The costumes were started in mid-July with the picking out of fabrics, the drawing of individual costumes for the different characters, and the actual sewing of the costumes. To make sure the costumes were the perfect size, the costumers would make appointments with the actors for fittings. These fittings lasted right up until the second to last day before tech week because if the costume needed some adjustments the actor would have to be called back for more and more fittings to make it fit exactly. The costumes were made of some of the most delicious fabrics like velvet, silk, and lace. Before the actors could set a foot on stage, the costumers added some finishing touches like matching bonnets and reticules, shawls, and shoes. Now all the actors looked as if they had been plucked right out of a Charles Dicken's novel.

Part Three

Normally when people think of the actors, they think of what a glamorous life they lead. Well, this assumption couldn't be farther from the truth. Most actors are lucky if they can put food on the table, let alone own the beautiful mansions that society believes they own. The actors in this production often showed up at rehearsals wearing a t-shirt and slacks. Also actors normally have to move from one apartment to the next because their line of work requires them to travel constantly. Whenever they move they have to leave their new homes and friends behind, but most of the actors said that they could never imagine doing anything else because they adore what they do. One actor said he would rather be poor all of the time than wasting his life doing something he sort of liked. Now that there are so few jobs left for actors, they must get two or three part-time jobs to support themselves. My mother, in one way, has the best of all possible worlds because she can do what she loves best but not have to depend on her earnings. I wish I could say that about the rest of the cast because they are all such wonderful people with the amazing ability to make an audience laugh, cry, or just feel warm inside. I envy these people because they know what they want to do and they will do it no matter what obstacles stand in their way.

Life styles vary when it comes to eating in—those who live alone tell of taking a steak out of the freezer before leaving for work and coming home to setting a single place setting complete with a glowing candle and glass of wine. Dining in solitary splendor, another career woman confesses to being a bit of a slob and getting into a favorite old robe, throwing a packaged dinner into the micro. With her meal on a tray, she climbed into bed and watched TV. Eating on the run is a way of life for many in this busy world and in sharp contrast to the Yankee housewives who rarely let a Saturday go by without preparing a steaming pot of Eating out, is for many the highlight of the week and from what I've been reading, the more stylish restaurants are featuring chef's specialties such as beef cheeks, lambs' feet, sauteed veal kidneys and a gorgeous mousse of calves feet, jellied and truffled. These lowly cuts of meat that also include pigs ears and sauteed cows udder, are said to offer a fashionable taste experience and chefs look on the preparation of these lowly cuts of meat as labor-intensive, so that this awful sounding stuff is costly: $100 a person at times. Frugal Yankees might prefer a traditional Saturday night meal of frankfurters and beans, made more appealing when served with Sally Frederickson's

FRENCH HERB BREAD

Cut long loaf in 1" slices nearly through. Mix 1/2 c. butter, 1/4 c. chopped chives, 1/4 c. chopped parsley, a little oregano. Spread on bread, wrap in foil. Place in moderate oven 'til thoroughly heated. Remove foil to brown slightly, just before serving.

If by chance you've forgotten to soak dried beans overnight, place beans in a saucepan and add enough water to cover. Boil beans 1 min., reduce heat and simmer 2 min. Cover and let rest 1 hour. Drain. Add fresh water and cook as usual.

And if by chance you've forgotten to send us your family's favorite recipe, just send to me c/o Box 25, Marshfield Hills, 02051.

Varsity gymnastics update

Cohasset Vs. Duxbury

On Jan. 7 Cohasset Gymnastics traveled to Duxbury to compete in the South Shore League. Cohasset performed well, but it was not enough for the Skippers to beat the dragons. Duxbury 104.55 to Cohasset 100.50.

Cohasset's Tara Gallagher took first on the bars and tied for third on beam with teammate Tafana Fiore. Megan Pratt placed second on floor exercises for the Skippers.

Cohasset Vs. Hanover

On Jan. 8 Cohasset vaulted right over Hanover at Hanover High School.

Cohasset 103.95, Hanover 93.30. Cohasset swept every event leading Cohasset to their first South Shore League victory.

Top performers on uneven bars were Tara Gallagher, Caroline Delima, and Nicole Haefner.

The young women managed to out beam Hanover with Tara Gallagher, Megan Pratt and Tafana Fiore taking top honors for Cohasset.

Cohasset had much improvement on the vault since the beginning of the season with the top vaulter as follows: Erin Sutherland, Jodi Colwill, and Caroline Delima.

To round up the meet with great enthusiasm, the youthful team again performed well with top scorers on the floor exercise. Megan Pratt, Erin Sutherland followed by teammate Tara Gallagher.

There were also good performances by Erica Hettstrom and Julie Smith.

And how could we forget scorers Megan Fahey and Katie Medinger and enthusiastic injured teammates Marnie DeMichele and Kara Protulis.

Cohasset Vs. Norwell

On Jan. 13 Cohasset gymnasts hit their high team score of the season with a 108.45 to Norwell's 97.50 leading Cohasset to their second South Shore league victory.

Anyone who saw Cohasset on that Monday night would say "What Improvement," "Awesome Performance."

Cohasset again won the vault, bars, beam and floor exercise.

Starting with uneven bars Cohasset's Tara Gallagher took first with a 7.30, Nicole Haefner a third with a 5.85 and personal bests by Erica Hettstrom, Megan Pratt, and Erin Sutherland. (Norwell Merri Laban took second.)

Moving over to the beam Cohasset's Tara Gallagher took first with a 7.70 followed by teammate Megan Pratt 7.05, and third place Tafana Fiore and Erin Sutherland with a 6.45. Marnie DeMichele had a great performance on beam after being out with a back injury most of the season. Some great saves on beam were made by grade seven Erica Hettstrom.

Vaulting over the horse Cohasset's Jodi Colwill took first with a 7.25 followed by Erin Sutherland (7.00), Megan Pratt (6.60), and Tafana Fiore (6.55).

(Norwell's Jeremy Quinn took second.)

The young ladies expressed themselves with their best effort ever on the floor exercise with Megan Pratt, first 7.50; Tara Gallagher, second 7.35; Erin Sutherland, 7.30; and Julie Smith 7.0.

Outstanding cheering by teammates Caroline Delima and Kara Protulis. Good job scorers Megan Fahey and Katie Medinger.

New teen center opens next month

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Using seed money funnelled through the town's drug and alcohol committee from the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs, a new teen center will open this winter.

Space on weekends has been provided for the facility by the Cohasset Community Center.

Monday night selectmen officially endorsed the plan.

"For many years, individuals and groups in Cohasset have recognized the need for some type of drop-in center for our youth," a hand out from the Teen Center's Advisory Committee said.

"Attempts to open such a center have been frustrated by either the lack of appropriate space or the lack of money. Now through a series of circumstances, a teen center has become a reality."

The teen center will be located at 9 Depot Court in the expansion area of the Community Center, across the street from the Main building. The CCC began renting 9 Depot Court last year.

The current plan calls for an opening of what is to be called "Teen Depot" in late February.

The facility at 9 Depot Court is used during the week by the Community Center — but from Friday to Sunday the Community Center is making the space available for a teen center at no charge. The Community Center is even picking up the cost of insurance.

The center will be run by a governing board of 18 teenagers who have volunteered to get the project underway. The name of the project was selected by the teen governing board.

The teens are working in four groups around the issues of: fundraising, publicity, organization and facility/equipment.

The seed money will pay for adult supervision needed at the beginning of Teen Depot's operation.

"Additional funding will be required for equipment not otherwise donated, necessary improvements to the building and ongoing supervision," according to the committee.

"With an opening scheduled for late February, there is much work to be done, money to be raised, and help to be solicited," the committee said. "We hope that you

The future is in some fine hands

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The demands of academic work, sports and extra curricular activities fill almost all the available time of students at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School. A surprising number make time to be part of student government.

"I didn't want to go through high school passively," senior Ann-Margaret Grew explains. "I want to really be a part of it."

She joined the student council a year ago. Today she serves as publicity manager.

COUNCIL CAMPAIGNING

Student government involves a surprising number of students. Each class elects four class officers and two representatives to the student council. Candidates must secure nomination signatures from 30 members of their class.

In addition to class-based government, students elect schoolwide officers for the student council, the

Winterfest weaves a web of drugfree fun & ice games

The committee planning the drugfree weekend — known as Winterfest — has come up with lots of inexpensive (even free) ways to socialize from Friday, Jan. 29, to Sunday, Feb. 1.

Among the plans for the first weekend of this kind are:

- An ice building contest for all on the Common.
- Ice sculpture by a professional.
- A dance at the art center for adults.

Cohasset Imports seeks 60 cars

The only decision the selectmen made on Cohasset Imports second car dealer's license this week was to issue a temporary license.

The board had left space for an hour's discussion Monday night. The room filled to capacity. The hall filled to capacity. Speakers were told be be brief.

Still the car dealer's hearing went over into the time set aside for a liquor hearing.

Peter Capozzoli, who lives next to his car sales business on Chief Justice Cushing Highway, and his supporters were out in force. In the end, selectmen entered 64 letters into the record in support of the operation.

Atty. Christopher Pitt, representing Capozzoli, said the present wording on the license is not vague. The wording grants permission to display 20 cars for sale. Customer cars, employee cars or cars waiting for repair work are not included in any reference.

Pitt asked that a maximum number of cars be

Pereira certified

The Board of Water Commissioners acknowledged the successful certification test results for John Pereira of the Cohasset Water Department.

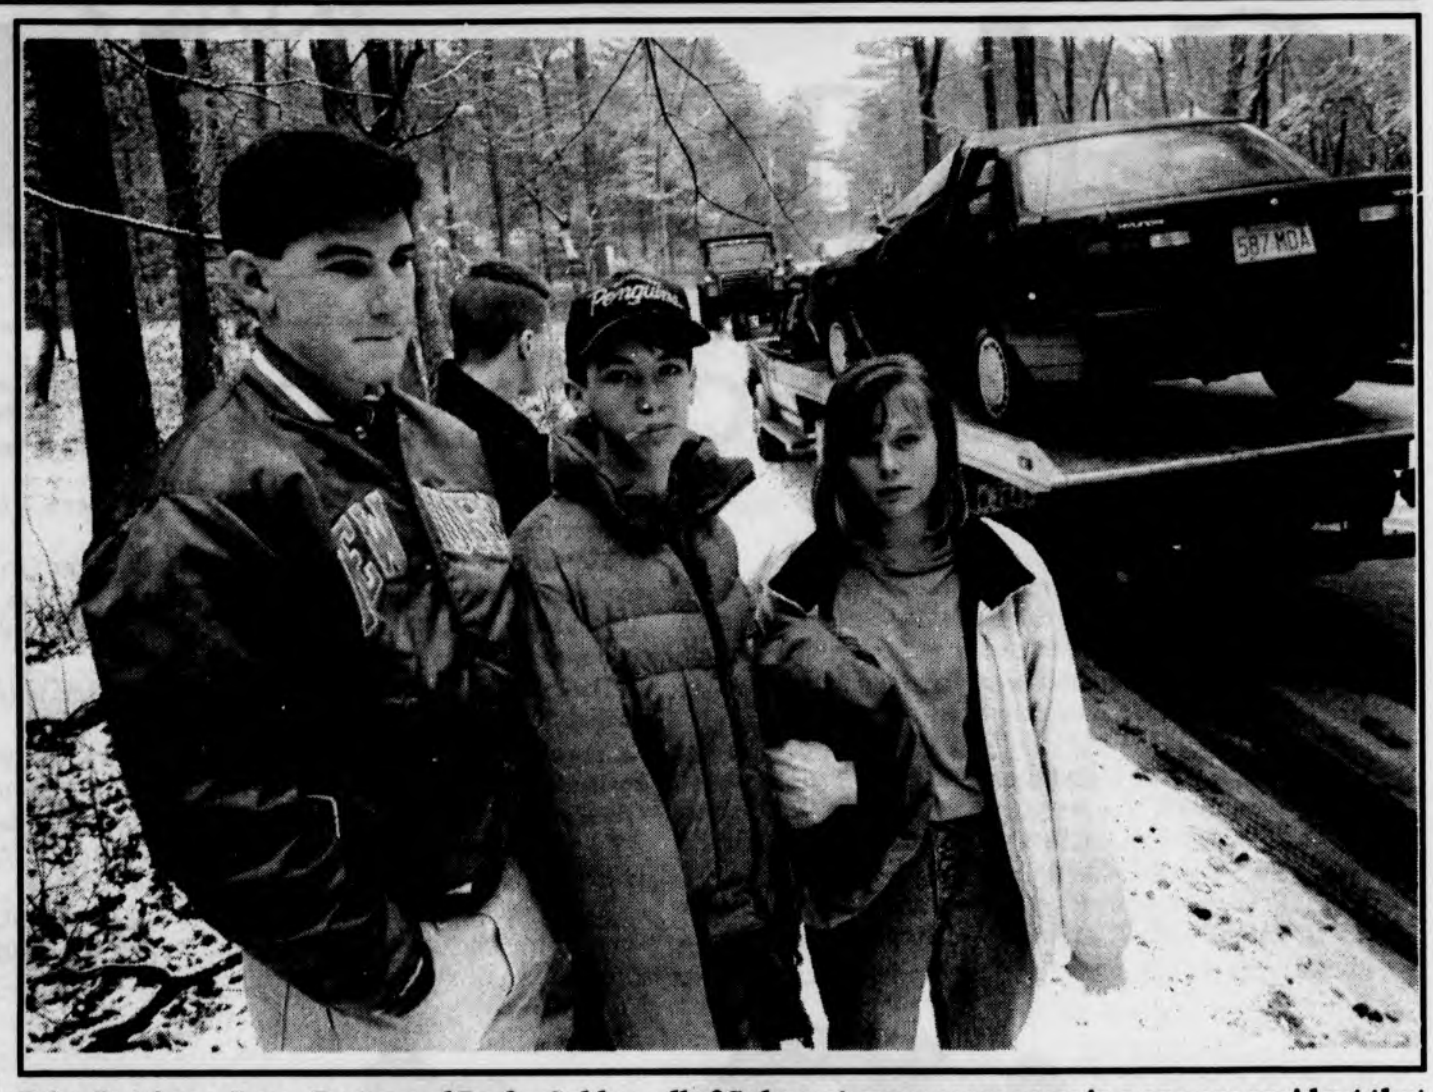
Testing of operators of Drinking Water Facilities is conducted periodically by the State. Pereira not only passed the examination, but attained the highest grade of all those in the state taking that round of tests.

Rotary celebrates gifts

The Cohasset Rotary finalized the celebration of its 50th anniversary by donating $12,500 to local causes.

The Rotary has pledged $10,000 to the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation. The Rotary hopes that this donation will aid in making the Lightkeepers Residence available to all members of the Cohasset community.

The additional 50th Anniversary Funds were donated to the Joseph Osgood Library expansion. The Rotary's $2,500 contribution will be used for chairs, tables and resource machinery.



The Cohasset Rotary has enjoyed its 50 years of service to the Cohasset community and hopes to continue contributing to the community in the future.

Harborfest parade begins

"In the middle of this cold weather, we need to think thoughts about summer and Harborfest and the Harborfest parade!" said Keith Knowles. "If you ever wanted to be in a parade, here's your chance. The parade needs people who want to have fun, create an interesting float, or be in a marching unit."

This year's parade will be a celebration of Discovery, marking not only Columbus', but also the new feeling of community in Cohasset. The committee also hopes to organize a pick up band of people in Cohasset who play an instrument and have always wanted to march in a parade.

To sign up or for more details, call Knowles at 383-1331.

Brian Pattison, Jason Porter and Becky Golden, all of Cohasset, were passengers in a one-car accident that happened Tuesday morning on Pine Street in Marshfield. Police say the accident was due to the icy roads. Two others were taken to the hospital after the crash. Jennifer Knowles, who was listed as the driver, and Danielle Shaunessy, another passenger, both of Cohasset, were not seriously injured, according to the accident report.

100 candles for YMCA

Selectmen recently hung a banner and issued a proclamation honoring the South Shore YMCA's century of service to Cohasset.

The YMCA incorporated Jan. 5, 1892, and plans a year-long celebration as it enters its second century.

A Y spokesman told selectmen the Y planned to expand services on the South Shore and increase participation across age and financial lines.

"We're going to try to raise $150,000 this year," he said. "We want everyone to be able to participate regardless of economic status.

"If you know of a family in need or a child who needs to go to camp, just call us," he added.

Students praised

The third Continental Math League test for the year was held Jan. 9 at the junrio/senior high school.

In the Euclidean division, high scorers were: Dave Christoffel, Allison DeLorenzo, Ed Hamilton, Brain Thompson, Nate Caldwell and Gina Rosano.

In the Pythagorean division high scorers were: Ryan Sawchuck, with a perfect score of 6 points, Negan Fahey, Robin Ordelheide and Abby Pease with 5 points, Megan McNamara and Caroline DeLima with 4 points. Abby Pease is high scorer to date.

Winterfest weaves a web of drugfree fun & ice games

- More contests and games on the Common.
- Cheap eats, thanks to most local eateries.
- Sporting events to watch and play.
- A 99 cent spaghetti supper.
- Free use of a breathalyzer, provided by Cohasset police.
- Films. Perhaps even a showing or three of "Old Cohasset" which was discovered in an attic by Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray.
- Church services have coordinated with the theme.
- There's a seminar for parents focusing on prevention.
- Poster contest participants go free to the CHS basketball game Friday, Jan. 29 — the girls' varsity begins at 5:15 p.m.

The entire weekend is being underwritten by the Cohasset Rotary Club. Many other businesses and organizations have donated.

The only way to get a grasp on all the last minute changes in schedule will be to stop by 9 Depot Court, opposite the Cohasset Community Center, where an information center will be set up. There will be free hot chocolate, coffee and tea inside the building. Weather can affect the plans. For instance, if it snows, the ice contest will change to a snow-building contest.

Some other details were still up in the air early this week but the committee was scheduled to meet Wednesday night to finish the organizational work.

Also inside 9 Depot Court and on view all weekend will be the model of the old lighthouse keepers' house at Government Island.

The senior shuttle will be available throughout the weekend.

The events will be kicked off Friday morning at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School as the "Improbable Players" perform for a school assembly. The theater group aims at showing the problems of substance abuse.

The next scheduled event is also at the high school as the Cohasset Skippers play Carver. The girls' varsity game is at 5:15 p.m. The boys play at 7 p.m. In between halves in the girls action, the free throw contest begins for students from Deer Hill School.

Incidentally, it was Clark Chatterton's idea to give free admission tickets to all the participants in the poster contest. The certificate allows any of the poster makers free admission to the game for him or herself and two adults.

Ned Tebbetts, selectman chairman and co-chairman of the committee planning the drugfree weekend, will speak for one minute at the game. Karen Hettstrom is also co-chairman of the planning committee which includes representives from almost all the town's organizations.

The only way to get a grasp on all the last minute changes in schedule will be to stop by 9 Depot Court, opposite the Cohasset Community Center, where an information center will be set up. There will be free hot chocolate, coffee and tea inside the building. Weather can affect the plans.

Trophies will be awarded to the six winners of the free throw contest — winners will include a boy and girl in grade 4, 5 and 6.

Posters by the participants — essentially all of the students at Deer Hill — will line the walls during the game. Some posters have been taken into stores and agencies in the community to publicize the weekend.

On Saturday the Village Common comes alive as contests are planned on the lawn. There will be free face painting. The breathalyzer will be set up at 9 Depot Court for a while. Events on the Common last from 11 a.m. to about 4 p.m.

The ice building contest is open to all ages. Families, couples and single people may participate.

Lanci Valentine of South Shore Art Center has arranged for an ice sculpture to be created Saturday on the Common by Chris Hidell, an artist and former Cohasset resident who now lives in Maine.

Inside the two churches, there will be more.

At the parish house of First Parish Church, there will be a food boutique with food being offered at cost. Soups, pizza, dessert and beverages will be available at a nominal charge. Tentative participants are: the Red Lion Inn, Kimball's, With Richard's, Victoria's Sub Shop, Cohasset House of Pizza, the Chart House and Village Gourmet.

There are plans to show a film inside the Second Congregational Church tentatively at 11 a.m., 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. Times and plans are subject to change.

A high school student will do caricatures to benefit the high school art department sometime Saturday. The schedule was still in the works as were details of the exact price, although the fee was said to be "nominal."

Saturday night there will be a Very Un-Cocktail Party at the South Shore Art Center with a The Class Act, a DJ, entertaining. Food at the dance has been donated by the PSO.

At the same time the Junior Semi-formal happens at the high school.

Sunday morning church services throughout town will pick up on the idea of preventing substance abuse.

At 1 p.m. Sunday at the high school, Prevention Resources of Needham holds a seminar geared for parents of children in kindergarten to grade 3. Babysitting will be available in the building.

From 2 to 5 p.m. there will be a volleyball tournament. Teams can still sign up.

From 5 to 6:30 p.m., the 99 cent spaghetti supper happens in the cafeteria. Volunteers provided by the council on aging will serve the meal. Stop and Shop and Papa Gino's have contributed towards the meal.

Any contributions can be sent to Cohasset DAC. Contributions are tax deductible.

student advisory council and representatives to the school committee.

Student council elections are held in the middle of May. The sixth graders elect the people who will represent them when they move up to the junior/senior high school.

"The sixth graders have no clue what the student council is about," council President Will Adams said. "They run for fun."

"It's a popularity contest for the most part," council Secretary Stephanie Eno added.

By the end of the seventh grade, students catch on to what the council is and can be.

"You get to know a lot more about what is involved," Eno said. "You know you are responsible for a lot."

Adams had been a member of the council early on, but chose not to run after his first year.

"Then I realized how much I liked being on it," he said. "So in the ninth grade I ran again."

At the end of his sophomore year he ran for student council president and was elected. Although obviously successful, Adams has no interest in making politics his life's work.

"I think I'd like a career in law, not politics," he said.

Eno rejects a future in politics, too. She plans to major in business and minor in psychology. So why did she run for student council?

"I'm very outspoken. I like to put my two cents in and I like to help people out with things," the senior said.

FULL PARTICIPATION

FULL REPRESENTATION

The student council meets once a month although special meetings may be called. Meetings may be scheduled at 7:30 a.m. or during the regular school day. Representatives and officers are expected to attend the meetings unless they meet the criteria for an excused absence. It is a requirement not taken lightly.

A member with one unexcused absence gets in a verbal warning and two absences results a written warning. After the third unexcused absence, the council as a whole takes up the matter of the member's conduct and can vote to oust him from the council. Attendance is not a problem.

"Participation is high," Eno said. "There are only three or four absences each meeting." Most members miss meetings because of exams or illness.

The junior high grades are fully involved in the work of the council. Senior high students want it that way.

"With a combined student council you get the whole school's input," Eno, Adams and Grew agreed.

"The younger grades are real gung ho," Adams continued. "Everybody wants to be on the council."

Students of the month for September through December are: Heather Bass, Corrina Minnar, Jason Thayer and Brian Conant. Heather was given her award for working in the guidance department. Corrina was nominated for working behind the scenes in drama as well as volunteering in a cancer ward. Jason was nominated for his diligence and work ethic. Brian, who is a football player, won for his contribution to the music department.

Two juniors have served on the council since the seventh grade. Adams has been on the council for four years and his vice president, Ben Chittick, has five years seniority.

The blend of old hands and new faces on the council makes things run better, the students agree. The new people inject fresh ideas while the experienced members know how to get those ideas off the ground.

The council also draws in a reasonable balance of male and female representatives although there are no "rules" about gender representation.

WORKING AGAINST DRUGS AND ALCOHOL

The student council is not an empty exercise in parliamentary procedure. The council provides the high school administration and school committee with insight into student needs and priorities. This year the drug and alcohol committee asked the council to send a representative to help them plan programs and activities for teens as part of a drug-free weekend.

"I had a lot of input," Adams said. "I was surprised at how much they asked my advice."

Adams is enthusiastic about the project and the way organizers have involved students from kindergarten through twelfth grade in the planning and promotion.

"Grades four through six just made posters for it," Adams said. "I think they made 240 posters."

Adams and his cohorts are responsible for organizing the volleyball tournament. He hopes everyone will turn out for what he characterizes as a fun event.

"Get your family, get your next-door neighbor and come on down," is the message he wants to send to Cohasset residents. If smacking a ball over a net isn't your thing, the weekend also features ice sculpture and art displays, old-time movies of the way things were in Cohasset, a semi-formal dance for high school juniors and seniors, a non-alcoholic party for adults and plenty of family-oriented fun.

Working against alcohol and drug abuse is high on the council's agenda. Each year they co-sponsor a mass media presentation on the dangers of drinking, drugs and driving. In addition to promoting personal responsibility, the council also believes students have a responsibility to their school and the community.

SERVING THE COMMUNITY

Each term the council organizes a community service project. This year they helped clean up the beach in preparation for its use by a children's camp and they painted the Sullivan gym at the high school. When spring arrives they plan a massive beach clean-up to get rid of the debris left in the wake of Hurricane Bob, the nameless northeaster of October and the usual remains of winter.

The council also lends a hand to other groups. They helped the Parent School Organization with its Christmas tree and wreath sale and worked on a community Christmas party.

The council officers stress the fact that student council involvement in community issues is done entirely at their own discretion. They pride themselves on their independence and ability to make decisions for themselves. One example is their involvement in the pro-override campaign a few years ago.

Adams stresses that the council chose to work for passage of the override on their own initiative. They were not coerced, induced or simply asked to do so by any school, community or parent group.

"The council is totally independent," Adams said again.

Back on the school front, the council raises money for three $500 scholarships they give annually to graduating seniors, holds appreciation days for principal Meg Gallagher and the staff and sponsors welcoming breakfasts for exchange students visiting the school.

FUN AND FUND RAISING

Raising money for these events takes money — and that means the non-profit organization must raise it. They manage to make that fun and fill student needs by running dances, conducting candy cane sales and a fun fair.

Each grade also raises money for their own projects. The council gives each grade two months during which they can use school facilities and organize fund raising activities and hold events without competition.

The council also spreads fun and school spirit at no extra charge throughout the year. Opening day features student council members welcoming students with juice, doughnuts and lollipops. And the events preceding October 12's homecoming day are a perfect example of the council in action.

The week before homecoming is tagged Spirit Week. Each day brings another opportunity to demonstrate both spirit and free-spiritedness. For instance, this year Monday was pajama day. Uninformed visitors got quite an eyeful as students and staff showed up clad in pajamas, slippers and clutching teddy bears. Pajama day was followed by Hawaiian day, hat and tie day, clash day (how sartorially incorrect can you get?) and blue/white spirit day.

During the year, the council sponsors dances and, toward the end of the year, the council gives seniors a chance to play teacher for a day.

The council is assisted in building their skills during a student council overnight leadership training program. This year the program will be held March 19 and 20.

RECOGNIZING EXCELLENCE

One of the council's favorite activities is election of the student of the month. Teachers are encouraged to nominate students they think are outstanding and make a difference in Cohasset. The teachers must write a recommendation to go along with the nomination.

Although there are always a handful of recommendations each month, when student activities heat up, the number of recommendations increases dramatically.

The council and their advisor, Assistant Principal John DeLorenzo, review the recommendations and select a student to be honored as the student of the month. Because they rely on the recommendation for information, it helps when a teacher has given a lot of thought and put a lot of detail into the recommendation.

"We learn a lot about students who might not otherwise be recognized," Eno said. "They are the unsung heroes, the well-rounded person, not just the super star."

So far this this year, the council has honored Heather Bass, Corrina Minnar, Jason Thayer and Brian Conant as students of the month.

"I wish the community knew how active we are," Adams said after they ran through an exhausting account of all the activities sponsored or planned to date.

And then they're off to the next activity on their agenda.

So the next time you're tempted to wonder what's wrong with kids today, relax. If the student council is any evidence, the future is in good hands.

New teen center opens next month ...

(the community) will support this teen-directed center with whatever resources you can provide."

The Advisory Committee includes: Beth Christoffel, Karen Hettstrom, Bill Baird, the Rev. Gary Ritts, Keith Knowles, Paula Knowles and Pat Carlton of the Social Service League.

The Advisory Committee has been meeting since October to work on the teen center. Soon afterwards the group reached an agreement with the Community Center about the use of the Deport Court space. Since then they have been working on other organizational details.

More than a year ago there was some discussion about using the old Bates Buildings as a teen center. The Bates Building is now slated to be sold to South Shore Habitat for Humanity — not long ago representatives of the sewer commission and Habitat worked out an agreement designed to petition off the cellar of the building so sewer workers could use part of the space.

Cohasset Imports seeks 60 cars ...

established for the business to end the problems of deciding which are for sale and which are not. Pitt suggested 60 cars total would be acceptible.

Harry Ritter and his wife Marge complained to selectmen that this would be an expansion of the business. He showed the board a picture of the building taken years ago. There were no lines of cars parked in the photo.

Karen Goodman, another neighbor, was the only other speaker to argue against expansion. She said that if the business were to grow as a nonconforming use, it would reduce her property value. She said she thought the business should remain the size it has been.

On the other side of the question, there were a series of speakers who argued that the business had existed for roughly 60 years and that the current 20 car restriction is too severe.

The business was built in 1932 by the Souther family who operated a Mobile station there. After World War II, the repair bays were added to the structure. In 1956, the building was sold to Bill Poland who leased it over the years to Jerry Leone, K. Kyriotis and Bill Hadman. Poland sold the business in 1984 to Capozzoli.

The first used car dealer's license was issued in 1959. It has been renewed ever since.

The property has 3.39 acres, much of it is wetland subject to conservation commission jurisdiction.

Pitt submitted into the record a 1981 aerial photo of the property showing about 35 cars on the land and several trucks.

Joseph Sandblom, one of the speakers in favor of the license, said he has bought nine autos over the years from Capozzoli.

"To limit the man to 20 cars is ludicrous," Sandblom said. "It's against any business principles."

He asked why the man was being picked on.

He was told it was because of the complaints from the neighbors.

"So the answer is for us to complain about all the rest," Sandblom said.

Selectmen took the matter under advisement after the hearing.

36 articles listed on annual Town Meeting warrant

The warrant for the annual town meeting has fewer articles than it seemed.

When the actual count was finished, 36 articles were presented to selectmen for inspection Monday.

This includes six petition articles.

It is possible more articles could be included before the warrant goes to press in March — but any further articles would need a vote of the selectmen for inclusion.

One petition article seeks establishment of a regional school district study committee. It was submitted by Roy Fitzsimmons and others.

Another petition article seeks establishment of the regional public safety study committee. It was submitted by Dennis Roth, Roy Fitzsimmons and others.

One of the petition articles asks the town to reclassify the director of the council on aging. This petition article was submitted before the personnel board voted on the matter and allowed five more hours for the director. The personnel board did not support the reclassification. The deadline for articles (close of business day, Jan. 21) was four hours before the meeting on the reclassification question.

Another petition article seeks more accountability on legal matters. The petition by John McNabb, Constance Afshar and others would change the bylaw to demand a written report by town counsel on all legal services including the cost. It goes on to state that an assistant town counsel would be appointed for only one year and services would have to be detailed including an hourly rate.

Another petition article seeks to prohibit disposal of sewage or by-products from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority as well as prohibit disposal of low level radioactive wastes. That petition was submitted by Alix White, Mary Gainor and others.

Another petition seeks to require the owner of a private landfill to provide for maintenance of the facility for 50 years after it closes. The petition was signed by Alix White, Linda Keller and others.

Articles in the warrant include the usual items — like hearing reports and allowing tidal work. Allowance is made for adoption of fire, police, custodial and library union contracts.

The warrant includes: establishment of quarterly tax bills, limits on licensing of deliquent taxpayers, new fees, acceptance of land in Great Swamp owned by the estate of Myrna Tower, an increase in sewer user fees, school renovations amounting to $95,000, tidal gate repairs, an ambulance purchase, a bylaw dealing with transient vendors, $15,000 for a househol hazardous waste clean-up day, loosening of the tax exemption for the elderly, $9,000 for a new sand spreader, a housing authority land transfer, an easement for use of Common land by First Parish Church and a bylaw on gravestone removal for repair work.

The warrant for the special town meeting, to be held within the annual meeting, contains 10 articles — including money for fire salaries, street paving, employee health insurance, storm repairs, unpaid bills, Doane Street expenses, algae removal at Little Harbor and a transfer for a water department computer.

Conflicting stories told in liquor hearing

A Scituate police officer and two underage beer drinkers testified before selectmen Monday night as the license of Cohasset Liquors was put on the line.

There was no decision in the matter.

Gregory Cook, 19, of Scituate testified he purchased a case of beer at Cohasset Liquors in the afternoon of Dec. 19. The beer was confiscated within a few hours by Scituate Patrolman W. Michael Stewart.

Cook said he made his purchase without showing identification from a male clerk.

While he testified, cable television cameras were turned away from him at the request of the selectmen.

Cook said he had used a phony license in the past to purchase liquor at the same establishment. In response to questioning, he said he did not realize it was a more serious crime to purchase liquor using a fake ID.

Charles Humphreys, who represented the 380 Corporation, owner of the liquor store, presented evidence he said indicated the only case of that type beer sold that particular day was sold in the morning, not in the afternoon. Humphreys said the only clerk in the store that day was the manager, who is a woman.

The woman manager testified the store requires everyone under 35 to produce a Massachusetts license. She said liquor IDs are not accepted.

She said she had refused to sell liquor to one of the young women in the past but that she had never seen Cook before.

Humphreys said the new store policy is to hold an ID that appears fake and call the police.

"We've learned something from this," he said.

The old policy was to merely refuse the sale.

The charge against Cohasset Liquors emerged after Patrolman Stewart, acting on an anonymous tip, approached a car Dec. 19 in the parking lot at Ronnie Shone's Store in Scituate. Three people were in the car — two young woman and a young man. Stewart said he did not see any beer but the driver — Kim Barkley — told him she had beer in the trunk. She opened the trunk and turned over the beer.

The three — all of whom were underage — were not charged. Stewart said he decided not to bring charges because the liquor had not been in his view.

He said he was told the liquor had been purchased by Cook. Several days later he talked with Cook and was told the beer had come from Cohasset Liquors.

Kevin Stanley, 18, also told selectmen he had purchased liquor in the past from Cohasset Liquors. He said he used a fake ID for the purchase.

Cohasset Imports sits on Route 3A with its allowed 20 cars for sale. Selectmen held a standing-room-only hearing Monday night on the used car dealer's license for the business after a neighbor complained about the number of cars on the property. No decision was made.

Stock Market game

The PSO is planning to sponsor "The Boston Globe Stock Market Game" at Cohasset High School, Feb. 28 through May 15.

Any student grade seven through 12 can participate.

The game operates similar to a stock club. Participants work in teams. Each team is given a mock bankroll of $100,000 from which they buy and sell stock over the ten week period. Prizes are available.

Meetings will be held Wednesdays after school to determine investment strategies and prepare weekly trade transaction sheets.

The PSO representatives supervising the game include Beth Christoffel, Elaine Coyne, Liz Menis, and Donna O'Donnell.

Students will be required to purchase The Boston Globe over the ten weeks ($10). Newspapers will be delivered daily to the high school.

Sign up sheets are available in the front office of the high school. Deadline for sign up is Feb. 7. First meeting is Feb. 13. A minimum of ten students is required for the game.

Resident stockbrokers and investment enthusiasts are encouraged to share their knowledge and expertise by arranging to visit the group.

Any questions can be directed to the PSO representatives.

• Recently promoted to Lance Corporal, Greg Knowles sends more news on his Marine Corp career. After volunteering for the River Assault Platoon, a unit organized to fight drug trafficking in South America, Greg went through mountain warfare and survival training. Next came sniper and infiltration training, followed by qualification on the 50 caliber machine gun. Now an expert on both the rifle and pistol range, Greg also has his silver wings for six parachute jumps and is working on his gold wings (Phew). Congratulations, Greg.

• Everybody knows Teddy Abbadessa in relation to the West Corner Mobil Station. He is about to become even more famous for something else. If you know Teddy, you know to ask him questions about fishing, right? Well, fishermen, mark Feb. 1 on your calendar, because that is the day that Teddy makes his debut on radio station WATD. He'll tell you all about fishing and you will catch the biggest and the best...don't miss it.

• We really want to applaud Bobby Pattison of 19 Parker Ave. fame. He made the Dean's List at the University of Massachusetts, Boston Campus, this term. Naturally all of Bobby's friends and family are extremely proud of him, and we are too. Keep up the good work, Bobby.

• There's a brand new baby on Red Gate Lane and everyone is thrilled. Ellen and Greg Bertovich had an especially nice Christmas with their four children, Emily Bayley Bertovich being the newest member of the clan. Emily was born Dec. 17 and weighed in at a wonderful 8 lbs. 12 ozs. Mom and Dad report that Emily is a super baby, and it goes without saying that Patrick, Sarah and Jay are thrilled by her presence. Welcome, Emily.

• Chris Keating is a guaranteed winner in the Super Bowl this year. Having played with both the Buffalo Bills and the Washington Redskins, and since a number of his teammates on both squads are still playing, Chris says there is no way he can lose this year because he likes them both. We guess that means that Chris cannot pick the favorite team for you bettors, you'll have to do that on your own.

• Kate Anderson, daughter of Mimi Anderson Mulvey, has been elected to the National Honor Society for Nursing. She is a student at Fairfield University and will graduate in May. Kate is planning to get her Master's and Nurse Practitioner's license at Yale University beginning next fall. All we can say is, with a gal that knowledgeable, that smart and that pretty, who would mind being ill...she'll fix what ails anyone in no time at all. Congratulations, Kate, keep up your great work.

At a gathering at the State House in Boston at the holidays are: Nancy O'Toole, Scott O'Toole, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray and Gregg Connly. Both the young men work for the law firm of Quinn and Morris.

• Met Rita Strong last week at the Cohasset vs. Duxbury Swim Meet. As most know, Rita and her family moved to Duxbury last June, and Rita loves it. She has taken a part-time job at the Kingston Mall at the GAP, and loves the work and meeting new people. Rita is definitely a people person and our loss is Duxbury's gain.

• Lots of you are looking forward to the Ballroom Dancing Course held at the Community Center beginning Jan. 20. What fun to re-learn the fox trot, waltz, cha cha and swing, the rhumba and tango. Many of us remember the lessons at the town hall as kids. Wouldn't it be fun to learn them all with your "life-time partner?"

• Okay everyone, on to a more serious note...set aside the weekend of Jan. 31 to Feb. 2 for "Winterfest-Drug Free Weekend." The committee is wrapping up plans for what promises to be a weekend for everyone, beginning with the girls' and boys' basketball games against Carver. Posters made by the Deer Hill School will "deck the gym." That's Friday night. On Saturday there will be ice castle building contests, a food bazaar, movies and an adult semi-formal dance, FUN! On Sunday you can either participate in or cheer for a player in the volleyball tournament, see a performance of the "Improbable Players" and all get together for an all-you-can-eat spaghetti dinner. What a great idea, and what an example we can try to set for our youth...get involved, call Paula Knowles at 383-1331 or any member of the committee.

• We welcome John Nadeau, the new fire chief, to our fair town. We hope that you will be happy here, and that your stay is a super one. We are surely all behind you and your efforts.

• That's the news for this week. Be sure to keep us informed as to what is going on in your house.

SHINE NEWS
By Pat Ryan

As part of an ongoing effort to provide Massachusetts' elderly population with affordable health insurance options, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts received approval to add two new lower-cost Medex products to their existing menu of Medigap options. In addition to offering the new products, Blue Cross and Blue Shield said it is pleased to serve on Secretary Gloria Larson's working group on Medigap insurance. The two products, Medex Silver and Medex Core, are designed to provide supplemental coverage to Medicare with premiums lower than the most popular plan, Medex 3.

To address further the needs of the Massachusetts elderly, Blue Cross and Blue Shield strongly supports Secretary Larson's working group on Medigap insurance. Last August, Tringale called for formation of a blue ribbon commission to develop future benefit reforms and identify broad-based sources of subsidy to be paid to low income elderly.

"We need to think creatively about potential funding sources. Too many of our members and potential members are on fixed incomes and cannot afford to spend a significant proportion of their income on health insurance," Tringale said. Blue Cross and Blue Shield lost nearly $18 million last year in providing Medex benefits to 270,0000 members. Tringale said Blue Cross and Blue Shield can no longer afford to bear these costs.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield will continue to offer managed care coverage to Medicare beneficiaries in 1992 through HMO BLUE.

Blue Cross and Blue Shield is a non-profit health services company providing a full range of managed care and traditional health benefits products and services to business and individual customers, to health care providers, and to federal, state and local governments.

CAREGIVERS

The Caregivers Support Group is comprised of individuals who are in the role of providing care for an elder. The group meets the first Tuesday of the month at the Community Center from 7 to 9 p.m. The meetings are a good source of information and resources available to the caregiver and the elder. The group offers caregivers a chance to give and receive encouragement, support and understanding from others coping with similar situations. If interested, call Sue Connolly at 383-9112.

CLINICS IN FEBRUARY

Tuesday, Feb. 11, 23 No. Main St., Senior Luncheon, 11 a.m.

Thursday, Feb. 20, 23 No. Main St., 60 Plus Club Luncheon.

Friday, Feb. 28, Harborview Apartments, 60 Elm St., 10 a.m. to noon.

Notes from Pat Carleton, Md.MSW (Social Service League) In the current fiscal crisis in the midst of a prolonged recession, the state government must continue to look for ways to make more cuts. One area Senior Citizens should take particular note of is medicaid changes. Even if you and your spouse have been on medicaid it may effect you in the future. Most elderly will never need nursing home placement, however, if that should happen, medicaid long-term care funding has been the only way middle class families could manage to afford it. There needs to be a major national solution to funding problems. Until then, pay attention to any state proposed changes to medicaid.

WINTERFEST IS COMING – PAULA KNOWLES

Set aside the weekend of Jan. 31 to Feb. 2 for "Winterfest-92." The Drug Free Weekend Committee is putting the finishing touches on a group of events with something for everyone. Friday at the High School will be "The Improbable Players" for the Seniors and High School students. Friday night will usher in the weekend with back to back boys and girls H.S. varsity basketball games vs. Carver H.S. A free throw contest and kick-off activities are also planned, and every Deer Hill student who contributes a poster to "deck the gym" will receive free admission for him or herself and two adults. Saturday will bring an ice castle building contest, food bazaar, movies and an adult semi-formal dance. On Sunday you can take part in (or watch) a volleyball tournament and join your friends at a 99 cent all-you-can-eat spaghetti dinner. For more information, or tickets, call the Senior Center at 383-9112 or any member of the Committee or Paula Knowles (383-1331).

VOLUNTEER OPPORTUNITIES

The Council on Aging is in the process of upgrading its computer operations to include as many seniors programs as possible and to streamline and improve its administrative operations. If anyone is interested in operating the computer, in being an apprentice operator or in preparing input, we are interested in enrolling volunteers with computer equipment or cash to supplement what we already have. If you have worked on a Mac or the Microsoft Words for Windows, it would be helpful.

MASSACHUSETTS SENIOR GAMES
"LET'S GET READY" CLINICS

Recently, the Massachusetts Senior Games, Inc. has been reorganized as the official state representative to the United States National Senior Sport organization (USNSSO). Mass. Senior Games is devoted to the promotion of health and fitness of senior citizens. In order for Massachusetts to compete in the 1993 National Games, we must first hold state sanctioned games. These qualifying events will be held at Springfield College on June 26-27. During the interim, regional meets will be conducted around the state to certify athletes for the state finals in Springfield. Kathy Bryanton earns her pay

Last week after a grueling session, the personnel board decided that Kathy Bryanton, director of the council on aging, should actually be paid for a 40-hour week.

The decision was to increase her paid hours from 35 to 40, paying her at the same rate, meaning her weekly salary will increase from $489 to $559.20. Her pay remains at the same rate per hour.

We think that was a good decision since the woman obviously is working the hours.

We wish we could say as much for the process involved in the decision making.

It seemed the process was unnecessarily adversarial. It seemed the process begged the question at hand.

As Selectman Jane Goedecke said it was not up to the personnel board to worry about whether it was a good idea for the programs for senior citizens to expand. It was the job of the board, Goedecke said, to be sure the director was being paid the correct amount for the work she was required to do.

Before the session Jan. 21, the council on aging, COA, had already submitted a warrant article for the annual Town Meeting to upgrade the pay rate of the director. It remains to be seen whether the council will continue to push for the passage of the article now that it won a partial concession from the personnel board, in the form of the five additional hours of pay.

Gerard Keating of the COA said the matter will be discussed.

"We probably wouldn't have submitted the article if we had gotten an answer sooner. We waited 15 months," Keating said. The wait had not been without a great deal of discussion.

What we just don't understand — and what no one seems able to explain in simple terms — is what the real problem could be.

The council on aging does great work.

So does the Social Service League.

Bryanton has started some fine programs. There were some pretty good programs already happening before the umbrella of the senior center opened up.

To listen to the discussion, one would have to assume the interrogators were expecting to uncover some dastardly deed — maybe even an outright lie.

Since then we have fielded the calls about two of the programs discussed during the personnel board's inquisition. For a half hour — during the first hour-and-a-half of the meeting — Bryanton answered questions about her involvement with the Meals on Wheels program.

As most everyone in town knows, the Social Service League provides volunteers who drive the meals to homebound clients. The food money comes from a grant. Meals on Wheels was set up long before the senior center entered the picture. Bryanton explained her involvement — which is tied up with the grant for the food money and an occasional referral.

Then the question came up about the Keep Well Clinics, run by the Social Service League. The answer is: the council on aging sponsors a booth with information at the clinics.

We are tired of nitpickers. We are tired of nay-sayers. We are tired of people who fail to find time to help the less fortunate. We are tired of politicians who would rather divide and conquer than find solutions to real problems.

The bottom line is: Bryanton deserves respect. She works hard. She handles her job in the way the council on aging wants it done.

Former CHS student thanks Mr. Gill

To the Editor:

This is concerning the article about the date rape prevention program that was held at Cohasset Junior/ Senior High School.

It was stated that some people feel that "date rape is not an epidemic at the school." I would like to say that even if date rape was an "epidemic" in Cohasset, people probably wouldn't be aware of it because statistics say that date rapes go unreported more than any other kind of rape. If the program that Mr. (Michael) Gill helped sponsor was able to prevent even one young person from being raped then don't you think it was worth it?

To say that there is no or little problem with drugs, alcohol, and sex in our school is to admit that you have been living with your head in the sand for the past 40 or so years. Drugs and alcohol are a problem in Cohasset. Just because many of the adults in the town believe that there is nothing wrong does not mean that everything is fine. Likewise, you can hope all you want that your children aren't sexually active and you can tell them to abstain from sex until your face turns purple, but the fact is that most of them will do exactly what they want. By the time young people are in high school, the most a parent can do is hope that they have raised their children to be smart, well informed young adults who will be able to make wise decisions based on information they learn at home and at school.

I graduated from Cohasset High last year and now go to school at Boston University. In the dorm where I live there are 1500 people. I work at the Au Bon Pain in Kenmore Square. Since coming to Boston last September, these are some of the incidents that have happened: people have been caught shooting up in the bathroom at work; a man from the methadone clinic hung around the restaurant annoying me until he was thrown out (walking home that night was real fun); my building was evacuated for a couple of days due to fumes from toxic chemicals; people on my floor have come home drunk and hysterical, needing to be consoled until the next morning when they finally fell asleep; I've been swindled out of twenty dollars by a man that I had thought was really dumb (I guess he wasn't the dumb one); a girl my age stole $800 to feed her baby thereby getting herself fired from her job; my floor had an emergency meeting to discuss why gay bashing was wrong after a misinformed person vandalized our bulletin board which contained announcements from all types of groups.

I truly enjoy going to BU and most of these incidents that I have cited have nothing to do with the university. What they do have something in common with is real life. This is something that you don't often find in Cohasset. People come to Cohasset to escape this kind of life. Kids who are raised in our town must be educated if they are expected to survive in this world when they grow up and leave home. My point is that not educating because "it doesn't happen in our town" is not only stupid, but it is dangerous. I would like to sincerely thank Mr. Gill for being there for all the students in Cohasset. He has taught us things that are even more important than reading, writing, and arithmetic; he has taught us how to survive in the real world.

On legalized abortion and rape

On this, the 19th anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision that swept away anti-abortion laws in 33 states and allowed 27 million babies to die in their mothers' wombs, I am moved to focus on its affects in our beautiful Cohasset.

In particular, I am thinking of the Dec. 19 assembly held at Cohasset High School for 9th to 12th graders, at which a great concern was addressed. They were not discussing declining achievement test and SAT scores. They were discussing how to say "No," to avoid date-rape.

Maybe it's too cruel to say we're getting what we have allowed, but I, at the age of 68, have seen the evolution from the birth control pill to abortion rights, and now a rape every six minutes, especially in the area of date-rape.

Recent US Department of Health and Human Services statistics reveal how our young people are suffering. One million adolescent girls will get pregnant this year; half of their babies will be aborted and two-thirds of the survivors will be born out of wedlock (up from one-third in 1970). In 1989, 2.5 million 15 to 19 year-olds had sexually transmitted diseases, and one-fourth of high school students will contract such diseases before graduation.

This past year, as president of Morality in Media of Massachusetts, I have been privileged to address many college students on the subject of First Amendment Rights and censorship. I used every opportunity to inform very inquisitive students that Secular Humanism has effectively removed all awareness of the Ten Commandments, and other moral guidelines from practically every echelon of our society (e.g. the goals of Humanist Manifesto-1, 1933 and Humanist Manifesto-2, 1973). I told them that the "revered" First Amendment to the Constitution was written by leaders such as James Madison, architect of the Constitution, who stated, "We have staked the whole future of American civilization, not upon the power of government, far from it. We have staked the future upon the capacity of each and all of us to govern ourselves to sustain ourselves, according to the Ten Commandments of God."

I believe we can't expect too much from "how to say 'No' " assemblies such as the PSO and Cohasset Social Service League sponsored at CHS, unless and until we dust off the Ten Commandments of God. I would tell CHS grades 9 through 12 that it was the Fourth Commandment, not the Fourth "Suggestion" "Honor Thy Father and Thy Mother" that kept previous generations from promiscuity and sexullly transmitted diseases.

The last part of my answer to a recent Channel 5 pro-condom editorial bears repetition here: "I appeal to our media to present promiscuity as the public health threat that it is. I appeal to our religious leaders to preach that human beings, God's finest creation, have the God given capacity to control behavior and indeed civilization's survival depends on it."

Pratt to address convention on February 1

Cohasset-based telecommunications consultant Peter J. Pratt will address the 1992 annual convention of the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA) on Feb. 1 as a participant at the Association's panel discussion on Enhanced 9-1-1 emergency telephone service.

Pratt is senior consultant with the national telecommunications consulting firm ATI Telemanagement of Newbury. He manages the firm's public sector practice from an office in Cohasset.

Recently Pratt and his firm assisted the MMA and several governmental agencies in drafting response comments to the Commonwealth's proposed implementation regulations for the statewide Enhanced 9-1-1 program. During 1991 he lectured on the program before a variety of municipal, regional, and public safety organizations around the state.

"Enhanced 9-1-1 can act as a critically important upgrade for the delivery of public safety services," said Pratt. "The challenge now is to develop incentives for towns and cities so that improvements like regional or consolidated dispatching, accurate street addressing in rural areas, staff training, and foreign language translation in urban communities can occur. Without such incentives sanctioned by the Commonwealth, fiscally strapped municipalities will simply be unable to deliver on the full promise of Enhanced 9-1-1."

From 1984 to 1989, Pratt served as Director of Telecommunications for the City of Somerville in the administration of former Mayor Eugene C. Brune. In August of 1989, he testified before the Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance of the U.S. Congress on behalf of the National Association of Telecommunications Officers and Advisors (NATOA), a delegate organization of the National League of Cities. His testimony at the time outlined NATOA positions on cable television rate regulation and the entrance of telephone operating companies into the cable TV market.

I watched her spell P H I L O S O P H E R in caps

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Mariner Philosopher

Many years ago when I was a pregnant stringer for the Walpole Times, the Patriot Ledger, the Norfolk County Press and the Westwood Press, I was interviewed by the Census Taker.

It was a pretty dull interview.

How many rooms, how many dogs, kids...you know. I was pregnant with my second son, and doing the part-time things women do when they end up at home after a career.

In other words, I was largely a housewife. In fact, I was a very large housewife...eight months pregnant.

So, the Census Taker is talking along in her monotone voice, writing down the answers before I even say them and then she says:

"And what is your occupation?"

And without missing a beat I sez:

"I am a philosopher."

She didn't look up.

She didn't look down.

She didn't even look around, although I was perfectly prepared to smile with her if she looked at me. But no. She didn't. I watched her print in very careful caps:

P H I L O S O P H E R.

And then I forgot about it.

Forgot what I told her I was.

Life went racing by. Everything happened so fast in those days!

Thaddeus (not Georgia) was born that year. I had him one night after a Walpole selectmen's meeting. Twenty-four hours before I had him I made 10 dozen doughnuts standing 10 feet away from the stove.

My Walpole selectmen were very worried that I continued to report their meetings so late into my pregnancy. It really was stupid. I could hardly reach the typewriter at the end.

What they were really worried about is that they might have to "do" something if I were to go into labor at their meeting.

Some things never change.

Spring came that year. Heavenly spring. And then sometime later that year the street listing was published.

But nobody really reads the street listing. If you read it last year, well, this year everybody's a year older.

If they move, of course their address changes. If they move out of town, they disappear, which I always thought was a little sad. There should be a reference the following year, telling people what happened to that family: "Moved to Milton. Moved to Cohasset where they really miss their neighbors." Whatever.

Fall came. Winter. And then I got the call.

He was probably looking for votes for his re-election and checking to see which of his supporters had moved away.

When I picked up the phone he was laughing wildly.

His name was Bernie Duffy, and he was chairman of the board of selectmen, and very active in the Walpole Footlighters.

His kids were the age my kids are now. And he and his wife, Lou, used to come and watch us and our little, little kids when they missed having little, little kids around. At the time I couldn't imagine "missing" little, little kids.

So, I was just remembering those early Bernie Duffy days, because town elections are starting up, and if Bernie were alive he'd be checking out his competition in Walpole for town moderator, but there usually aren't a slew of people in any town who vie to be town moderator. It's a tough, nasty job. And if he discovered any incumbents who had enough, he'd chortle, because Bernie never got enough of town politics.

Late last year Bernie died in a lawn mower accident. No, that's not a mistake. It was a lawn mower accident. If you knew Bernie you'd just know he would die unusually, because his whole life was singular.

Bernie loved town government, and he was on the very first board of selectmen I ever reported and his hurrah and sense of history and curiosity got engraved on me, and a lot of other people.

Sometimes when I get philosophizing in my Cohasset Mariner column about how to make town government better...I'm thinking of how Bernie Duffy did make Walpole better because he cared incredibly. He knew his letters and numbers. And if you didn't know yours, he made you feel like a snail.

The obituary said Bernie was 66-years-old and I wondered where was I when all those years went racing by?

When someone important dies you search your brain real hard, for the stories they told, all the laughter they inspired.

You look through all your photographs and stretch your memory to find pictures, stories, sayings. But I have only the story of the philosopher to share.

Through the years, I will chortle just thinking about all those years Bernie Duffy was looking through the street listings, looking for something exciting, something interesting, a bomb!...and how it finally paid off when he found his first Philosopher ever in 1973.

Or was it '74?

I did my reporter teething on Bernie's Walpole Board of Selectmen. Sometimes my news articles and editorials weren't that good, and he always told me. Just as often, Bernie's selectmen meetings were often bad, and I told him.

But every year at Christmas, no matter who was on the board, the selectmen and the press held a Christmas party and for one night we laughed and laughed over the riotous year.

The Census Taker is back.

I checked the Cohasset street listing from last year, and was horrified to discover that my occupation was "sales."

Sales, schmales.

Everyone knows I am the Queen of South Main Street.

Girl Scouts thanked

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, I would like to extend a special "thank you" to Girl Scout Troop #4339 and their leader, Georgine Butman for their efforts in our December Garden Therapy program. The young ladies accompanied club members to the Cohasset Knoll and the Ripley Road Nursing Homes for two days of Christmas cheer. We decorated small Christmas trees with ornaments the Girl Scouts made, sang Christmas carols and shared festive snacks. The Girl Scouts provided holiday spirit as only children can.

Thank you,
Charlotte Thompson
Chairman, Garden Therapy

Chamber chatter

By Paula Knowles
Cohasset Chamber of Commerce

This is the time of year that the Chamber of Commerce turns its attention to the town and its needs. Our fund-raising auction is long past, our Chamber business directory is being readied for print, and our membership drive is well on its way. Our focus for the next few months turns towards our town elections and Town Meeting.

The Advisory Board has graciously accepted our invitation to meet with us and the public at our meeting on Feb. 25, to discuss town affairs and the warrant for the 1992 Town Meeting. We urge you to make every effort to attend that meeting and find out what our fiscal position is now, and what passage or rejection of the articles on the Town Meeting Warrant will mean to Cohasset in the future. Please don't wait for Town Meeting to begin consideration of these issues. They are too important to our future, and often too complex in themselves, to receive only cursory consideration before you vote yea or nay. Join us on Feb. 25 and join in a discussion of your own and our future in Cohasset.

March 10 is our annual Candidates' Night, and we hope that you will circle that night on your calendar right now. There are 17 offices up for grabs, and every one of them is important. Although offices such as selectman and school committee usually grab the largest share of public attention, offices such as recreation committee and library trustee hold equal importance in today's fiscal picture. With dwindling funds available, the questions of what books to buy, what hours to open, or what recreation programs to cut or enlarge could very well impact seriously on the lives of many, if not most, of the families in town. Water, Sewer and Highway also impact greatly on every citizen of Cohasset, and without a knowledgeable and experienced person as Town Clerk, Cohasset could be in a real bind. Don't wait until election day to make your voting decisions. We are well past the time when voting for a candidate depended on who a voter saw last on the street in front of the polls, or which candidate had the biggest signs. Make an effort..sacrifice one evening in March...help yourself and your town...be front and center at the South Shore Art Center on March 10. Know who you are voting for and why BEFORE you pick up your ballot on election day.

SAFE urges Cohasset residents to comment on the Cohasset Heights SDEIR

SAFE today urged Cohasset residents to review and comment on the Supplemental Draft Environmental Impact Report (SDEIR) for the proposed "Area V" expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL).

"The deadline for commenting on the report is Friday, Feb. 7," said SAFE President Alix White. "We hope that every Cohasset resident who has concerns about Cohasset Heights will review the report and submit comments."

"Cohasset Heights presents many threats to our environment and public health," said John McNabb, SAFE Vice-President. "The proposed expansion poses additional potential threats to our water supply, increased odors, additional truck traffic, more wetlands damage and an unsightly mountain of track that will eventually be visible from Route 3A."

The proposed Area V expansion is to increase the landfill from a 299-tons-per-day demolition-only landfill to a 900-ton-per-day facility for solid waste disposal, recycling, and materials processing in a 27.5 acre area.

Copies of the SDEIR are available for review at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Two copies are available for reviewing at the library. Two copies are available there for borrowing.

"Unfortunately," said McNabb, "copies of the SDEIR are no longer available for free. The Environmental Affairs has given permission for CHL to charge about $43 for residents to obtain their own copy of the report."

Comments on the SDEIR should be sent to Secretary Susan Tierney, Executive Office of Environmental Affairs, 100 Cambridge St., Room 2000, Boston, MA 02202, and must refer to the SDEIR as EOEA File #7223.

Public hearing on storm reponse poorly attended

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

State officials say they are eager to hear what people have to say about the utilities' efforts to restore service after Hurricane Bob.

The August storm left thousands of area residents without electricity. Many irate residents called their town officials when they couldn't get through to their electric company to complain.

The Department of Public Utilities is conducting hearings — as part of investigation into the response of utilities — to listen to complaints and come up with some constructive steps to see that problems are addressed, said Barbara Kates-Garnick, commissioner.

But few area citizens attended the first hearing Jan. 21 in Hanover. The hearing attracted several utilities' officials, their attorneys; a smattering of local officials; and just a handful of residents of area towns.

Officials from Norwell, Rockland, and Randolph spoke up. And a Scituate resident expressed frustration after he was left without power for a week.

State Representative Janet W. O'Brien (D-Hanover) was on hand and so was a representative from the state Attorney General's office.

The utilities' officials said they came to listen.

Norwell Selectmen Chairman Donald LeClair said communication between Eastern Edison and the towns was a problem during the August storm.

LeClair said his telephone rang continually with residents asking what's up.

To respond to the "hue and cry of the people," LeClair spearheaded a meeting with officials from area towns last fall to address the problem.

The group decided that response could be improved if Eastern Edison provided one line truck with an experienced crew to each community when there is a major storm warning, LeClair explained.

During the surprise October storm that hit coastal communities, Eastern Edison trucks and crews were sent and the results were successful, he said.

"There were many lines down (after that storm) and the system worked very well," LeClair added.

He said Eastern Edison had shown "they are willing to sit down and discuss a problem and do something about it."

Joseph Kellogg, Rockland's executive secretary, said Rockland experienced an internal communication problem during the storm. He said a town official refused to give the civil defense director the "Merlin" number which is a direct line to the utility company and is used for emergencies.

John Carney, president of Eastern Edison, explained the company's unlisted emergency number is given to only one town official — usually the fire chief — who must keep it secure for the number to be valid.

Paul Connors, selectman vice-chairman in Randolph, thanked Mass. Electric officials for their efforts.

"We felt they acted responsibly," Connors said. "There was prompt restoration of service."

Fred Dorr of Scituate detailed the scenario that occurred after a branch took the wire off the side of his house.

Dorr said he called Eastern Edison "again and again" and discovered each time that his problem was not even put on file. He asked why his reports were not sent to a central computer file.

"What has Eastern Edison done to solve that computer problem so the consumer knows what's going on?" Dorr asked.

Carney said he was "very surprised it required that number of calls to register" and added that Eastern Edison did have a logging system.

"I wish I could provide you with a better answer," he said.

Readathon for Multiple Sclerosis begins

The Massachusetts Chapter of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society is looking for young readers to take part in the READaTHON Reading Program.

The program encourages children to read as many books as they want during any time of the year.

"The ability to read and to read well can make all the difference between a limited life and a life full of options," commented First Lady Barbara Bush. "My grateful thanks to the National Multiple Sclerosis Society for doing so much to promote readigg and literacy."

Last year more than 4,000 school children in Massachusetts read more than 100,000 books and raised close to $300,000 to benefit in-state service programs and national research aimed at finding the cause and cure of multiple sclerosis.

In the READaTHON program children raise money through reading books and getting pledges for each book they read. They are rewarde with prizes and coupons donated by businesses such as American Airlines, Howard Johnson, Rollerblade, Whalom Park, Edaville Railroad, Water Wizz, The Old Mill, Le Grand David and many others.

The campaign is primarily supported by Papa Gino's of America Inc. which also offers pizza parties for the five highest fund-raisers in the top 50 fund-raising schools as well as $10,000 worth of free pizza slices for everyone who participates in the program.

Cindy Gate of Papa Gino's said, "Papa Gino's is delighted to be a part of this very special program once again. It is gratifying to know that we can help in the fight against illiteracy by encouraging and rewarding children for reading."

Along with Papa Gino's the members of the READaTHON Super Teams include John Stephens of the Patriots, Ray Bourque of the Bruins, Suzanne Bates of Channel 4, Dick Albert of Channel 5 and Paul Sutton of Channel 40.

For more information about how to get involved in the READaTHON program, call (508) 291-2169.

In addition to buses departing from Plymouth/Pembroke area and Hingham/Rockland sites there also will be buses departing from Hampshire House, Beacon Street, Boston and Framingham area, Logan added.

Open to all who wish to participate in grass-root government should make reservations by calling Polly Logan 383-0031, Joan D'Alessandro 826-0897, or Ellen Kolemainen 227-9600.

Local Pops concert

Six Cohasset residents will take part in a special pops-style concert being presented by the Unicorn singers and Broad Cove Chorale Saturday Feb. 8 (8 p.m.) and Sunday, Feb. 9 (3 p.m.) at Brandon Woods (110 Charles St.) The program is called ENCORE! and will reprise many of the two choral groups' best-loved selections from their fall gala (held each October at director Margo Euler's home in Hingham). ENCORE! combines an amazing variety of choral music (classical, spirituals, folksongs, close harmony, madrigals, gospel, jazz, barbershop, musical comedy), and this year is featuring a glorious medley from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" and a humorous, original Review of 1991 known as "Call me Saddam" written for the group by Mass. Hysteria (a.k.a. Bill Grimes, Isabel Leonard and Rich Jensen).

Tickets will not be available at the door; they should be purchased at Noble's Camera in Hingham Square, or mail a check made out to BCC/US to 66 Lincoln St., Hingham 02043. For more information call Margo Euler at 749-6561 or Susan Cameron at 383-1549.

The local singers are: Susan Cameron, Sarah deLima, Lisa Koed, Deedee Rousseau, Scott Ketcham and Jo-An Kilgore.

The improbable players

Friday, Jan. 31, at 9:30 a.m., Cohasset High School will host a performance of "the Older Generation," an original play about substance abuse put on by "The Improbable Players." This much- acclaimed troupe of actors, spotlighted not long ago in a feature article in The Boston Globe, is comprised solely of "older" recovering alcoholics, and offers a powerful and touching message about the devastation of alcohol and substance abuse. Parents, teens, senior citizens and the public of all ages are urged to attend this program sponsored by the Council on Aging, the High School and the PSO. For more info call 383-9112.

CHS Winter Cabaret

Cohasset High School's annual showcase for vocalists, instrumentalists and artists — the Winter Cabaret — will re-convene on Tuesday, Feb. 25 at Kimball's By The Sea Motel.

Viewing and bids for the Silent Art Auction (new and never-before-seen originals from CHS students) and the buffet supper begin at 6 p.m. The show starts promptly at 7:30 and ends at 9 p.m.

Tickets are $10, and as seating is limited and this is always a popular event, early reservations and advance payment are advised. Checks should be made payable to the Cohasset Arts Boosters Club and should be mailed to Olga Nohe, 10 Surrey Drive, Cohasset.

Proceeds from the Art Auction and Cabaret Show will benefit the music and art programs at the high school. For more information call Weezie Welz, 383-9192, or Karin Bartow, 383-0572.

Little League registration

Registration for all levels of the Cohasset Little League will take place at the Deer Hill School Saturday, Feb. 1, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and on Saturday, Feb. 8, at Cohasset High School from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

From Renaissance to Pop

What do artists Andy Warhol, Michaelangelo, Jim Dine, and James Seymour have in common? Each is the focus of a particular tablesetting design in the South Shore Art Center's "Tablescapes III," scheduled for Feb. 11-13.

"Tablescapes III" is an artistic collaboration of South Shore artists and businesses featuring artful table settings designed in the style or period of particular artists. Andy Warhol is the focus of Jay Shippole and Michelle Roy's "A Collaboration on the Pop Art Theme" table. Shippole of Norwell and Roy of Hanover are owners of MetalWoodworks of Rockland.

Michaelangelo's and Jim Dine's creations with hearts play key roles in "The Birthday Brunch for the Art Connoisseur" table designed by Lisa Lipschutz of Hingham's Treasurers and Beverly Rivkind Interiors. A wonderful picture of the Duke of Cumberland's race horse by James Seymour is the focal point of the "After the Morning Ride" table designed by Kathryn Morgan Interiors of Cohasset.

A total of 27 tables will be on display at the Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset for the three-day fund-raising event. The exhibit opens Tuesday, Feb. 11 at 1 p.m. with a champagne reception to be held from 6 to 9 p.m. The show will continue on Wednesday, Feb. 12, from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.; and Thursday, Feb. 13 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. A silent auction and raffle will be held and many items will be available for purchase.

For advance tickets of $8 each, call (617) 383-9548. Tickets may be purchased at the door for $10.

Video on nursing care

For the four million people each year who must face the decision to place a loved one into a nursing home, guilt, frustration and confusion are constant companions. Cohasset Knoll Skilled Nursing & Rehabilitation Facility of Cohasset has a video production to ease the public's fears and clear the air about long term care.

Going behind the scenes, the video presentation, "How to Choose a Nursing Home," provides families with specific criteria to assist in selecting the appropriate services for mother, father or loved one.

The "nuts & bolts" approach assists the consumer to evaluate the quality of a nursing center during a brief five-minute tour. Even if you are visiting a facility for the first time, the video teaches you how to evaluate nursing, therapy, dietary, activities and housekeeping.

Two nationally prominent gerontologists, a long-term care specialist and a beneficiary specialist from Medicare are joined by dozens of medical professionals, patients and families within the 26-minute presentation.

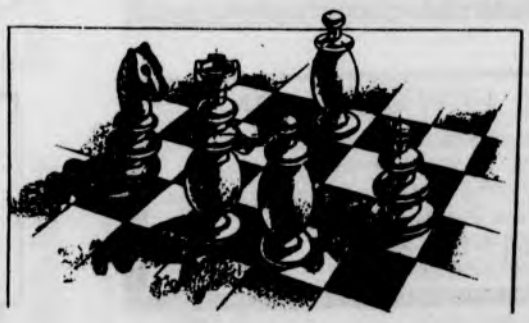
"By creating a large aggregation of knowledgeable consumers," suggests Roberta Dufresne, Administrator of Cohasset Knoll, "the care within nursing homes across the state will improve as a result of family members' new-found, measurable expectations." The video tape is available for loan by calling Cohasset Knoll at 383-9060 to borrow a free copy.

Tablescapes at art center

For the third year, TABLESCAPES III brings together South Shore businesses and artists in a colorful collaboration that benefits the South Shore Art Center.

Artful table settings decorated in the style or period of a particular artist will enhance the Art Center galleries Feb. 11 to 13.

A Champagne Reception will be held Tuesday evening, Feb. 11 from 6 to 9 p.m., TABLESCAPES III will be on display Feb. 11 from 1 to 9 p.m., Feb. 12 from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Feb. 13 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Refreshments will be served and a silent auction and raffle is planned.



Some of the selected themes include: "Springtime Wicker" by the Green Gage Plum of Cohasset, "Bridge in the Library" by Nancy Hamilton, "Bavarian Bed and Breakfast" by Interior Surroundings and "Old World Elegance" by Shreve, Crump & Low.

Advance tickets are available at the art center for $8 each until Feb. 8; after Feb. 8, tickets may be purchased for $10 each.

College Gate celebrates 10th anniversary

1992 marks the tenth anniversary of the College Gate program at the Plymouth River School in Hingham. An academic summer enrichment program for bright children in kindergarten through grade three, College Gate will be hosted from July 6 through 24. This special program is fast paced and offers courses not usually found in traditional schools. Last summer 700 youngsters enjoyed College Gate programs in Easton, Hingham, Mashpee, Natick, Worcester, and Winchester. Classes are limited to ten students, and children select their own course from the over twenty offered at each campus. Inside the Castle Walls, The Math Connection, Storytelling and Chemistry are four of this year's favorite courses.

Enrichment programs for bright children are a means of nurturing their multiple interests. Bright children enjoy an accepting environment in small classes with others who like learning. College Gate bolster their sense of self-esteem in an atmosphere that is stimulating with the comaraderie they need. "Learning is fun" is the motto of the program; all classes offer hands-on activities, often in multi-disciplinary areas. Over the past nine years dozens of South Shore children have attended College Gate at the Plymouth River School in Hingham. Hosted by the Hingham Public Schools, College Gate provides an academic service to bright children of the area who enjoy learning. Information is available at area schools or by writing to College Gate, Box 382, Stoughton, MA 02072.

Children's advocates gather

Jack Hauck, South Shore and Coastline area director of the Department of Social Services, will give a 1992 update of the agency and of its services to the area towns. This will be held at the South Shore and Coastline Councils for Children's meeting Jan. 28 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the East Milton Congregational Church, 610 Adams St., Milton. Please call Marty Amdur of Hingham at 749-0691 for information.

Ripley Road intersection work planned

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

It will cost about $25,000 to reconstruct the Ripley Road intersection near South Shore Art Center — this week selectmen voted to make that item a priority.

While no money is in the capital budget for the coming fiscal year, the Ripley Road work plus $400,000 for a new public works garage at an unspecified site has been included in projections for the year that begins in July, 1993.

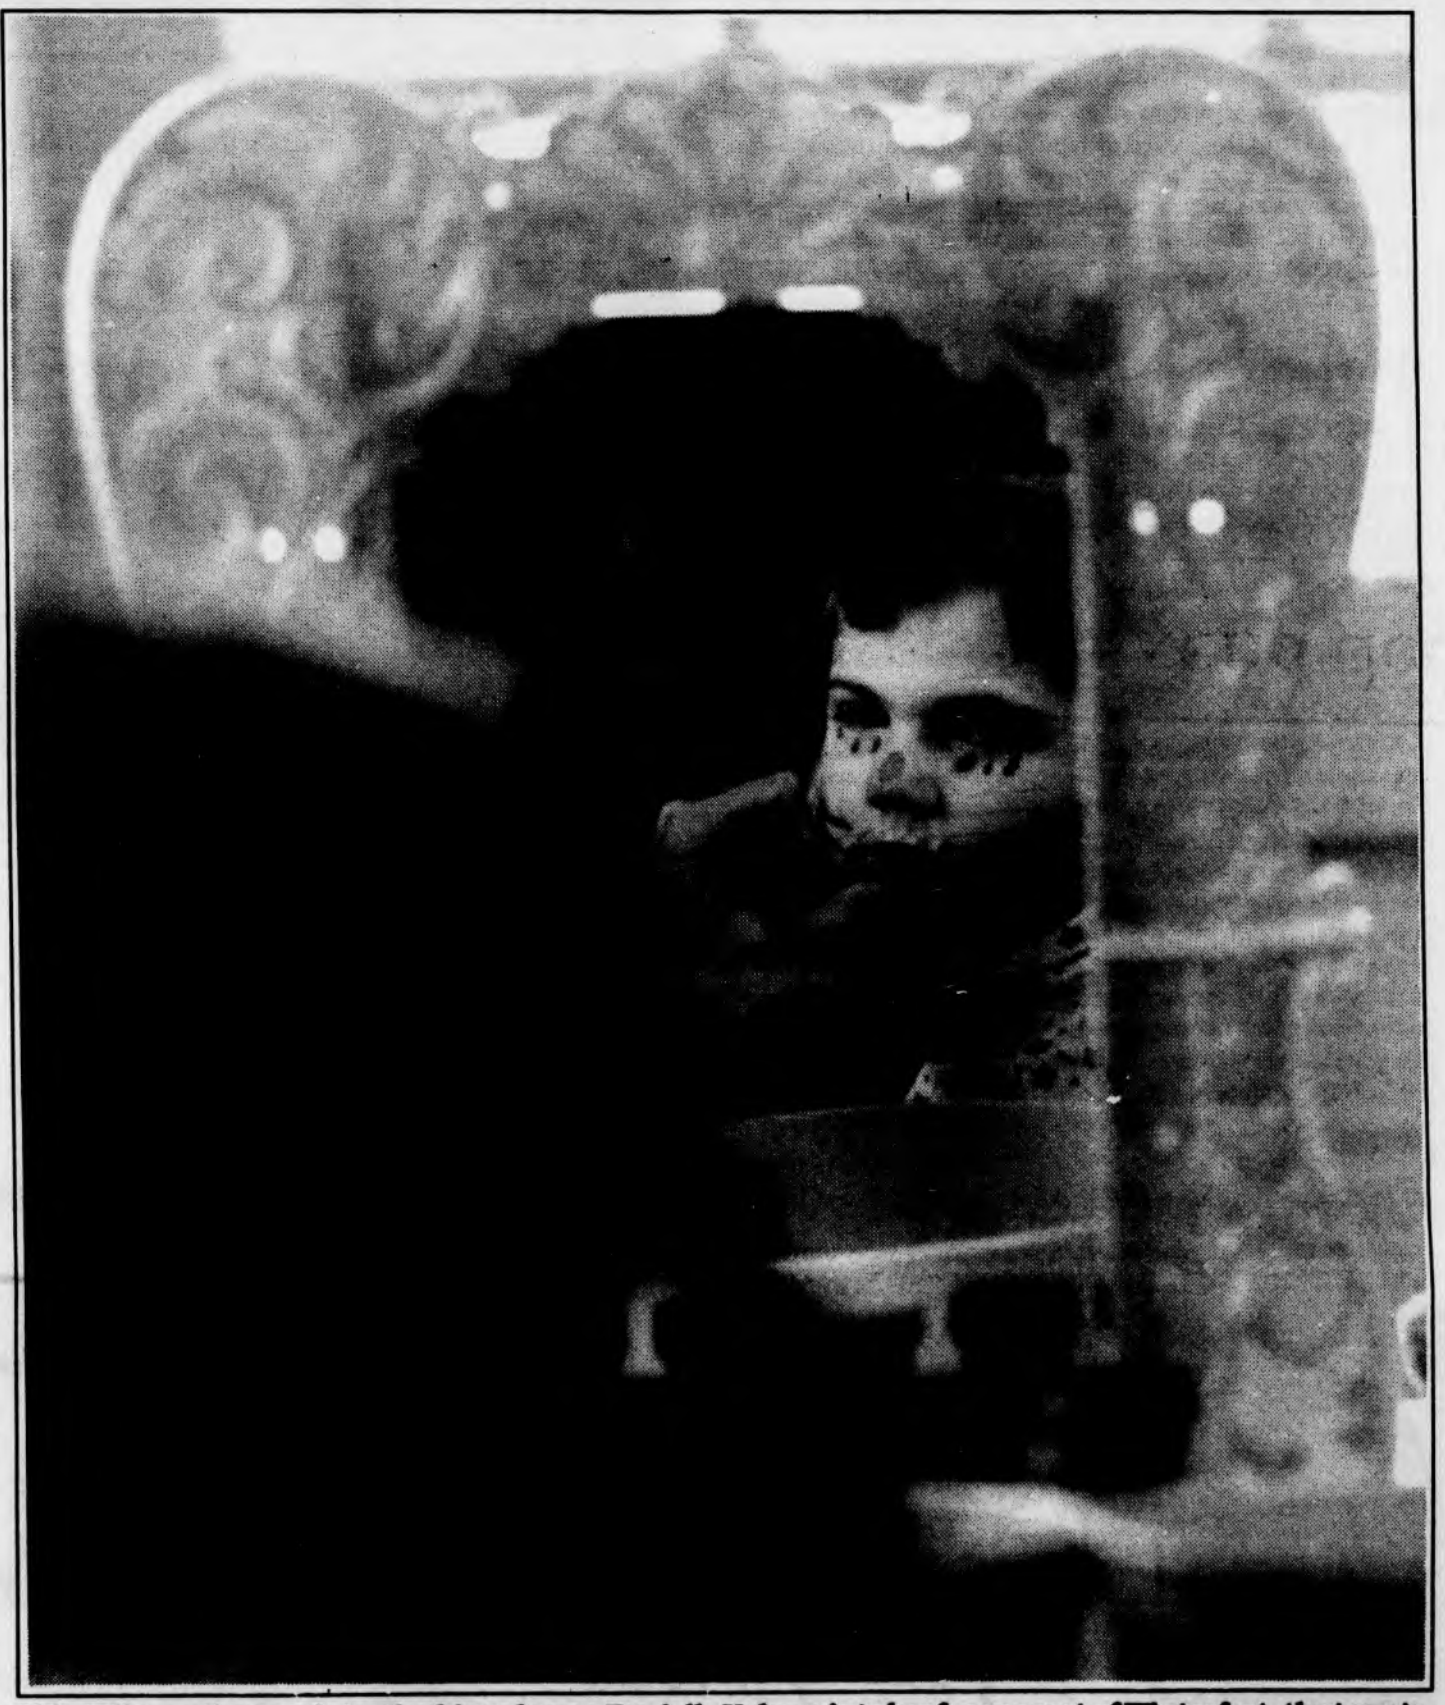
Greg Doyon, selectmen's executive secretary, submitted his thoughts on a capital budget to the board this week. The way he saw it the public works garage would be the only item for fiscal year 1994.

But selectmen were concerned that holding off the intersection work might slow the Village Renaissance Committee, which is now working on plans to beautify the area near the municipal parking lot.

Plans for the work are underway using volunteers.

This is the same committee that was responsible for the Village Pump.

The list established by Doyon had the Ripley Road project coming due in fiscal 1995.



The highway garage is the only new item on the capital budget list, according to officials. Selectman Rocco Laugelle said the equipment would last longer if it were kept out of the weather.

Also in fiscal year 1995 projections is an expense of $20,000 for renovations at town hall. This year there are some improvements happening in the town hall auditorium. The Cohasset Dramatic Club has already sanded the stage area. Linoleum will soon be installed near the entranceway, also at the expense of the dramatic club. The improvements are being handled in lieu of rent payments to the town.

Continental Cablevision is planning to install a permanent TV broadcasting hook-up in the back of the auditorium.

Other items in the projections include: $100,000 for dredging the James Brook and $125,000 for reconstruction of the Weir River Bridge. The bridge reconstructrion is not high priority, according to Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts.

Selectman Jane Goedecke was also concerned that there was no projection of computer spending within the five-year projection.

School budget debate continues

By Alison Cohen
Mariner correspondent

The school committee put aside the level-funded budget to look at the high priority items teachers and administrators would like to add. The developmental budget carries a $69,500 price tag.

Items on the developmental budget include:

- a part-time adjustment counselor for the junior-senior high school budgeted at $16,500
- a technical assistant for the junior-senior high school for $20,000
- a maintenance assistant for $18,000
- a computer aide for Osgood School's computer laboratory for $10,000
- renovations for the Osgood computer laboratory for $5,000.

The committee also examined wish lists prepared by teachers at the three schools. Items ranged from high technology equipment to replacements for rickety chairs and desks.

School Supt. Stephen Hart said the proposed budget of $5.68 million for fiscal 1993 exceeds the current budget by 1.1 percent. The increase funds step raises required by contracts and a writing laboratory for the high school.

No one scored higher than zero in breathalyzer testing in Cohasset Village last weekend, according to Police Sgt. Brian Noonan who had literature available on drugs and alcohol abuse.

More than 700 people watched as the Skippers played in fast-paced action against Carver Friday night at the high school.

Kids played with snow Saturday on the Common.

Grown-ups watched as Chris Haidell, an artist, created a teddy bear using giant slabs of ice and a chain saw.

Families ate at the Unitarian Parish House — indeed, the food was sold out before the official quitting time.

Several hundred people took the opportunity to see "The Movie Queen" play at Second Congregational Church.

An Un-cocktail Party for adults Saturday at South Shore Art Center proved a power of example.

"You can have fun without drinking alcohol," as Paula Knowles, one of the committee members, said.

Six teams competed in the volleyball tournament Sunday at the junior/senior high school.

About 300 people showed up for the spaghetti supper at the junior/senior high school Sunday night.

Uncountable numbers walked through the information area at 9 Depot Court over the weekend.

The point is: participation was high.

It didn't matter that the high school varsity basketball teams lost in the end. Both boys and girls teams played well and came close to winning.

It didn't matter that the promised blizzard didn't materialize in time to cover the Common with snow for the building contest. Pilgrim Arena in Hingham offered as much artificial snow as the town could pick up. Phil Lehr was able to bring one truckload of the stuff into town before the contest. Brian Pattison, a high school sophomore, shovelled the snow.

Linda Keller worked with the young people who were brave enough to withstand the cold and build snow people Saturday.

Eventually the snow ran out.

Already volunteers and committee members are talking about how next year's Winterfest will be bigger and better.

Cohasset's week

Cohasset Plaza Liquors wins

There will be no punishment for Cohasset Plaza Liquors as selectmen failed to be swayed by testimony — heard a week ago — about the sale of beer to a minor.

Selectmen voted 4-0 in favor of dismissing the complaint against Cohasset Plaza Liquors, which is owned by the 380 Corporation.

A letter drafted by Town Counsel Richard Henderson on the matter was read into the minutes. Henderson said he spoke with members of the board privately and individually about the issue.

It said that the board did not find substantial evidence to back the complaint. It went on to say that all liquor establishments in town will be asked to file a copy of a written statement on the dealing with minors and proof of age.

Patrolman Jones praised

Selectmen this week voted to commend Patrolman Cliff Jones for good police work in an arrest of a man over the holidays on charges of breaking and entering.

The commendation came at the request of Police Chief Jospeh Kealey.

Girl Scout fun fair

A fun fair to benefit the Girl Scouts will be allowed on Cohasset Common Saturday, May 30 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The selectmen gave Georgine Butman permission to run the fair using tents, games and gas grills this week.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle joked that he shouldn't vote on the matter because he might be in conflict since his granddaughter is a Girl Scout.

More licenses are required for the food sale.

Some of the money raised will go to beautify the area near the Texaco station in the Village. Some money will be used at the Deer Hill playground. The rest will pay for a trip to Georgia for the scouts.

Five more TM articles

This week selectmen voted to accept five more warrant articles for the annual Town Meeting. This brings the number to 41.

Working on the Girl Scout cookie campaign are: from left, Connie Doolittle, Mary McElroy, cookie chair for Cohasset, and Geri Duff. Cookies are delivered in late March. Orders are being processed now.

Two are zoning articles submitted by the planning board to establish a 35-foot height maximum in a residential zone. The old wording allowed two-and-a-half story structures. The new restriction tightens the limit. The other zoning article deals with establishing a 15-foot height limit on accessory structures.

The zoning articles had been submitted to town counsel rather than to the selectmen's office before the official deadline.

Another article would add two associate members to the conservation commission.

Another article would allow the town to enter regional agreements on municipal services.

The last article accepted for inclusion would provide for early retirement of municipal workers. Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts said he wants to see some cost projections for the article.

Free throw winners

Winners of the basketball free throw contest were: grade 4, Meghan O'Sullivan; grade 5, Megan Connolly; grade 6, Kristie Kirby; grade 4, Justin Golden, grade 5, Raymond Cavanaugh, and grade 6, Craig Bilton.

Dellorfano among insurance executives arrested

Three officers and an escrow agent of Denver-based Cabot Day Insurance Company were arrested Monday, Feb. 3, by special agents of the U.S. Department of Labor's Office of Labor Racketeering and U.S. Postal Inspectors in connection with a massive health care fraud scheme involving thousands of policyholders in at least 14 states.

U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania Michael M. Baylson announced that the defendants were charged by a Philadelphia Federal Grand Jury in a five-count sealed indictment Jan. 27 with racketeering, conspiracy, mail and wire fraud, money laundering, and embezzlement from employee benefits plans.

According to Special Agent-in-Charge Robert M. McKee of the Office of Labor Racketeering in Philadelphia, those arrested were Cabot Day owner Frank L. O'Bryan, Englewood, Colo.; legal counsel and president J. William Vanderveer, Castle Rock, Colo.; vice president Robert M. Munroe, Aurora, Colo., and escrow agent Fred M. Dellorfano Jr., Cohasset. Also indicted was former Cabot Day president Neil E. Smith of Aurora, Colo.

The indictment alleges that during the period from October 1988 to August 1990 the defendants defrauded thousands of medical insurance policyholders by using premium monies for their own personal expenses and to pay expenses for other businesses owned or controlled by them.

In soliciting insurance and reinsurance business, they also mailed or wired false financial statements to third party administrators, financial institutions, and employer trust groups which overstated the company's financial assets, according to the indictment.

The indictment alleges they mailed letters to trusts which falsely indicated Cabot Day had agreements with major insurance companies.

The indictment seeks forfeiture of the assets of Cabot Day and several related companies and any property or proceeds generated from the scheme.

Cabot Day, which filed for bankruptcy in June 1990, was an offshore insurance company chartered in 1988 in Tortola, British Virgin Islands. However, neither it nor its Denver-based holding company, Morgan-Puttnam Insurers, Ltd., was licensed to sell insurance in any state in the United States. Cabot Day and Equity Med-Kare collected in excess of $5.5 million in insurance premiums yet paid less than $1 million in claims.

If convicted on all counts, Dellorfano, Vanderveer, Smith, and Munroe face maximum terms of 45 years each. sAssistant United States Attorney Andrea G. Foulkes, Philadelphia Organized Crime Force, coordinated the investigation.

Caught enjoying themselves at a Very Un-cocktail Party Saturday at the South Shore Art Center were Sallyann and Clark Chatterton.

Budget . . .

The budget contains no provision for salary raises for teachers or other staff at the school. Teachers, who did not receive a raise for the current fiscal year, are negotiating a new contract with the committee.

School Superintendent Stephen Hart estimates a three percent salary raise would require an additional $136,000. A five percent raise would add $229,000 to the base.

Hart told the committee adding salary raises, developmental items or other requests to the proposed budget would require a Proposition 2 1/2 override request.

Committee member Ralph Kidder objected to the ongoing neglect of routine maintenance and equipment replacement and purchase. He proposed the system set aside one percent of the previous year's budget for financing improvements and additions to the physical plant and equipment each year.

Kidder also urged the committee to ask the community for the budget the schools need rather than offering a level-funded budget.

"If we never ask for it, we'll never get it," he said.

Chairman Barbara Bliss urged caution.

"I just don't think this is the year to do it," she said. "We could risk losing the whole thing."

The committee will vote on a final school budget following a public hearing set for Monday, Feb. 10 at 8 p.m.

Guidance department head John Leary defended the request for an adjustment counselor. He said his department identified 37 students with intense behavior and motivation problems requiring the intervention and training of an adjustment counselor.

Leary contrasted today's problems with those guidance counselors faced 20 years ago.

Then chewing gum in class or leaving the cafeteria with food occupied the school disciplinarians. In contrast, Leary described today's troublemaker as habitually oppositional, passive or demonstrating motivational disorders. Frequently families refuse to recognize the problem exists.

"Just pick up a newspaper," Leary said. "Society has changed. Fifty percent of marriages break up. There are severe drug and alcohol problems and child abuse.

"The need is there. The need is dramatic. And the age is creeping downward."

Leary told the committee he thought the system needed to hire someone with a therapeutic background who could work with classroom teachers and families devising strategies to solve the problems or make referrals to appropriate agencies and professionals.

He also said an adjustment counselor could train and supervise students in the peer counseling program and update the disciplinary code.

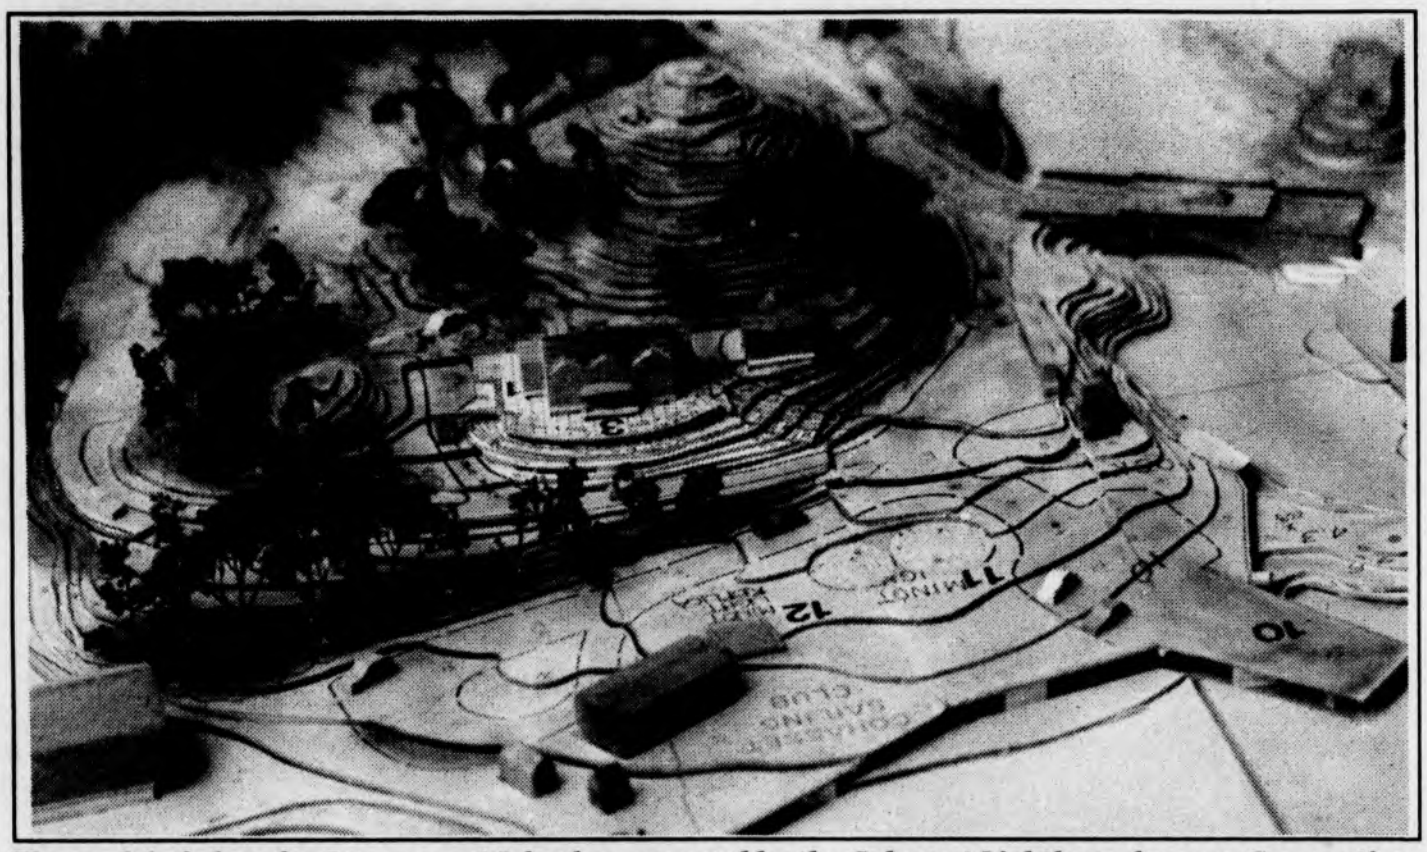
High school Principal Meg Gallagher agreed with Leary. Gallagher also said teachers and administrators worried about students described as "quiet children."

These students don't show up as "problems" because they are withdrawn, passive and isolated, she said. Often a pattern of failure and apathy develops.

"They don't have the experience of life to articulate what is wrong and what they need," she said.

Leary proposed instituting the part-time position on a one-year trial basis. The department is requesting $16,500 for the position.

"Let's try it for a year and see if that investment is worth the money," Leary urged.



Requests to expand high technology education in the schools also drew the attention of the committee.

"Technology requests alone total $120,000 worth of items across the three schools," Kidder said in response to the teachers' wish lists.

"We just started to get involved in this area," Gallagher explained. "It takes quite a bit of money just to get started up."

Hart said the system hopes to find a grant program through a university or corporation to fund technology education in the school system. A broad-based technology committee is getting underway to develop a plan for the whole system. Members of the committee represent staff, students, community members and industry.

The developmental budget also contains a technical assistant to handle routine matters. Hart said it would free Dr. John Packard for more complex tasks and staff training. The position is budgeted at $20,000.

Selectmen want better communication on field use

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The recreation commission wants a committee appointed to work on the scheduling of town fields.

Richard Barrow, commission chairman, and John Worley, recreation director, appeared before selectmen Monday to talk about the control of the fields.

Peter Laugelle, park superintendent, has been scheduling the use. Laugelle works for the selectmen, who are responsible for maintenance of the playgrounds and fields.

Barrow brought up the question of control. While saying he did not dispute the fact that selectmen have maintenance under their jurisdiction, he pointed out old bylaws granting jurisdiction over use and control to the recreation commission.

While he pointed to the old bylaw on control of the fields, the recreation commission was not asking for total control.

"Where do we go next?" Barrow said after the meeting.

Selectmen instructed Laugelle to work at better communication when a field needs to be closed.

Apparently the problem arose when the recreation commission received complaints from some coaches about a field closing.

Barrow said he did not know the details and referred questions to Clark Chatterton, school athletic director, who was not immediately available.

The request for a committee to work on scheduling did not get one positive comment from selectmen.

Peter Laugelle, tree and park superintendent, said that he had never heard a complaint in his 18 years on the job.

He asked that the person complaining speak to him.

"What's the problem," Laugelle said. he said he was "shocked."

Selectman Jane Goedecke said she wanted to see communication improve.

Worley agreed the issue is communication. He said the problem isn't one for the recreation commission but for the coaches at the high school.

Laugelle said he works out field scheduling with the superintendent of schools. he said there were no problems last year.

Goedecke said Laugelle is the professional in the area of field use and should know when a field needs to be closed.

Selectman Diana Kornet said the board wants to see the lines of communication opened.

Sewer plant expansion plans still up in the air

Ted Guild, sewer commission chairman, brought selectmen up to date on plans for expansion of the sewer treatment plant.

His board wants to abandon the plan to connect into the Hull sewer system. Cost for the town of connecting with the Hull system may now be $6 million, Guild said.

Town Meeting appropriated $2 million years ago for the Hull connection. The town is under court order to upgrade the system. A consent decree was signed 10 years ago.

Ned Tebbetts, co-chairman of the planning committee for Winterfest, applauds the Skippers as they lead in the Friday night basketball game against Carver. The final score put Carver 4 points ahead.

There is no money for the state to put up its share of the sewer connection plan. Guild said it doesn't seem likely there will be money available soon.

He said he is working to have state officials come to town to see the operation of the current sewer treatment plant. The plant dumps into the James Brook which leads to the Harbor.

A state ban on new sewer connections has been in effect for 10 years.

Oddly enough, the state originally sought to force the town to construct a larger treatment plant. The connection with Hull was thought to be a cheaper alternative.

Now the sewer commission believes the larger plant would be a cheaper alternative and state officials are balking at another change in the plan.

Under the consent decree, the town was limited to treatment of 72,000 gallons per day. Guild said the town has exceeded that figure every year in the last five.

But the water is not coming from the sewer system since only 42,000 gallons per day is running through water meters, Guild said.

He said the degree of contamination is well below the allowed limits.

Guild said his board believes the new plan would allow the extension of sewer lines in the Hillside area. The expansion would require no state money and may even come within the original $2 million appropriation.

• In case you haven't noticed, Gerard Keating is sporting a smile wider than ever this week...another Keating has arrived. This time it is Brendan Matthew Keating, the fourth child of Christopher and Nancy Keating. Brendan was born on Jan. 22 in Rochester, N.Y., weighing in at a hefty 8 pounds, 1 ounce. Mom and baby are both doing well; the family now consists of three boys and one girl (surely at least one Keating "jock" is amongst those, right?). For Gerard Keating this is his 20th grandchild. Brendan's maternal grandmother is Connie Pallatroni Susan of Mattapoisett. Congratulations go to all of you.

• Michael A. Russell, a junior, and Gerhard W. Lubitz, a sophomore are to be applauded for their achievement at Noble and Greenough School where they both made academic distinction. That's super guys, keep up the good work.

• Cari Golden Teal gave birth to an 8 pound 8 ounce baby boy at Brigham and Women's Hospital. Bruce and Cari and Robert Bruce Teal Jr. will return to their home in Duxbury in a few days. Not soon enough for Jack and Doris Golden we'll bet. You and I both know how excited they are. This is their third grandson, so they know how grand life can be. Congratulations everyone, enjoy that miracle.

• Lauren Wood had a busy Christmas season. First she had oral surgery to remove four impacted wisdom teeth, then she was off to the Bay State Games to compete in her skating world. She skated herself to a silver medal in freestyle Six, a fourth place in artistic solo and the precision team that she was a member of earned themselves a gold. Great work, Lauren.

• Happy birthday greetings go to Joel and Jim Reidy, who celebrated the event on Jan. 30.

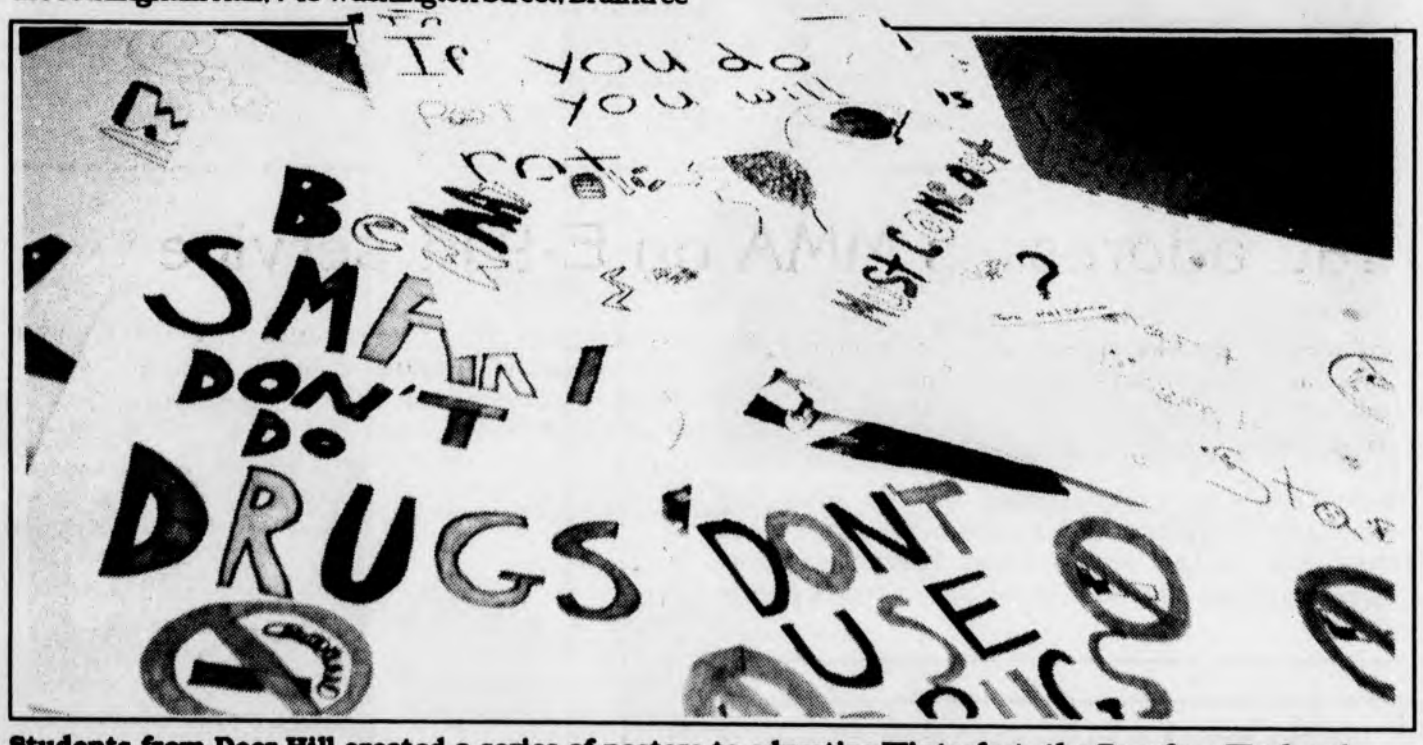
• We also send birthday greetings to Sean McCarthy, who celebrated his birthday on the 31st. Sean had a great time recently. He went to Washington, D.C. to be part of election '92. Sean had a great time learning and also a pleasant surprise when he ran into fellow Cohassetite Lizzie O'Leary. We'll be able to count on Sean for full election info, right Sean?

• A salute to Joseph Gagliano, who U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds nominated to the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis. Rep. Studds nominated 12 local seniors for admission to the nation's three service academies and the Merchant Marine Academy. Students are selected on the basis of applications and interviews. Nominees must show excellence in academics, extra curricular activities and overall character.

• Belated birthday greetings go to John Zotos this week. John celebrated his birthday while a patient at Brigham and Women's Hospital and had two parties. One was given by his family, the other given by the nurses at the hospital. Oh yes, John is home now, definitely on the mend, and deciding which candidate he will work for in the up-coming election. Take care of yourself John, and keep up the great work.

• Dick Barrow and his family ended 1991 in grand style! His son Rick and wife Tracey had a baby girl, Robin Marie, on Dec. 15 and his son Joseph and wife Sheila had a baby boy, Corey Edward, on Dec. 27. Two more reasons to keep going full force on the recreation department Dick.

• You all know that Erin M. Hunt has been working real hard at Massasoit Community College when I tell you that she has been named to the Dean's List for the Day and Evening Division at Massasoit Community College. Good going Erin, keep it up!



• Thayer Academy is presenting "Fame," the musical, at Frothingham Hall, 745 Washington Street, Braintree on March 6, 7, 8 (Matinee at 3 p.m.) Tickets are $5 for adults and $2.50 for students. Robin DeVito is a dancer in the cast, and Martha Fournier is a member of the chorus. Go, and have a good time at a great production.

• Attention to all of you fund raisers...I met a man by chance the other night, and he told me of a great way he earned $7,000 to build the town of Quincy a new play park like the one we are lucky enough to have at the Osgood School. He had all of his students ask their parents for the pennies that they had hanging around the house, in their various purses, pockets, etc. Granted he had to roll (and count) all of those pennies, but it worked...

• Be sure to watch "Pierson to Person" this week, from 8 to 8:30 p.m. He will feature Tough Love with Betty Joy; from 8:30 to 9 Donald Roine and Michael DePaulo: MIA/One Soldier's Return with Honor.

• That's "All She Wrote" for this week, please keep your news coming so we can keep this column going!

Pratt addresses MMA on E-911 service

Cohasset-based telecommunications consultant Peter J. Pratt addressed the 1992 annual convention of the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA) Feb. 1 as a participant at the Association's panel discussion on Enhanced 9-1-1 emergency telephone service.

Pratt is senior consultant with the national telecommunications consulting firm ATI Telemanagement of Newbury. He manages the firm's public sector practice from an office in Cohasset.

Recently Pratt and his firm assisted the MMA and several governmental agencies in drafting response comments to the proposed implementation regulations for the statewide Enhanced 9-1-1 program. During 1991 he lectured on the program before a variety of municipal, regional, and public safety organizations around the state.

"Enhanced 9-1-1 can act as a critically important upgrade for the delivery of public safety services," said Pratt. "The challenge now is to develop incentives for towns and cities so that improvements like regional or consolidated dispatching, accurate street addressing in rural areas, staff training, and foreign language translation in urban communities can occur. Without such incentives sanctioned by the Commonwealth, fiscally strapped municipalities will simply be unable to deliver on the full promise of Enhanced 9-1-1."

From 1984 to 1989, Pratt served as Director of Telecommunications for the City of Somerville in the administration of former Mayor Eugene C. Brune. In August of 1989, he testified before the Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance of the U.S. Congress on behalf of the National Association of Telecommunications Officers and Advisors (NATOA), a delegate organization of the National League of Cities. His testimony at the time outlined NATOA positions on cable television rate regulation and the entrance of telephone operating companies into the cable TV market.

Let's hold Bush accountable

Dear Mr. Bush...

Is the Americans With Disabilities Act something you have taken a good look at?

If you have, you must have noticed that it mandates changes in handicapped accessibility, but provides little money for this purpose. This sounds familiar, kind of like your Education 2000 plan which offers all kinds of changes in education but includes almost no new funding.

The ADA starts out O.K., by announcing that municipalities are required to do a self-evaluation and identify areas in town where handicapped accessibility is a problem. It goes on to say towns must correct any problems in areas of employment, program accessibility, communication and transportation.

Nice thoughts, but there's a very big catch: towns do not have to make physical renovations in town offices or buildings if they can prove "financial, administrative or historical design burdens."

What a joke.

This last criteria negates all the (seemingly) good intentions of the law to that point. All it does is reinforce the protections that already exist.

I'm sure plenty of town officials breathed a sigh of relief when they reached this clause. After all, if the law actually did mandate real changes, where would the money come from? Already, many necessary repairs of existing buildings have been put off.

Which brings us to this: Mr. Bush, don't you see a great opportunity here? The polls show your popularity slipping as joblessness grows in this country. Many Americans don't believe you're doing enough to resolve the economic crisis.

Well, here's the fix (or one small part of it). Why not allocate several billion dollars out of the military cuts to provide grants to towns for repair and renovation projects?

You could even allot a certain amount of this for specific renovations related to improving handicapped accessibility. The rest could go to emergency needs such as roof repairs and replacement of antiquated heating systems.

This would accomplish at least three goals:

• Improvement of handicapped accessibility, which is sadly lacking in many municipal buildings.

•Increased peace of mind for people who constantly deal with the problems of working in run-down buildings. It might even save some lives, by avoiding such things as a roof or stairway collapsing.

•Creation of JOBS!!! Plenty of contractors here and across the country are suffering from a shortage of work.

Proving funds for construction projects is not a frivolous idea. The work needs to be done, communities can't afford it, and people need the jobs that would result. This would do more for the economy than any kind of tax reduction.

If you're not convinced this is the way to go, Mr. Bush, maybe it's time for you to take your campaign to the South Shore. We'll gladly take you for a tour, introduce you to lots of people, and give you a glimpse of what we'd like you to do.

You won't even have to get out of your car to get an idea of the situation. Just drive down Main Street in any one of a number of towns and you will see the shameful condition of municipal buildings. You will also notice a sorry lack of wheelchair ramps and entrances.

Given such circumstances, how can you turn down a plan like this? It promises to help the handicapped, save our aging buildings and create jobs.

Bryanton gets some recognition

To the Editor:

Last week's editorial justly applauded the increase in hours (and pay) for Senior Center Director Kathy Bryanton. It also questioned the "unnecessarily adversarial....grueling session" that led the personnel board to that conclusion. I very strongly agree with the Mariner's observations and with the editorial's conclusion that "Bryanton deserves respect. She works hard. She handles her job in the way the Council on Aging wants it done."

There is a lot more to this issue, however, and it needs to be explained. What the personnel board really did was to deny the Council on Aging's request to upgrade Bryanton's pay scale from H level-step five to J level-step four. It came close to narrowing the dollar gap with its recommendation of increasing her paid hours from 35 to 40 (which now more fairly matches the actual hours she's been putting in for five years), but it refused to recognize Bryanton's designation as "director." The "grueling" hearing at which Bryanton was interrogated by Personnel Board Co-Chairman Barbara Moore, concluded the Council on Aging's 15-month odyssey to get the board to accept, recognize and reward Bryanton's position as DIRECTOR of the council/senior center. The COA failed with the personnel board, but hopefully it will 'try' the issue again at annual town meeting.

Bryanton would like, apart from and more important than the salary increase, to be recognized for the work she does, and she'd like to be treated equally. In 1985 the Council on Aging and the Board of Selectmen voted to accept a job description and designation of the administrator for the new senior center as "director." Shortly after Bryanton began her job as director, a consultant, Caleb Marsh, conducted a study for the town which looked at all positions and reorganized them in the pay schedule as needed. He met with Bryanton after the study was completed; he had already re-designated Bryanton's position as senior center coordinator. When Gerard Keating (currently COA chairman) asked Marsh why he'd changed the title he replied, "I don't know." At the next annual town meeting Keating asked the voters to correct the error, and it was done by unanimous vote.

Since that time, however, the personnel board has continued to refer to and view Bryanton as a "coordinator" and it has been immovable in upping her salary category to a level on a par with similar department heads. This is unsubstantiated and unjustified treatment and smacks of discrimination. For the sake of discussion, Bryanton shares level H with the highway foreman and the water plant foreman; the harbormaster is in level I; the recreation director and tree and park superintendent are in level J; the wire superintendent, building inspector and landfill supervisor are in level K; the sewer superintendent is in level L; and the librarian is in level M.

In 1986 the personnel board gave the Council on Aging director a rating of 25 and the recreation director scored 27. I don't know what the criteria are for this rating system, but I do know that Bryanton's job has expanded at least tenfold and her job description has changed, yet, six years later her rating is still 25. This is especially curious since she has gotten consistently good evaluations from the COA.

The personnel board argues that Bryanton "coordinates" and does not "direct." With all due respect to Jack Worley, who does a fine job directing the recreation department, the jobs beg for comparison. Both administrators report to and meet regularly with a board of directors; they are responsible for developing, coordinating and directing activities, services and programs for their departments; they work the same amount of hours; they hire, supervise and evaluate staff and program instructors; initiate new programming to fit the needs of their constituencies; coordinate and network with other town departments, agencies and organizations; recruit and supervise volunteer personnel; manage their respective budgets, payroll; etc. and so on. The one glaring difference is that the COA/senior center is mandated by the federal government to provide the services it does to the senior population; it couldn't close its door if it wanted to.

The personnel board doesn't say why it won't upgrade Bryanton's job; perhaps it would be a recognition that she is a "director." It says it views each town job separately, and determines its corresponding pay level based on the detailed job description for that position. In Bryanton's case, the board called other towns and agencies for comparative information on other COA directors, but it won't discuss how the COA director's job compares with other Cohasset jobs. One must assume that there are similarities among jobs that are in the same pay level, and conversely, that there are differences among those in different levels. It confounds me to find any substantial differences between Bryanton's job description, her level of responsibility, and degree of independence in carrying out that job, and that of the recreation director's, EXCEPT THAT ONE'S A WOMAN AND ONE'S A MAN.

During the personnel board's questioning two weeks ago, Bryanton was asked if her selection and hiring of program instructors who have expertise in their fields really didn't amount to "coordinating" experienced teachers, rather than "directing" COA personnel. Her forthright answer was that indeed, she did not direct qualified and experienced instructors at their jobs once she's hired them. However, as any competent director would, she observes and evaluates their effectiveness with her clientele, and makes adjustments as needed to

New teacher wins rave

To the Editor:

I am writing to thank Mr. Joel Antolini, Cohasset High School teacher of industrial arts and his students. A while ago I approached Mr. Antolini about the possibility of having students build some chart stands and primary easels for our first grade classrooms. (In catalogs these items run between $60 and $80 apiece, and more!) This idea was met with great enthusiasm and the day before Christmas vacation Mr. Antolini delivered the sturdy wooden stands and several marker stands with a promise to return soon with the easels.

Thank you especially, students of Mr. Antolini for your hard work and quality craftsmanship on these much needed materials! We at Osgood are very grateful for your generous use of your time and talents. We look forward to many years of service with our new materials. What a way to go—with CHS's students!

Students assist nursing home residents

To the Editor:

This past Dec. 13, seven fifth grade students from Deer Hill School met with seven residents of Ripley Road Nursing Home for an afternoon of watercolor painting.

The afternoon was the idea of Jean O'Malley, the art teacher at Deer Hill, and it was a great success. Everyone enjoyed working with the watercolors. Poinsettia plants were a source of inspiration as well as the subject for their paintings. Right now their work is on display at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

I feel that Mrs. O'Malley is an inspiration for today's students, especially these seven, just as she was a source of inspiration for "yesterday's students." Mrs. O'Malley was my former art teacher during my years at Deer Hill. I feel that Mrs. O'Malley contributed greatly to my decision to pursue art in my career. I am currently an art therapy major in my third year at Emmanuel College in Boston. As well as going to school, I also work as the activity director at Ripley Road Nursing Home. This position draws upon a broad range of my artistic skills, which were initially nurtured and encouraged by Mrs. O'Malley at Deer Hill.

This visit was an opportunity for the young to help the elderly, the elderly to share experiences with the young, as well as providing the opportunity for a teacher and former student to combine a diversified group of girls, boys, and senior citizens who all enjoyed each others company and talents.

I would like to thank Mrs. O'Malley, for thinking of the residents of Ripley Road and myself when coming up with this project, as well as the seven students who accompanied her. I would also like to express my deepest thanks to my mother, Marge Murphy, for recording this event in order that the residents may continue to enjoy their afternoon on film and also for her continued support in whatever it is I choose to do.

The names of the seven residents of Ripley Road Nursing Home are: Alma White, Sarah Nelson, Catherine Gavin, Amy Bates, Priscilla Thompson, Ruth Green and Catherine Olson.

The names of the seven students from Deer Hill School are: Alexandra D'Urso, Katie Walsh, Jordan Fiori, Stephen Seerey, Katie Brister, Kara Hettstrom and Tedd Goff.

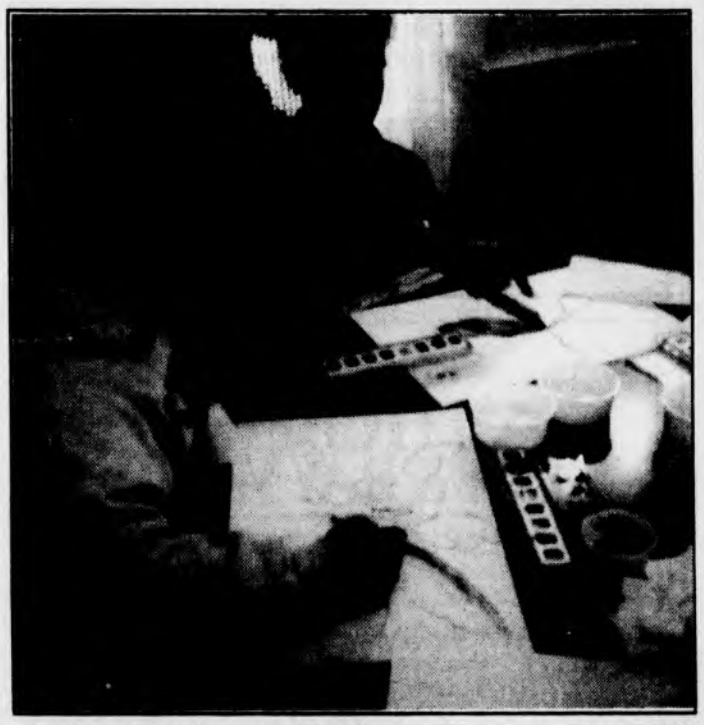
Chamber chatter

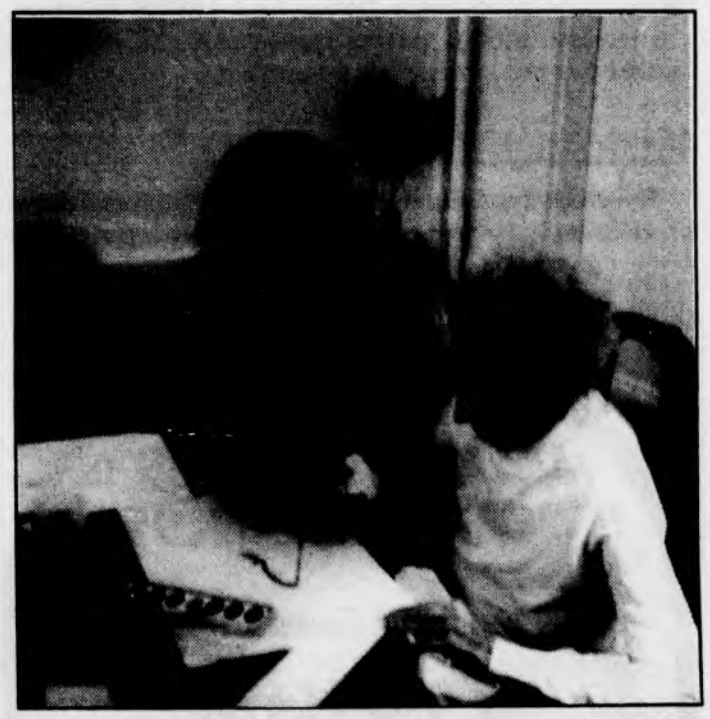
By Paula Knowles
Cohasset Chamber of Commerce

Last week's WINTERFEST/DRUG FREE WEEKEND was a perfect example of how the citizens, the town and the business community can come together to make good things happen. No one who took part in any of the weekend's activities can doubt that good things were happening, and on an even greater scale than hoped for.



The first event of the weekend, the presentation by "The Improbable Players," set the tone followed throughout. A message of moderation and education delivered by a group whose ages ranged from 60 to 80 and received by a packed house audience ranging from seventh grade student to 80-year-old retiree. What a wonder to see a 75-year-old woman hold an audience of teens in the palm of her hand. And what a mixed blessing to see so many young people with so many questions to be answered....on this hand, their interest and knowledge gives hope for the future; on the other hand, their fear and concern makes you wonder about their world of today. But then, those were the very concerns that gave rise to the weekend in the first place!

The sheer number of participants was staggering for our little town. When the committee first came together, they tried to keep their sights on a realistic number. Forty people at any event, they felt, would be a good turnout. If 40 was good, what do we call 250 posters made by grades 4-6 (and they were FANTASTIC – their messages strong and unmistakable) decorating a gym packed with 700 kids, parents and fans for the Varsity basketball games and middle school free throw contest? Or over 100 people at the movie, "The Movie Queen," provided by Lillian Murray Curley and narrated by Burt Pratt...200 people at the food bazaar, the ice sculpture demonstration (don't miss seeing artist Chris Hidell's Teddy Bear on the common – it should be there as long as the cold weather holds) and the snow sculpting contest. All ages showed up to dance, eat and talk at the UN-cocktail party Saturday night, and Sunday's volleyball game drew as many "mature" players as it did younger ones.



The finale was even more indicative of the weekend than the kickoff – a 99¢ spaghetti dinner, served at the high school cafeteria by a group of workers that included committee members, senior citizens, and students both past and present. And more than 250 townspeople of all ages came together to call a close to this great weekend. The food for the dinner was given at cost by the company that manages the High School food service, Canteen Corp., and they also provided, at no cost, the soft serve ice cream for dessert and a dynamo of a worker to supervise in the kitchen.

Seventeen groups and organizations provided people, funding and ideas for this weekend; and one chief participant was the school department. If you ever want to see what, besides the basic, everyday education of our children, your tax dollars are buying, take a look at the video of the week's activities, when it is available. Look at the posters made by the children – you can't help but see what a fine job our Health Education Dept. is doing when you see the messages that the young children are sending. Look at the extra work done by the athletic department in setting up so many of the weekend's events, and count the number of extra hours that had to be spent by teachers, administrators and custodial staff to bring this weekend off successfully. And when you see the video, and I hope that you all will, pick out the faces of teachers and administrators that show up at every event.

As a town, we should be thrilled at the turnout for this weekend. As parents, educators, business people, and a concerned public, we must carry the message of the weekend into the coming year.

Bryanton . . .

provide senior citizens with the most appropriate and beneficial instructors. Would the personnel board try to make the same distinction between "coordinating" experienced instructors hired by the recreation director versus "directing" a department? Does the recreation director need to know how to teach contract bridge or dog obedience to be an effective director anymore that Bryanton needs to know how to teach painting or T'ai Chi to do her job? I think not.

There is a very curious dialogue going on parallel to all of this – something that keeps popping up in the discussions of Bryanton's job (coordinator versus director) – and it is the role of the Social Service League with seniors. I don't know what it's all about, but this is what I do know. In 1985, the Social Service League (SSL, a private, nonprofit service agency), with very intuitive direction from Carolyn Housman (social worker at the time), teamed up with South Shore Elder Services and the COA to fund and hire a senior center developer to conduct a feasibility study on the possible merits of opening a senior center in Cohasset. I am familiar with this phase of the senior center because I was the developer. What Housman and the SSL recognized was that among their constituency – the total town population – they were serving a disproportionate number of senior citizens. Housman was aware of the work being done in other communities through their senior centers, and thought it might be time for Cohasset to have one too. What we all discovered was that there was not only a need for a center (to provide many, many more services to greater numbers of seniors and to centralize existing services, programs and information), but the desire of senior citizens to use one and help run it. It is very much to the SSL's credit that they provided leadership and funding for the development of the senior center. And while they continue to concern themselves with health and social issues that affect all citizens of Cohasset, including seniors, and provide direct services, such as home health visits, clinics, delivery of meals-on-wheels, and counseling, the responsibility for the well-being of senior citizens rests solely with the Council on Aging and the senior center director. And, they are doing their job.

The Council on Aging sets policy, and through its director, provides direct services (often addressing life-threatening situations), important and helpful information, and networks and coordinates with other town, state and federal agencies and organizations to see to it that the town's fastest growing population (20 percent) is as well taken care of as possible.

Bryanton and the COA are very much aware that the town continues to be in an endless financial bind. The COA has taken its licks with four years of level-funded budgets, and is sensitive to the voters' plight when it comes to overrides and increased taxes. However, it would like Bryanton's position recognized for what it is – particularly in comparison to other similar jobs – a department director with as much responsibility as any other. If the ability to fund the salary gap from level H to level J is just not there, I don't know if an unfunded advancement would be enough to satisfy Bryanton, but I know I would at least feel she'd received the "moral" recognition that she deserves, if not the "material" recognition.

Parenting should be a choice

To the Editor:

Rita Burke's selfrighteous assault, printed in last week's Mariner, on those who seek to provide young people with the information they need for responsible sexual conduct is regrettable.

Secular and religious humanists, many thoughtful Christians and Jews, and no doubt James Madison whom Mrs. Burke quotes, would assert that the government should not intrude on those rights of individuals which are most personal and private — the decision whether or not to bear a child and the relationship between a physician and a patient. Mrs. Burke's advocacy of government enforced motherhood coupled with restricting access to birth control perpetuates the very problems she laments and her dogmatic suggestion that children always honor father and mother in light of the high level of child abuse and incest reported in our society is cruel and insensitive.

Those who believe that we are God's finest creation with the ability to control our behavior should be working to insure that our citizens have access to information and services needed to make parenting a choice rather than a form of servitude.

By Cupid

10. Arrange a conference call for your friends or family who are far away.
9. Send a warm Valentine's Day greeting to people you know will be alone that day.
8. Make Valentine's Day cards using old-fashioned means...paper doilies and red, silk ribbons.
7. Give out little packets of chocolate candies to your neighbors and friends.
6. Buy lots of red and white balloons and put them all over the house.
5. Hire a sky-writer...and paint the sky with "Love Thy Neighbor".
4. Fill your mate's briefcase with large red hearts.
3. Spend the evening with your sweetheart, reading thoughtful, sensitive poetry and prose.
2. Hire a group (or a violinist, pianist, etc.) to serenade your love.

The Skippers kept good control of the ball Friàday as the bleachers were filled with Deer Hill students and families. Anyone who had made a poster for the anti-drug campaign was allowed free admission to the game.

The gym at Cohasset junior/senior high school was full of enthusiasm Friday night as the Skippers played a close game with Carver.

Weekend . . .

deserve some — or a great deal — of credit for the weekend are legion.

Lillian Murray Curley helped provide the film "The Movie Queen" which is actually owned by her mother, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray. Burt Pratt narrated the film which shows scenes of old Cohasset.

Gerard Keating was responsible for the display of old photos at 9 Depot Court as well as for recruiting much other volunteer help.

Canteen Corp., the company the serves school lunches in town, donated its services for the Sunday night supper. A number of senior citizens volunteered as servers.

Among the restaurants that participated in the Food Boutique or in providing donations to the weekend were: Chart House, Village Gourmet, Cohasset House of Pizza, Victoria's Sub Shop, Log and Line, Papa Gino's, Stop and Shop and Red Lion Inn.

The PSO contributed.

Rotary underwrote the entire event.

Participation seemed highest among families with elementary school children. Just about every child at the Deer Hill School was involved in some way. Anti-drug posters created by Deer Hill students can still be seen around town.

Much of the program was geared toward educating families about drug and alcohol abuse prevention.

High of season for win gymnastics

By Ruthann Sargent

Jan. 29, Cohasset hit its high of the season with a score of 109.40 to Hanover's 105.55.

It began on the bars when the Skippers swept this event by 1.10 points. Captain Tara Gallagher, Capt. Erin Sutherland, and seventh grader Megan Pratt were the top performers on the bars. (Kristen Korszeniewski placed first for Hanover.)

Next event, balance beam, Cohasset out beamed Hanover by 4.60 points to accomplish a great margin between the schools. Top performers for Cohasset again was Captain Tara Gallagher, eighth grade Tafana Fiore, followed by teammate Marnie Demichele. (Kristen Korszeniewski placed first for Hanover.)

The Skippers did not win the vaulting event, but showed a great improvement from two days previously. Captain Erin Sutherland led the Skippers, followed by teammates Jodi Colwill and Tafana Fiore.

The young ladies full of much excitement continued with great enthusiasm to the floor exercise. Seventh grade Erica Hettstrom hit a personal best along with Tara Gallagher hitting her high for the season.

Teammates Nicole Haefner and Julie Smith added to CHS's victory.

Caroline Delima and Kara Protulis just coming off injuries, have begun working out in the gym once again.

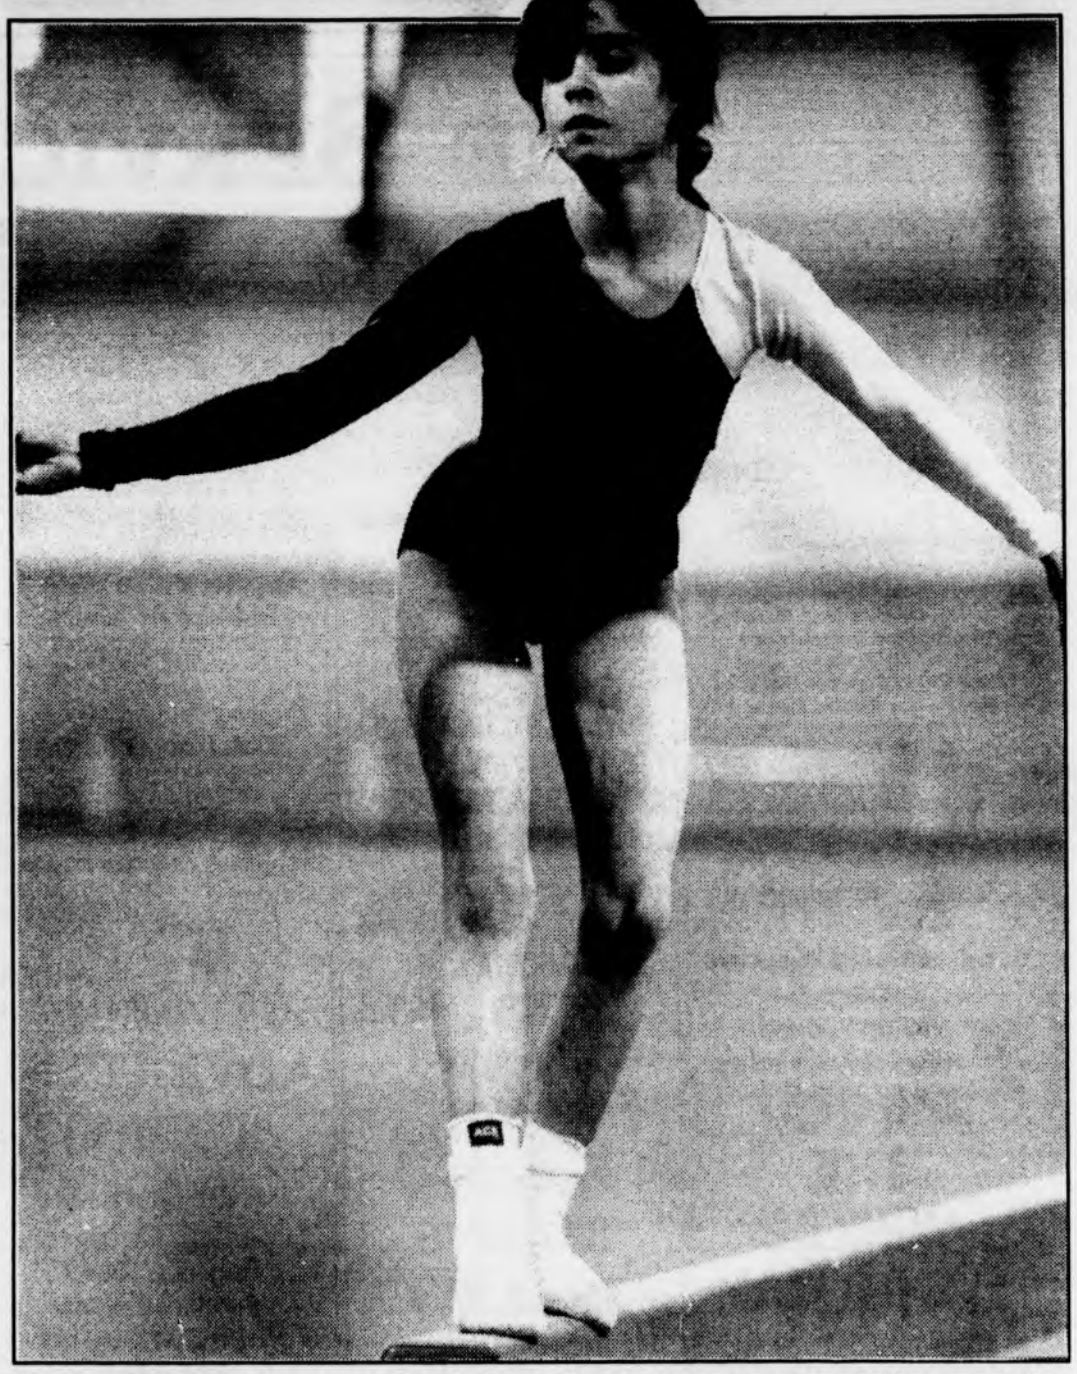
Great thanks to Ann Gallagher, Megan Fahey, Katie Medinger, Tara Hettstrom, Ed Hettstrom, Chris Pratt, Maggie Godecke, Carolyn Pratt for their help throughout the season.

All-League meet at Carver High School Feb. 8 at 3 p.m.

Feb. 13 Notre Dame at Cohasset, 7:15 p.m. This is the last home meet.

Jan. 21, Carver High School meet with CHS at Cohasset High. Cohasset was heading for their high team score of the season when the alarm went off during Tafana Fiores' floor exercise routine. What should we do?? Well Tafana finished her floor routine and scored a personal best for the season and then the gymnasts, judges, fans all evacuated the building and never got to finish that evening.

As a result, Cohasset hit a 108.45 to Carver's 115.30 (great improvement). Cohasset's Tara Gallagher placed second on bars and third on balance beam for the Skippers. Seventh grader Megan Pratt scored 25.85 in the all around followed by senior teammate Erin Sutherland with a 25.65.



(Top performers for Carver were Leslie Whittaker, April Duncan, Michelle Cooney and Megan Cooke.)

Jodi Colwill, Erica Hettstrom, Nicole Haefner, Marnie DeMichele and Julie Smith joined in outstanding effort to reach a 108.45.

The Cohasset Gymnastics Team is getting very strong and consistent now that the season is rounding up. Cohasset 108.65, Duxbury 108.90.

Cohasset swept the balance beam and floor exercise events but came up a quarter of a point short for the win.

Probably one of Cohasset's best performances of the season Capt. Tara Gallagher placed first on bars with a personal best of a 7.70 and seventh grader Erica Hettstrom placed third with a personal best of 6.05.

$5.7 K school budget requires an override

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The school budget for the coming year is $5.7 million without raises for the teachers. School committee voted for the $5.7 figure Monday, realizing an override would be required to impliment the new budget.

(The teachers' contract is under negotiation and may be complete before Town Meeting. Teachers have been working this year at last year's pay levels. A 4-percent raise for the teachers would add $182,000 more to the budget.)

About a dozen people listened as School Supt. Stephen Hart presented his detailed plan for the operation of the schools Monday night — about half those present were school officials.

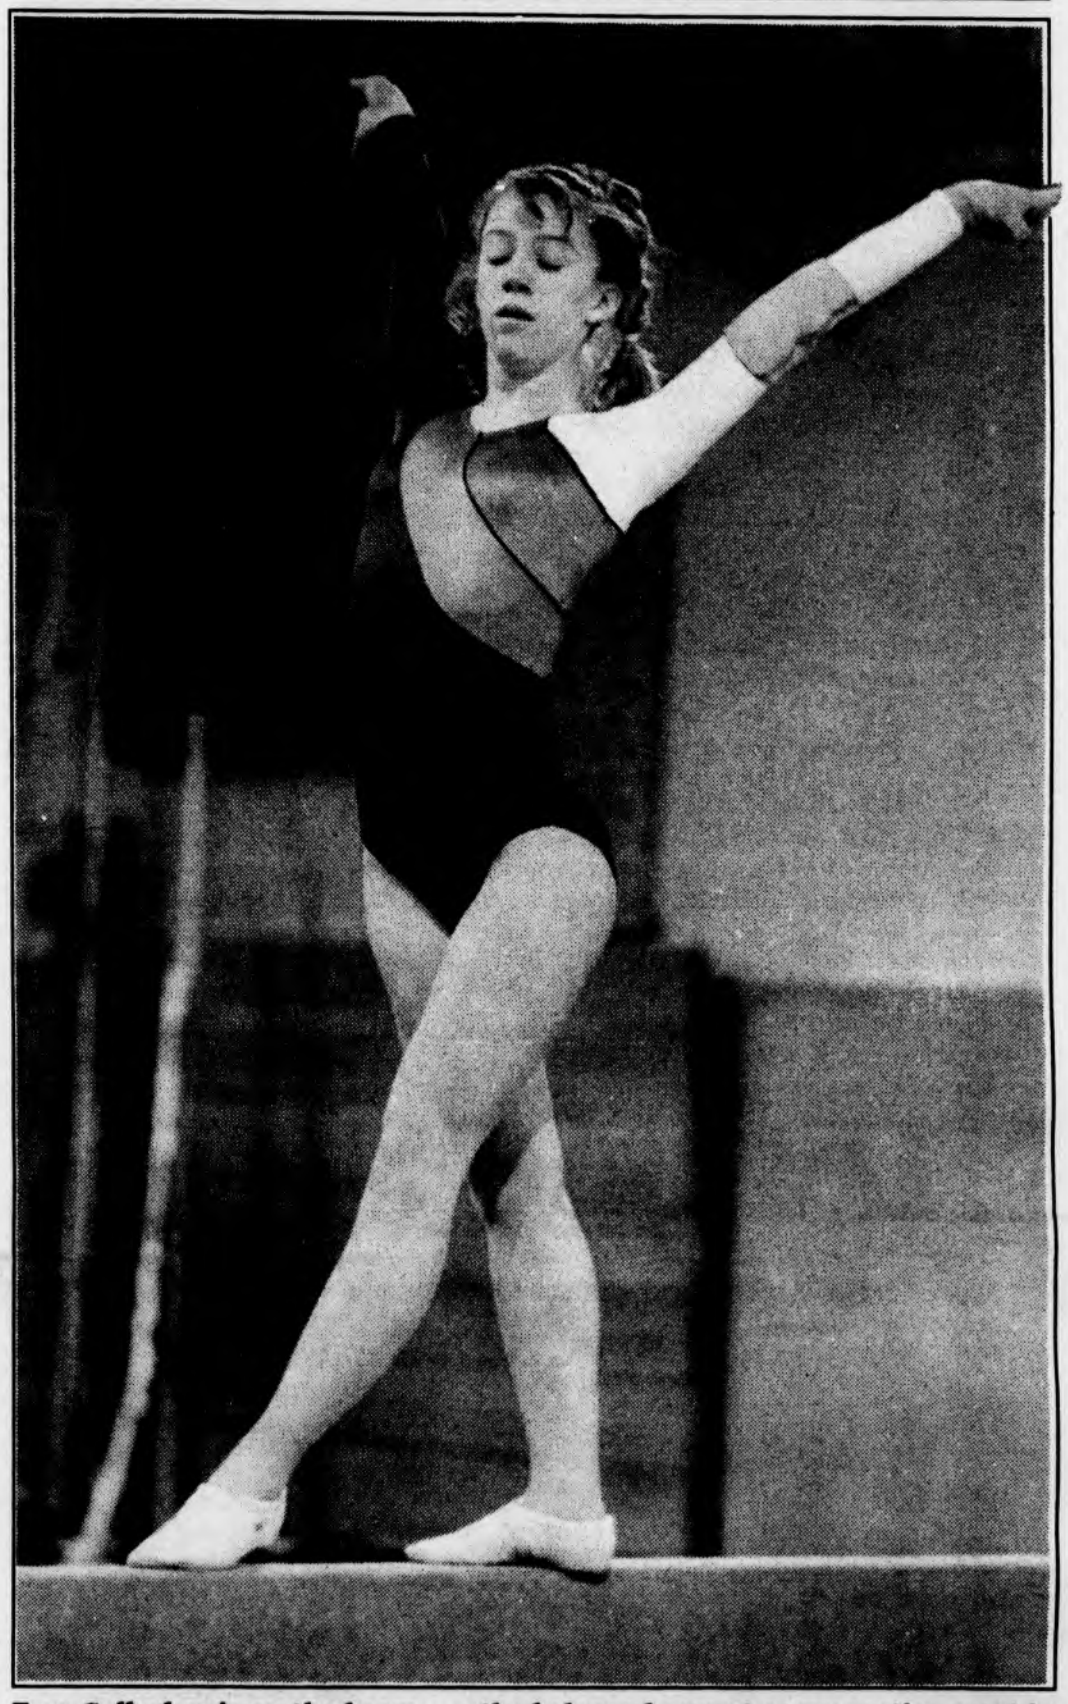
"Proposition 2 1/2 has changed the budget process," Hart said as the public hearing on the school budget began.

There was a time when the budget would draw a larger crowd.

Hart brought two budgets to the school committee. His minimum request was $5.6 million, up 1.1 percent over the $5.5 million budget for this year.

He talked about zero-based budgetting during the hearing and explained the various sections of the budget.

After going through the basics, Hart presented the committee with a supplemental budget including another $69,500. The total included five new line items — two won backing of the school committee. The two amount to $38,000 to hire two new people — a maintenance assistant at $18,000 and a technology assistant at $20,000.



In voting for the additions, school committee chairman Barbara Bliss said the maintenance assistant would save the town money by keeping up the physical plant.

School committee member Nancy Sandell said the technology assistant would help the staff use the equipment already available in the schools.

Requests for a secondary school adjustment counselor, an elementary school computer aide and renovations to create a computer lab at the Osgood School were left on the table.

Another school committee article will be considered by Town Meeting in the spring. The article seeks $95,000 for carpet at Osgood School and replacements of the glass wall at the high school. Both the carpeting and glass

Selectmen hold up vote as

New chief seeks large fire budget increase

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

After a two-hour presentation Monday which included firefighters modelling old and new protective gear, and a video about house fires, new Fire Chief John Nadeau presented his budget to the selectmen which was $160,000 higher than this year's budget.

Most fire department items were level-funded, with the exception of capital outlay, which was 0 in the fiscal year (FY) '92 budget, and for which Nadeau has requested $86,430 in his proposed FY '93 budget.

Of the requested capital outlay money, $70,250 is for a seven-year lease/purchase program to gradually replace four motorvehicles; a 1961 engine, a 1982 forestry vehicle, a 1985 ambulance and a 1987 sedan.

Nadeau said by appropriating smaller sums annually for replacement of the vehicles, the town will be spared the difficulty of having to appropriate several hundred thousand dollars every couple of years when the vehicles no longer function.

If the money is appropriated for the vehicles, Nadeau said the town would also be saving because items would be group-purchased.

Of the four vehicles, the '61 engine requires the most immediate attention, ccording to Nadeau. He said although it is used for back-up, at times it has been on the front-line of fire-fighting.

"I wouldn't go into a building with that engine backing me up. I don't expect to ask my men to," he added. The engine pumps the water to the firefighters.

Another capital outlay item which contributes to the total requested is a new booster pump for $5,250. Nadeau also asked for $5,230 to upgrade the regional communications system at central dispatch by upgrading pagers for career and call fighters.

A portion of the funds would also go toward eliminating cold-spotting which interferes with reception by relocating an antenna.

Nadeau also asked for the appropriation of $2,000 for a personal computer and printer for his own use. Selectmen noted that there already was a computer in the fire station, but Nadeau said the captains and dispatchers use it.

Nadeau's budget also requested the appropriation of $9,481 for a part-time secretary. He said the secretary and personal computer would facilitate ambulance billing. He said he's only been on the two weeks, but noted the ambulance billing was a mess. Once a budget is approved, he said he would concentrate his efforts on cleaning up the billing problem.

Sick leave was budgeted for 34 hours a week in FY '92. In actuality, Nadeau said, 53 sick leave hours a week were used. He said sick days are a problem in the fire department. His FY '93 budget appropriates money for 42 sick leave hours a week.

Selectman Jane Goedecke asked Nadeau to prioritze the additional money and provide that information in order that the board will be able to make a recommendation on his budget.

Nadeau met with the advisory committee Tuesday night and presented his budget.

Town officials unite in filing against CHL

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The town took issue last week with Cohasset Heights Limited's (CHL) plan to double the size of the private landfill off Route 3A, filing detailed objections with the state Office of Environmental Affairs within hours of the deadline.

Susan Tierney, secretary of environmental affairs, has final say on the expansion which, to date, lacks visible local support. The selectmen, board of health, planning board and conservation commission all filed objections to the plan. Even the board of health of Hingham sent a filing to the state in opposition to the plan.

The technical aspects of the filing were written by the engineering firm of Camp, Dresser and McKee Inc. The law firm of Warner and Stackpole assisted in the filing for the town.

The plan of CHL changed in between the first filing and the final Supplemental Environmental Impact Report (SDEIR). The SDEIR changed the time table to speed up the use of the landfill to fill the property before the state mandate closing all landfills takes effect. It added a recycling facility and materials processing to the plans.

Cohasset's week

Durkin liaison to Committee

Shellanne Durkin is the new recreation commission liaison to the Harbor Committee. Selectman Rocco Laguelle appointed her at Monday's Selectmen's Meeting and the vote was unanimous.

Doyon gets raise

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon will receive a 3 percent retroactive raise for the period between July 1 and Nov. 13.

"We feel his work warrants more than 3 percent, if only we had it to give," selectman Jane Goedecke said. Doyon is negotiating a new contract with the selectmen now because the 3-year term of his prior contract is about to expire.

Town may pay for licenses.

A request for the town to pay for the license fee of employees taking the Class I and Class II driving test was tabled at Monday's selectmen's meeting. Selectman Rocco Laguelle sponsored the motion, and he said the maximum amount it would cost the town per employee is $75. The number of employees who intend to take the test was unknown at the time of the meeting. Upon Executive Secretary Greg Doyon's recommendation, selectmen will delay deciding on the issue until a firm estimate of the total cost to the town is obtained.

New batting cage

Cohasset youths will have access to a batting cage sometime next week at Harold Barnes Field.

Selectmen Monday night unanimously approved construction of the 70-foot-long cage on the baseball field on North Main Street.

Tree and Park Superintendent Peter Laugelle presented the proposal for the cage to the selectmen and said he had already checked with neighbors to make sure it met with their approval.

The addition of the cage was welcomed by neighbors, Laguelle said, because it will increase safety around the field. The balls hit in the closed cage will no longer land in the street.

The batting cage will cost $2,992, to be paid by the Little League Fielder's Association, Laguelle said.

The new fire chief, John Nadeau, was at town hall Monday night to discuss his plans to increase the fire budget with selectmen. The new chief who comes from Sanford, Maine, is living in neighboring Hull these days. (Dori Dwyer photo)

FEMA money not enought.

Selectmen will appeal the Federal Emergency Management Association's (FEMA) reimbursement sum to the town for the October 30 storm. Executive Secretary Greg Doyon said the $47,467 sum granted to the town will cover only 35 percent of the damage sustained after the town pays employees' overtime. Doyon said he will resubmit several items to FEMA.

Locals get the edge

Local food vendors will enjoy preferred treatment at the Harborfest and South Shore Art Festival this summer.

Bob Martin of the Harborfest committee told selectmen Monday night that the committee would use a two-tier fee schedule for vendors.

Professional non-Cohasset vendors would be required to pay $500 for participation in the three-day event, but town vendors would pay a lesser amount.

Martin said the amount would be decided by the committee at a later date. A figure of $125 for locals was discussed at the selectmen's meeting, but it was decided the Harborfest Committee was responsible for ultimately setting the fee.

replacement are ongoing projects that would be completed by the appropriation.

There are only a few capital outlay items in the school budget. The writing lab — which was a separate and ultimately unsuccessful item in last year's budget — amounts to $19,000. The rest of the $25,000 needed is coming from fundraising efforts.

School committee member Ralph Kidder pointed out that the committee was taking a risk in voting for the additional $38,000 in the supplemental budget.

"If an override fails, there are no pencils left to cut," Kidder said. "I wish I was courageous enough to push for more. If we misjudge, we lose it all."

Bliss said the items were all defensible. She added that the committee hopes there will be a settlement of the teachers contract before Town Meeting, saying the budget figure as voted gives the community a false impression.

The vote on the budget was 4-0 with Russell Reidy absent. The budget will be presented to the advisory board tonight (Thursday, Feb. 13) as the committee begins seeking support.

Land fill . . .

Sullivan of the board of health, Ned Tebbetts, selectman chairmam and Merle Brown, conservation commission chairman, it called the latest plan "no more than a thinly veiled repackaging of the original landfill proposal with an even larger landfill area without addressing any of the fundamental concerns."

The letter accuses CHL of doing no more than creating the illusion of consistency with the state master plan.

"Although the proponent suggests that the project would bear some relationship to the South Shore Coalition's Solid Waste Plan, in fact, the exisiting South Shore plans make no reference to the Cohasset Heights Landfill proposal and have not identified Cohasset as an appropriate location for nay regional facilities. . . Cohasset and many other local communities participate in SEMASS facility operations and forsee no need for local solid waste landfilling.

The town officials call the materials processing operation refered to in the plan "a roving junk pile."

In the end, after 50 pages of information in the town's filing alone, there is a request for Tierney to reject the project.

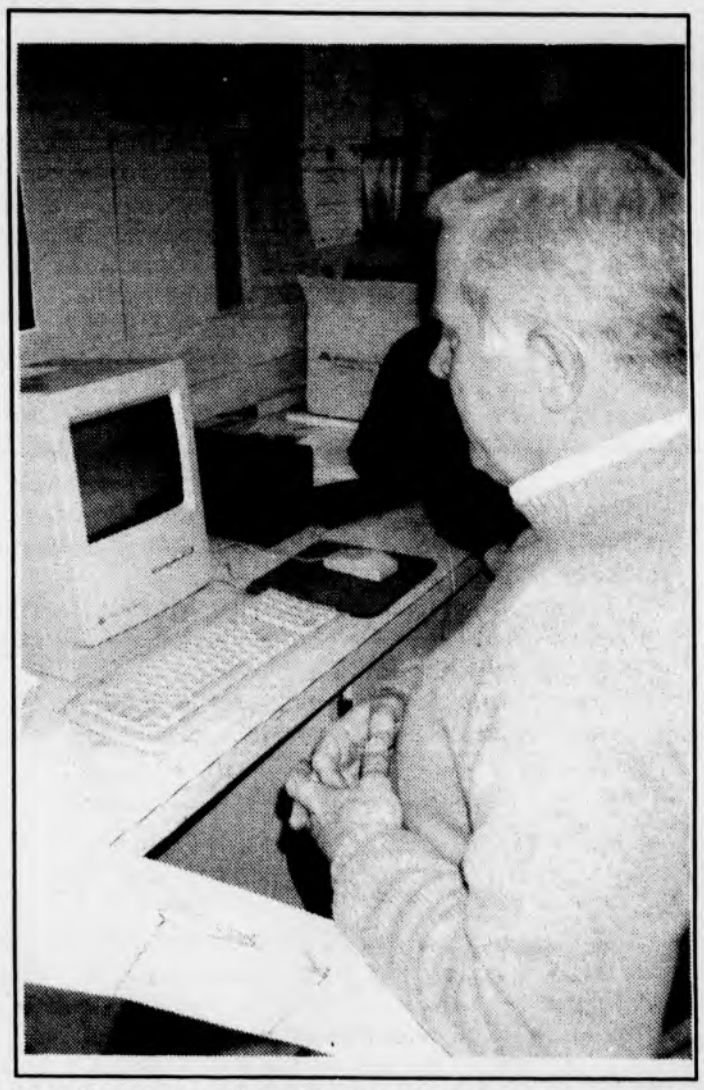
Dreams of a writing lab kept alive



By Joan Stack Kovach
For the PSO

If there's anything former CHS students wish they'd had before they left the Pond Street campus for the real world, it would be computer literacy and some expertise in word processing. Principal Meg Gallagher found in her post graduate survey of the CHS classes of 1986 through 1991 an "overwhelming response" from students who wish they'd begun college or work with more computer skills.

To that end, the Cohasset business community, the School Department, the PSO and the School Committee continue to work together to make the dream of a writing lab a reality. What began as a proposal for about $40,000 has been modified and revised. Currently a $20,000 item in the school budget along with funds raised through efforts of local businesses and the PSO Writing Lab Committee should be enough to make the dream come true. PSO President Kathy Walsh estimates that nearly $5,000 has already been raised or pledged. A spring student fund-raiser is in the planning stages.

As part of gearing Cohasset Schools up for the challenges of the 90s, two high school teachers, Ed Leary of the English Department and Ken Cisneros of the Science Department have become Certified Technicians for Apple and Macintosh computers. Every day in every school in Cohasset, Apples, Macs and other computers are used by students in countless ways from the creation of animated videos in Dr. Packard's high school AV lab to the practicing of math patterns by first graders in the tiny computer room in Osgood. (Watch the Mariner for further news on the use of the Stop and Shop Apples in our schools). When these computers need service, Mr. Leary and Mr. Cisneros are there. Mrs. Gallagher estimates their work has saved the schools more than 60 percent of standard maintenance costs. Each summer all the computers in all three schools are totally gone over for cleaning and preventive maintenance. The school system is well aware that there is more to joining the computer age than just having the machines.

At its last meeting the School Technology Committee unanimously endorsed the acquisition of a CHS writing lab. Teachers are pleased and cautiously optimistic about the future of computer literacy here in Cohasset. While the arrival of the long awaited lab may seem close, it is clear at this point that it will take town wide support and approval of the proposed school budget to make it really happen.

Kearin Dunn works a Macintosh at Cohasset junior/ senior high school during release day activities last week. Dunn, who is head of the math department, was showing some of the members of his department a few of the software possibilities. Math and technology was the subject of the release day workshops for teachers.

Government Island plans move on track

The Cohasset Lighthousekeepers Corp. (CLC)is ready to talk about its plan for the duplex at Government Island.

Joseph McElroy, one of the mainstays in the nonprofit group, said he expects public discussion will get underway sometime after Feb. 21. That is the deadline for proposals for the building.

Selectmen had scheduled a meeting last week to hear the plans but postponed after posting the meeting on the advice of town counsel. McElroy said the next date will be selected after the deadline for proposals but that he hopes it will be soon after the deadline.

Already his group has received committments from two local organizations. The Rotary Club gave CLC a $10,000 challenge grant. The challenge is contingent on CLC getting needed approvals and raising substantial sums. The Veterans of Foreign War post gave CLC $1,000 for more immediate expenses.

Architectural plans have been drawn through other grants and contributions of talent. A model of the area is on view at the Goodale Company in Cohasset Village.

A model of the building showing more detail will be available when the public discussion gets underway.

McElroy said he expects to have cost estimates for the work within the week.

Re: TROLLS R "US"
File No T192-020

Gentlemen:

Our Company is the owner of numerous federal trademark registrations including TOYS "R" US, KIDS "R" US, COMPUTERS "R" US, PORTRAITS "R" US, etc. In addition, we are the owner of a number of common law marks including GALS "R" US, BOYS "R" US, TYKES "R" US, etc. These marks have been used for many years to identify a wide variety of goods and services.

It has come to our attention that you are using the designation TROLLS R "US" as a mark and trade name in connection with your goods and services. Your use of this term is likely to cause confusion with respect to our marks and, in addition, constitute a dilution with respect to our marks under the laws of your state.

Please be advised that in a number of different actions that we have instituted to protect our rights, the Court has consistently held that the dominant portion of our mark is the designation "R US". Accordingly, effectively, it has been held that marks such as BAGS "R" US, LAMPS "R" US, etc. have been considered to be an infringement of our marks. CONSEQUENTLY, WE MUST ASK THAT YOU IMMEDIATELY DISCONTINUE YOUR USE OF TROLLS R "US".

This letter is being sent by Certified Mail, Return Receipt Requested, and we request that we have your response within two (2) weeks from the date of the receipt of this letter so that we can act accordingly.

Very truly yours,

Health insurance creates conflict

Selectman Martha Gjesteby got an answer from the state Ethics Commission on her question about health insurance.

The answer is: She should not vote on the issue lest she be in conflict of interest.

David Hanifan, staff council for the Ethics Commission, further advised her to "abstain from participating in discussions concerning the proposed change to the town's health insurance coverage."

Gjesteby uses the town health insurance plan, paying the full monthly premium herself. She had private insurance coverage until last November.

Currently the town has two health maintenance organizations involved in insurance coverage.

"The town has been negotiating with various employee groups to determine what type coverage should be made available," according to Hanifan's letter.

"The board is considering a proposal whereby the town would drop its insurance plans and implement a self-insurance (indemnity plan)." The new plan is expected to have a higher monthly premium than either of the current plans.

Gjesteby has questioned her position on this matter in the past. She has received an oral and a written opinion from Town Counsel Richard Henderson that she could participate in discussion of the insurance coverage without violating the conflict of interest law.

While Hanifan's opinion is considered informal, he said it was based on relevent precedent set by the Ethics Commission.

"Finally it is possible that other selectmen may also be subject to the prohibitions of Section 19 (the conflict of interest law)," Hanifan said.

• Hats off to Gerard Keating, Karen Hettstrom, Paula Knowles, Ned Tebbetts, and Joyce McFadden for the wonderful job that they did last weekend on the drug-free weekend festivities. All that were involved had a superb time and all of their hard work really paid off. It's too bad that a few undesirables had to shorten the memories by wrecking the ice sculpture on the common, it was special indeed. Other than that, it was a success. The games on Friday night were well-attended, complete with trophies for foul shooting and poster winners; the festivities on Saturday were fun (and delicious), and the dance at the Art Center was so well-planned right down to beautiful table centerpieces...the Sunday night spaghetti dinner was yummy, and well-attended. Hopefully the dreams of this committee and the hard work will be realized, and with workers like them on a drug-free team, it can well become a reality.

• We congratulate Maureen (Dillon) McNulty and her husband Thomas on the birth of their beautiful baby girl, who was born Jan. 21 at South Shore Hospital. A ton of good wishes to you all – enjoy that precious girl.

• Another little baby girl to report about, Brenda and Larry Blair had her Jan. 26, also at South Shore Hospital. We know that you will enjoy your newest family member. Have fun.

• Hats off to John Pereira of Cohasset's Water Department, who was tested as an operator of the Drinking Water Facilities and passed the exam with the highest grade of all that took the exam on that particular round of tests. We are fortunate to have you, John.

• Did you know that Ken Coleman is back on WJDA with his popular radio show that people have loved for a long time? You can hear him on (1300 AM) at 5:20 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays. If you haven't tuned in to his show in the past, be sure to do so now. You sure will be glad that you did. Much success with your return, Ken.

• We also want to congratulate Mary and Michael Merritt on the birth of their son, born Jan. 25 at South Shore Hospital. What a great thing it is to have a brand new bundle of joy around the house to cheer up an otherwise dismal winter.

• Another ray of sunshine to report about, this time thanks to Robert and Kathleen Duncan. They are also the proud parents of a baby boy, born Jan. 24. That's four classmates to report on in the same column. Don't be tearing down any schools yet. Seems as though, at least according to this reporter's stats, we may well have to put a few additions on the present schools if this keeps up. What is better than a child?

• Okay guys and gals, sharpen up your hoop skills for the big "Hoop Shoot," to be held at the Kingston Independence Mall Feb. 8. There will be prizes for those of you sharpshooters who can beat the rest. Details will be in the Mariner. Perhaps Joey Andrade will be one of the lucky foul shooters again. The last time he tried he was the winner of $50, remember? Good luck to all of you would-be winners, practice up.

Cohasset members of the South Shore Health and Education Foundation recently gathered to work on new strategies for South Shore Hospital at Millie Mitman's home. The foundation is a division of South Shore Health and Educational Corp. From left are: Donna O'Connor, Pat Ralff, Jill O'Donnell and Peggy Murphy.

• Just talked to my sister, Ricki, in Hawaii and she reports that she had a nice visit with Tim Malley while he was there during a fishing expedition It's always so nice when a life-long friend makes the effort to stop in for a visit. Everyone appreciates it.

• Happy birthday greetings go to Phil Shockman this week. Everyone loves you, Phil. Here's to health and happiness for now and always.

• That's the news for this week. Please call me with your family (or friend's) news.

New Voke superintendent knows job is no cakewalk

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

South Shore Vo-Tech's superintendent-elect says the he knows his new job will be no "walk in the park."

James J. Hager, 44, who will soon take over the reigns at the regional high school, says he's up for the challenges of shrinking budgets, fewer kids, and outdated equipment.

After a lengthy interview by the regional school committee last week, Scituate board member Val Baker wrapped up all of the problems facing Vo-Tech in a single question.

"With declining enrollment, problems with the budget, shops with no new equipment, the probability of consolidating two campuses, and a divided school committee — are you sure you want the job?" she asked.

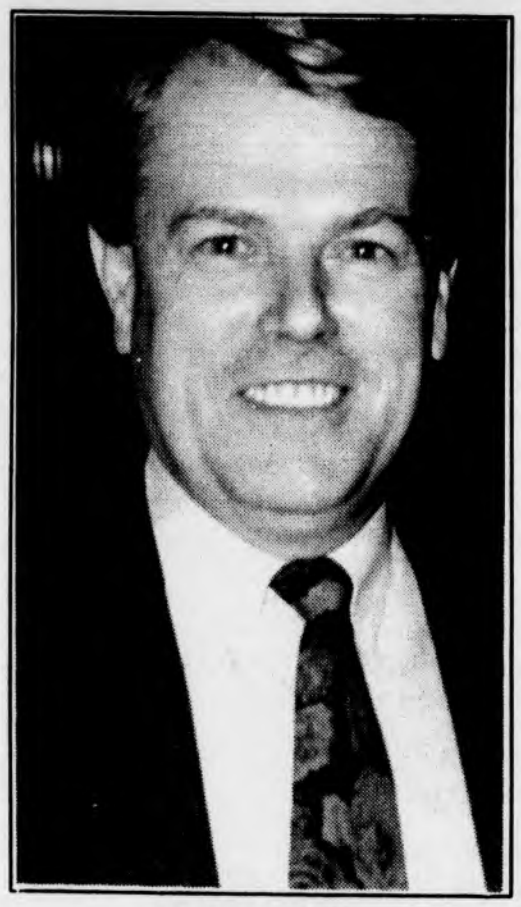
Hager, a Middleboro resident, who is director principal of West Bay Vocational Technical School in Rhode Island, was not dissuaded.

"I don't think it will be a walk in the park. But, yeah, I still want the post," Hager, 44, said.

Hager's salary will be between $58,000 and $62,000, Vo-Tech business manager Robert J. Kelley, Jr. said. Hager's starting date has not yet been determined.

Easton's last day at Vo-Tech was Jan. 31. Richard Burgess, director of special education, is acting as interim superintendent.

CARPENTER/CONTRACTOR



A Brockton native, Hager graduated from Bridgewater State College in 1980 and obtained a masters degree at Fitchburg State College in 1982. From 1971-1979, Hager worked a carpenter and contractor. He is also served in the U.S. Army for two years and is a Vietnam veteran.

Hager said he would spread the word about the value of a vocational education.

"I don't want South Shore Vo-Tech to be a secret to anybody," he said. "Parents need to know what this school is so they can make a choice."

He said the "divided philosophy" on the school board was not unusual.

"I don't think I've ever been associated with groups where there hasn't been a difference of philosophy," he said. "If we keep the best interests of the kids first then the decisions made will be correct."

James J. Hager

Hager said he "would take a hard look" at the cost-per-student at South Shore Vo-Tech which he said "after a quick look is high." (South Shore Vo-Tech has a per-pupil cost of about $9,500 ranking it the fifth highest out of 26 regional vocational schools in the state).

'HANDS-ON' ADMINISTRATOR

Hager said he believes in a "hands on" administration.

"I'm a hands-on and in-the-corridor administrator," he said. "I got into education because I like working with kids. A school is an alive and dynamic place.

"If you sit in the office all day, you forget how alive and dynamic a school can be. I'm a carpenter by trade and becoming a sedentary person is just not my style."

Thomas J. Shaughnessy, guidance coordinator at Montachusett Regional Vocational Technical High School in Fitchburg, and John J. Kosko, director of South Shore Vo-Tech's Abington campus were the other two finalists considered for the position.

February vacation program

The Recreation Department will be hosting a four-day school vacation program at the Deer Hill School, Sohier St. The program will run Tuesday through Friday, Feb. 18 to 21. Youngsters age 5 to 12 may attend, the hours of the program are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Special rates are available for four-day registration and family discounts, daily rates are also available. The program will be coordinated by Ted Carroll and staffed by Summer Playground personnel. The program will consist of sports and games, arts and crafts, and much more. Sex education is more vital than ever

So what makes something news?

Interesting items are news. But interesting is a matter of judgment. What might be interesting to one person could be boring to someone else.

School sports are interesting to the parents of the players and most everyone at the school. Senior citizen events are interesting to the senior citizens.

There are a few subjects most everyone finds interesting. Last week the teachers had a release day and one of the PSO leaders mentioned that people want to know what teachers do during release time.

Well, the junior senior high school was bustling with activitiy from 1:40 to 3:20 p.m. Thursday afternoon as the teachers learned about technology and mathematics.

There were programs like: beginning Macintosh, computer networks, music and computers, cable in the classroom, satellite programs, videodiscs, computer output, CD-Rom, which is a sort of compact disc, the shaping of sexual attitudes, the Human Genome Project, Mathnet and SciNet, plus team meetings for teachers in various grades and departments.

Now obviously each of those meetings was interesting and a learning experience for the teachers in the groups.

Math and technology are part of everyone's future. But it doesn't take a Sherlock Holmes to figure out which subject pulled the interest of the Mariner editor. That's right, she could be found at "The Shaping of Sexual Attitudes."

The level of awareness among the teachers in the room was high. They all knew kids are subjected to tremendous influence through the commercials and advertising of the mass media. They all knew that the portrayal of men and women in commercials was phony.

The group talked about the fact that objectifying women can lead to violence against women. They talked about the fact that the media hides the old and the ugly.

There was laughter when a remark was made that old people only reappear in commercials when they wander back looking for laxatives.

The presentation focused on the idea that the people in ads represent a very small portion of society.

Afterwards Michael Gill, the health coordinator, was kind enough to share some other pieces of information.

For instance, the policy of the Cohasset school system's health curriculum is to encourage the students to postpone sexual activity.

Behind the idea of asking teen-agers to postpone sexual activity is the theory that this is the best way to prevent the spread of AIDS and to reduce teen pregnancy.

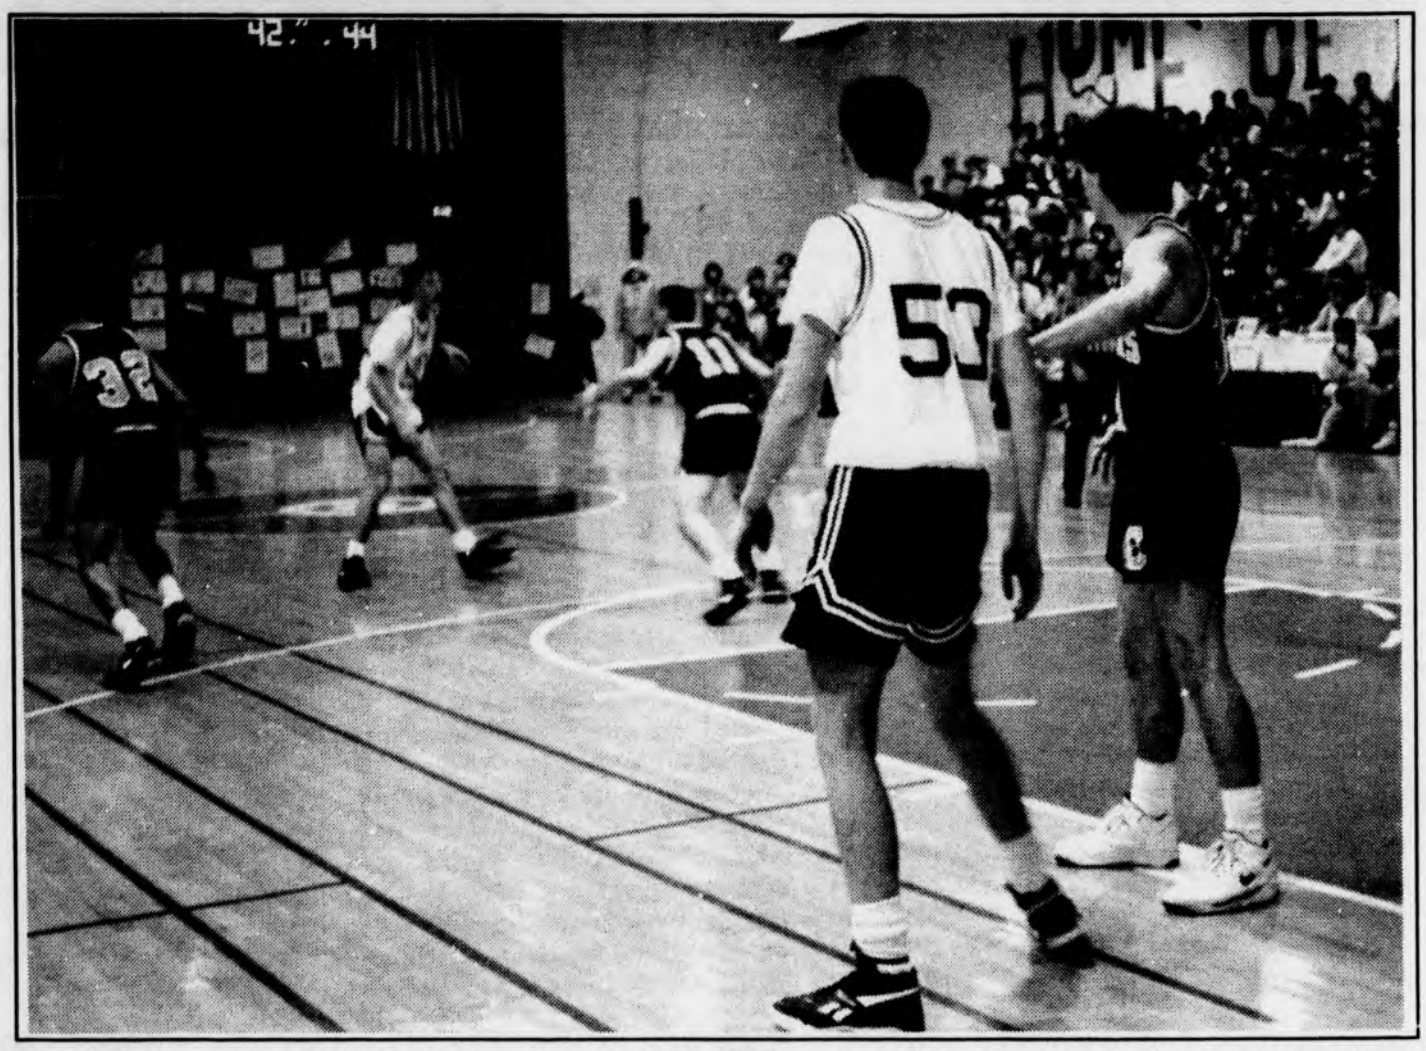
In making his presentation, Gill talked about the fact that teen-agers would prefer to get information about sex from their parents rather than from any other source. But the fact is most teens get this information from their peers.

He said parents are often uncomfortable talking about sex with their children, sometimes the parents feel they don't have enough information. His figures showed that some parents do handle the subject — most of those parents seemed to be mothers from the numbers. The numbers were not impressive.

Gill said the studies show that providing young people with information about drugs and sexuality does not increase the chance that the young people with get involved with either.

"It (health education) does make it more likely, they (the teens) will act responsibly," Gill said.

Behind him a poster on the wall asked: "What is the only 100 percent effective method of birth control?" The answer was written simply: "Say no."



So is this news?

Maybe not, but it is certainly interesting and definitely important.

Cancer center families say thanks

letters

To the Editor:

I would like the opportunity to be able to thank all of those who contributed to a very successful Christmas Card fund-raiser and I was hoping you could help me by publishing this information in upcoming issues of the Cohasset, Norwell and Scituate Mariner.

On behalf of the Families for the Floating Children's Cancer Center, I would like to thank all of those who contributed to the success of our Christmas Card fund-raiser. Thank you to all of those who donated their time to help assemble and pack the cards and thank you to the following local businesses who helped with the sales: Cohasset: The Sea'n Cheese, the Children's Exchange, Dependable Cleaners, and Victoria's; Scituate: Ronnie Shone's; and Norwell: Mailbox Etc. and Wing and a Prayer.

This year the Families for the Floating Children's Cancer Center raised just over $62,000. These monies will be used by the Cancer Center to support the "Human Touch" programs that mean so much to the patients and their families. These programs include a childlife specialist, a parent consultant that works with the families, parent support group, a bereavement program, an adolescent program, and a unique program which has served as a model for others around the country — Very Important Brothers and Sisters (VIBS). In the VIBS program, siblings of patients with cancer get the chance to air their feelings in their own support group. They also become involved with the care of their sick brother or sister by visiting the clinic where their sibling receives treatment.

Business leader discusses lessons

To the Editor:

We've all learned a big lesson these past couple of years. The store doesn't take care of itself.

Of course you have competent employees thoroughly dedicated to doing a good job. Yet, you know that your business may very well be headed for trouble if you dared assume that it could "run by itself." We all know better than to take such a chance.

This is why you're at your desk early in the morning, well into the evening and on weekends. If any of us want to be in business tomorrow, we'd better be on the job today!

This is why belonging to the South Shore Chamber of Commerce is so important to you and your business. That's right – chamber membership is a key to your business success.

While you're doing your job – we're minding the store. While you're focusing your attention on doing business, we're hard at work making sure the state legislature doesn't make it more difficult for you to be in business.

While you're running your operation, we're busy getting a better transportation system so more customers can get to your door.

While you're out making sales, we're meeting with the mayor, the board of selectmen and members of the city council to protect your interests.

While you're busy in your shop, we're eliminating governmental red tape and fighting proposed laws that can hurt your profits.

Of course you're busy minding the store. That's your job. And that's why the South Shore Chamber is in business. We're minding the store, too – for you.

At the South Shore Chamber, we're working to make sure your store will open tomorrow.

By Sen. Robert Hedlund

As the 1992 Legislative session has commenced, there has been no issue which has received greater focus and attention than education. It seems that Massachusetts' state government has finally decided to focus on this problem of great concern to so many.

Recently, Gov. Weld and the Chairmen of the Joint Committee on Education met and agreed that education in Massachusetts was in need of additional state assistance. The governor indicated that the state should contribute an added two hundred million dollars for local schools. I will strongly support this additional education aid proposal because it recognizes both the importance of education, and the current difficulties that communities are facing in delivering this vital service.

The Weld administration has indicated that the additional education revenue will be contingent upon educational reform by the legislature. It is heartening to see that both the governor and the Education Committee have agreed on some meaningful changes to our educational system. Some of the likely reform proposals to be debated will be the elimination of tenure and seniority for teachers, allowing principals to impose school-based management, and moving towards more uniform academic standards.

As you may know from my earlier reports to you, I am a member of the Future's Commission on Higher Education. The commission is working to invoke new ideas and guidelines which will create a more effective higher education system for Massachusetts. While the commission's final report to the governor and the legislature is not expected until later this month, much of the reforms have been established.

The commission's report is expected to have a

Love comes when you least expect it

Getting personal

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

My daughter gave me the best Valentine's gift ever.

I expected this year to be a letdown — after all, last year my Love gave me a red rose and I thought my life was the best ever. It's hard to top the best.

It's hard to follow the footsteps of a spectacular person. He was able to love me and I was always surprised. I'm not an easy person to love. I analyze everything, looking for the flaw.

The truth is: it's difficult for me to accept love. I guess that's the result of old patterns and sad experiences.

I'm a different person today than I was two years ago. I've been working on self-change.

When my love died last year, I fully expected I would never be able to fill the space he left in my life.

But my daughter gave me a present for Valentine's Day that made me cry with joy and gratitude.

She wrote out her feelings and signed them with love. She took the neat piece of paper, framed it in gold and gave it to me to hang in the living room.

The title on the paper is "You are Mine."

When people ask me, 'Would you ever like to meet your real mother?'

My answer is, 'Would you like to meet my real mother?'

She is the person who bandaged my knees when I fell off my bike.

The person who took my temperature when I wasn't faking being ill.

The person who took in a three year old into her home and loved her as her own the very first minute.

The person who watched that three year old become a teenager and watched as the teenager grew up and left home.

The woman who says she is proud of me for being who I am, so I don't have to pretend to be someone I'm not.

The woman is my real mother, maybe our DNA doesn't match, but in my heart and mind we belong together.

My daughter drew pretty leaves and flowers along the edge of the paper. She signed it with love.

Her love makes me feel like a success. It's all I ever wanted. I wanted my children to grow up to be themselves and to be happy about who they really are.

She's my first child, my only daughter. I love her dearly. I love her enough to realize that she's grown — in charge of her own life. I love her and to want to be her friend for the rest of our lives.

And I'm so glad she's not a teenager any more.

This weekend saw the last of the Christmas decorations finally find their way from under cabinets and tables to closets and yearly storage spots. This, of course, made room for any new "treasures" I might now find at all the "end of the year" and "final winter clearance" sales that I haunt like Banquo's ghost every year. It also coincided with the birth of two beautiful baby boys to two sets of ex-Cohasset parents for whom we are very excited, and which immediately led, of course, to the nearest stores filled with baby treasures...which led me to stores filled with gifts for the new moms (THEY certainly deserve a gift or two after nine months and who knows how many hours of labor) which started me thinking about all the perfect gift items I had seen for graduation in June, and wasn't it too bad no one close to us was getting married soon because I had picked out some WONDERFUL wedding gifts....which made me picture churches full of beautiful flowers....which made me remember that Easter is almost here and the EASTER BUNNY has to make his yearly hoppalong both to my house and to a certain Marine Platoon far away...which brought my thoughts to mail and shipping schedules...which brought me once more to flowers for the new parents, and cards, and candy, and jewelry, and baby spoons, and ... Thank goodness I didn't have to leave Cohasset to find any of those presents and "necessary" purchases — I would have been gone all week! But between the Village, 3A, Cushing, Tedeschi, Jonathan Livingston, Cohasset and Sestito Plaza's (Sestito Plaza is not the real name, of course, but it is how I have come to think of it, with all of the great new additions), I was home in a couple of hours. I guess that's what you call a "good news, bad news" situation. The good news is I found everything that I needed within a two- or three-mile radius, here in Cohasset. The bad news is that it was soooo easy to find things to spend money on! If the baby boom goes on much longer, I'm going to be in real trouble!

SPEAKING OF REAL TROUBLE: April 15 is not that far away. If you haven't done your tax return yet, give us a call at 383-1010. We will give you the names of some of the best CPA's, accountants and Tax Specialists in the Commonwealth...and they are all members of The Cohasset Chamber.

AND SPEAKING OF SPRING, TAXES, MONEY, ETC.: Join us at the South Shore Art Center on Tuesday night, Feb.25, at 7:30 p.m. for a meeting with the Advisory Board and a discussion of the Warrant Articles for this year's Town Meeting. The issues are much too important to vote on "blind." Join us Tuesday night.

... Along with the Easter Bunny, early spring is the time to get your garden ready for planting, and to order plants and bulbs to put in it! Our hardware stores and florists will give you all of the help you need. Visit them soon.

Spring also makes us think of summer and sun, surf, and clambakes and lobsters. The Cohasset lobstermen are gearing up to bring in the catch — to the tune of $11,000 dollars worth of lobster traps bought this month to replace those lost in the storm — and lobster gear is not insured.

ONE LAST THOUGHT: If you are looking for a tax deductible donation to list on your tax return, or want to insure something good for our teens, a check or gift to THE TEEN DEPOT would cover both scenarios.

significant impact on any reforms that will be adopted. Preliminary recommendations include a strong move towards differentiating the missions of state colleges. This change will be an important step in providing a clearer educational choice for the students and families of Massachusetts. We expect that colleges will further improve in quality as their program focus becomes more concentrated. Also, this change will be vital in reducing duplication in the state higher education system.

Another important reform will be the implementation of the "Universal Student" program. This recommendation will allow a student of a particular state college to move freely within the system and take better advantage of the resources of other institutions. For example a Massasoit student could benefit more easily from a service or resource at Bridgewater State if it fits his need.

The final report will possess a number of reforms which will exact much improvement in the Massachusetts Higher Education System.

Democrats caucus

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will be holding a caucus on Saturday, Feb. 29, at 2 p.m. to elect delegates to the 1992 Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

Cohasset will be electing four delegates and four alternates, equally divided between men and women, to send to the convention. The apportioned number of delegates has been allocated on the basis of a formula giving equal weight to the Democratic Party registration and the average vote for Democratic candidates in the last general elections for Governor and President for which figures were available at the time delegate tabulations were prepared.

Chartis Langmaid will call the caucus at the Town Hall on Highland Ave. The caucus is open to all registered Democrats, persons ineligible to register and media representatives. The only persons eligible to participate in any portion of the caucus are those who are registered Democrats in the ward or town as of Dec. 31. There will be no absentee or proxy voting.

Candidates for delegate and alternate must also be present, voting and give his or her written consent to be nominated and that nomination must be seconded by two persons present at the local caucus.

All ballots will be written and secret. Those candidates receiving the greatest number of votes on the first ballot will be elected.

Each candidate will be allowed to make a two-minute speech and to distribute on his/her behalf one sheet of paper listing qualifications and ideas.

Slate-making is allowed, but no special preference shall be given to slates. There is no quorum requirement for the caucus.

Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed in writing with the Compliance Review Commission, c/o The Massachusetts Democratic Party, 45 Bromfield St., Boston, MA 02108 no later than March 2.

Daffodil days for cancer

Over 120,000 golden daffodils will burst into bloom in nine South Shore communities on March 24 and 25 as the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society stages its annual Daffodil Days to benefit the research, education and service programs to cancer patients throughout the area.

In 1991 sales of the daffodils in nine South Shore communities generated $54,000, making the South Shore Unit of the Society again tops in the state.

Advance orders will be taken to March 10 for the bright yellow blooms and volunteers will be delivering and selling them beginning March 24. Orders may be placed by calling Mrs. Sweeney at 773-8226 or the South Shore Unit office, 341-4210. A bouquet of 10 is $4, and this year an attractive vase is being offered for $6 so that a bouquet and vase may be ordered for $10. A box of 500 blooms, a favorite of many businesses and professional offices, is $200.

The year of the Monkey begins

Students from Deer Hill watch the puppet show move along. Feb. 2 was the Chinese New Year, bringing in the Year of the Monkey.

A Chinese shadow puppet moves under the adept hand of a Deer Hill student during a puppet show sponsored by the PSO. The show 'Memories of a Chinese Grandmother' thrilled the students.

A Chinese dragon costume is worn by Deer Hill students during the ceremonial lion dance enacted to celebrate the Chinese New Year.

Judith O'Hare's hand puppets act out the story with drama and flair.

Cohasset gymnasts pick up fifth win of season

Feb. 3 Cohasset gymnastics' team traveled to Norwell and beat them 108.95 to 88.45. (Unfortunately for Cohasset, seventh grader Erica Hettstrom was out sick and unable to participate in the All Around Spot for Cohasset. In the last meet, Erica performed an outstanding job on the floor exercise to "Robin Hood" and received a personal best of a 7.45 on that event).

Cohasset's record 5-6 to Norwell's 0-10. Cohasset swept three events bar, beam, and floor exercise to take the win. Capt. Erin Sutherland placed first in the all-around with a 27.20 followed by teammate Tafana Fiore with a 26.05.

The young ladies performed well on the bars and Capt. Tara Gallagher placed 1st with a 7.3 followed by Capt. Erin Sutherland with a 5.95 followed by teammate Megan Pratt with a 5.55.

Cohasset only allowed three falls on the beam out of six gymnasts. Again Capt. Tara Gallagher placed 1st with a 7.75 followed by teammates Tafana Fiore 7.2 and Erin Sutherland with a 6.6.

Although Cohasset did not win the vault, Cohasset had good vaults by Capt. Erin Sutherland 7.15 followed by teammates Jodi Colwill 7.0 and Caroline DeLima 6.75.

Outstanding performances on the floor exercise with a show of poise and grace Capt. Tara Gallagher 7.6, Megan Pratt 7.25, Erin Sutherland 7.50, Tafana Fiore 7.15.

Other performances by Marnie DeMichele, Nicole Haefner, and Julie Smith helped out a great deal in Cohasset's victory.

"I am proud of my gymnasts at Cohasset High School" remarks CHS gymnastics coach Ruthann Sargent. Cohasset hit its high of the season 110.45. (At the beginning of the season Cohasset started out with 93.0-95.00, an improvement of 17 points. Each gymnast should be happy with that).

Although Cohasset has placed fourth in the League, Saturday evening Cohasset placed third for the night. "I just wanted the girls to have fun and do their very best. I wanted the other towns to see just how much we have improved," Sargent says.

Cohasset began on the vault which has been their weakest event all season. But Cohasset had their best performance all season on the horse with Capt. Erin Sutherland 7.35 followed by Caroline DeLima 7.1 and Jodi Colwill with a 7.05.

Swinging on over to the bars, Cohasset performed well again. Capt. Tara Gallagher led us off with a 7.30 followed by Capt. Erin Sutherland 6.15 and Megan Pratt 6.05. (Teammates Nicole Haefner and Erica Hettstrom were right behind them.)

Floor exercise Capt. Tara Gallagher hit a 7.80 followed by Megan Pratt 7.3 and Capt. Sutherland 7.20 (good performances by Tafana Fiore and Julie Smith).

Math news

The fourth Continental Math League Contest was held Feb. 6. The eighth- graders participated in this fourth contest of the season and those with the highest scores are as follows:

In the Euclidean Division, given to all students in the advanced level of mathematics, were Michael Coates and Tammy Maitland with four points, and Lauren DeVito, John Whitehouse, David Marr, David Hansen and Steffie Lubitz with three points. Tammy Maitland is the leader in this division as to this date.

In the Pythagorean Division, given to all eighth-graders in the Honors class, the leader was Abby Pease with four points. Robin Ordelheide, Chloe Chittick, Ryan Sawchuk, Megan McNamara, Simeon Ketchum and James Rustead each had three points. The leader in this division to date is Abby Pease.

N.E. Math League

The 1991-1992 New England Mathematics League Contest was taken by eighth-graders at Cohasset Junior High School Tuesday, Feb. 4. This contest is taken by all students in the honors section of mathematics.

This year the high scorers on the test were Megan McNamara with 33 points, Robin Ordelheide with 32 points, and Erin Devine, Michael Kasameyer and Abby Pease with 31 points. These are great scores by this group of eighth-grade students and our congratulations go out to all these fine students.

Art awards

Four students from CHS are participating in the Boston Globe Scholastic Art awards show in Boston.

- Marisol Perry - photography
- Kate Barrett - drawing
- Cecilia Candia - drawing
- Julie Workman - drawing

Friday, Jan. 25, the Culture Vulture Club was treated to a class in night photography by Imants Asbergs at Fanueil Hall.

Three students from CHS have been nominated for Art All State. They are Mike Equi, Nicole Haefner and Erin McAllister. They are shooting a portfolio of slides, collecting recommendations, writing essays and filling out applications. They will be interviewed by judges in Boston in March.

CHS library display

For the past several weeks Cohasset High School has had a display commemorating the 1991 women Nobel Prize Winners. Nadine Gordimer from South Africa was awarded the prize in literature — her books include Jump, Burger's Daughter, The Late Bourgeoisie World, A Guest of Honour, Friday's Footprint, and The Conservationist.

"Like Rosa Burger, Nadine Gordimer is bound to South Africa by a fidelity that she believes she could not feel for any other country or society ... she has continued to live in her native land and to use her talent and influence against apartheid." (Current Biography)

Like Gordimer, Aung San Suu Kyi, the recipient of the 1991 Nobel Peace Prize, is passionate about her homeland, Burma. At the forefront of a pro-democracy movement in a country where military rulers have overturned elections, she has been under house arrest since 1989 for her non-violent movement to overthrow this military regime. The high school library has copies of most of Nadine Gordimer's books, thanks to a very generous gift from The Arts Boosters Club. And we will soon be purchasing a copy of Aung San Suu Kyi's biography (again thanks to the same group). Please feel free to drop by and borrow one of these books if you are curious about either of these extraordinary women.

Special needs talk

The South Shore and Coastline Councils for Children will hold a joint meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 25 at 7:30 p.m. at the East Milton Congregational Church, 610 Adams Street, Milton. Mike Savage, the Executive Director of the South Shore Educational Collaborative of Hingham, will speak on "Survival in the 90s." He has been very successful in maintaining the programs that he directs even though there have been many budget cuts. His efforts include a teen parenting program, a residence for adolescents, an alternative South Shore High School, and many others that deal with children who have special needs of varying types.

All Council meetings are open. Please call Betty Tufankjian of Scituate at 545-0130 for more information.

DRAMA WORKSHOPS

The Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for Drama Workshops for children and youth ages 5 to 17 years. Instructing the Drama programs will be Darcy Pratt of the Cohasset Dramatic Club. Pratt has previously taught children's drama workshops and is active in local theatre productions. Pratt conducted the Recreation Department's Drama Workshops last season. Workshops meet for 7 week sessions and the first session is scheduled to begin Saturday, Feb. 29, at Cohasset High School as follows:

9 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. - ages 5 - 9

10:30 a.m. to noon - ages 10 and over

The fee for Drama's seven-week session is $54 per child and a $10 family discount for second/subsequent children is available. Checks should be payable to "Town of Cohasset." Drama Workshops are designed to orientate children and youth to the many aspects of the theatre and play production and to teach and reenforce the various skills and techniques essential to stage acting.

Participants with or without prior acting experience are encouraged to register. To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791 as soon as possible. This program is open to non-Cohasset residents, on a space available basis.

LANDSCAPE DESIGN

Telephone registrations will be accepted for a four-week Landscape Design Course to be taught by Greg Bilowz, Landscape and Environmental Design architect.

The program is scheduled to begin Wednesday, Feb. 26, at 7:30 p.m. at Cohasset High School, meeting weekly through Wednesday, March 18.

The fee is $32 per person and class must be limited in size. To register please call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at 383-6791.

The course outline follows:

Basic Horticulture Practices—including propagation techniques, pruning, soil preparation, fertilization, mulching, edging and how to survey your land.

Seaside Landscaping—methods of overcoming the elements and creating wind breaks for delicates.

British Gardens—a slide presentation of Britain's finest gardens, including Bodnant Garden, Hidecote Manor, and Knightshayes Court.

Class Project—class members to plot a section yard and design an improvement scheme for the site.

Bilowz holds a B.S. degree in Environmental Design from U. Mass. and an M.A. degree from the University of Sheffield, England, and has been actively involved in the field for fourteen years, specializing in coastal landscape design.

FURNITURE RESTORATION/REFINISHING

The Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a furniture restoration-refinishing-revitalization class, to be taught by Kenneth Sargent of Cohasset Country Workshop, by calling the recreation office at 383-6791.

Sessions are five weeks in duration, Wednesday or Saturdays morning, 9 to 11 a.m. The fee for this programs is $53 per person, and classes are restricted in size to allow for individual attention.

Participants should select a piece of furniture that is relatively portable, for class work. A chair or small table is ideal. Participants will not only learn the arts involved with restoration and refinishing, but will also have a completed piece of furniture by the end of the session.

Sargent has been a professional refinisher for a number of years in Cohasset, and has taught the art of restoration and refinishing to a number of classes over the years.

Special offerings at CCC

The Cohasset Community Center will be offering the following special courses starting in March:

March 4 - Babysitting Course with Linda Farrag, R.N. for students ages 10 and over. The course is held from 3:30 to 5 p.m. for a four-week period. This program stresses a better understanding of young children and infants, their care and safety and other practical tips. Participants will learn what is expected from a babysitter. Topics include first aid, fire safety, entertaining young children, child development and nutrition. Students receive an extensive babysitter's manual.

March 4 - Introduction to Modeling with Candy Ford, Ford Modeling Agency for girls ages 12 to 18. This course will be held on Wednesdays from 4 to 5:30 p.m. and 4 to 6 p.m. the last week of a five-week period. A team of experts and a professional model will teach the basics of modeling. Make-up application will be taught by a professional make-up artist, hair styling by a top hairdresser, walking and poise from the foremost instructor in that field. A photographer, video artist and agency representative will describe the world of modeling, and a professional model will field questions.

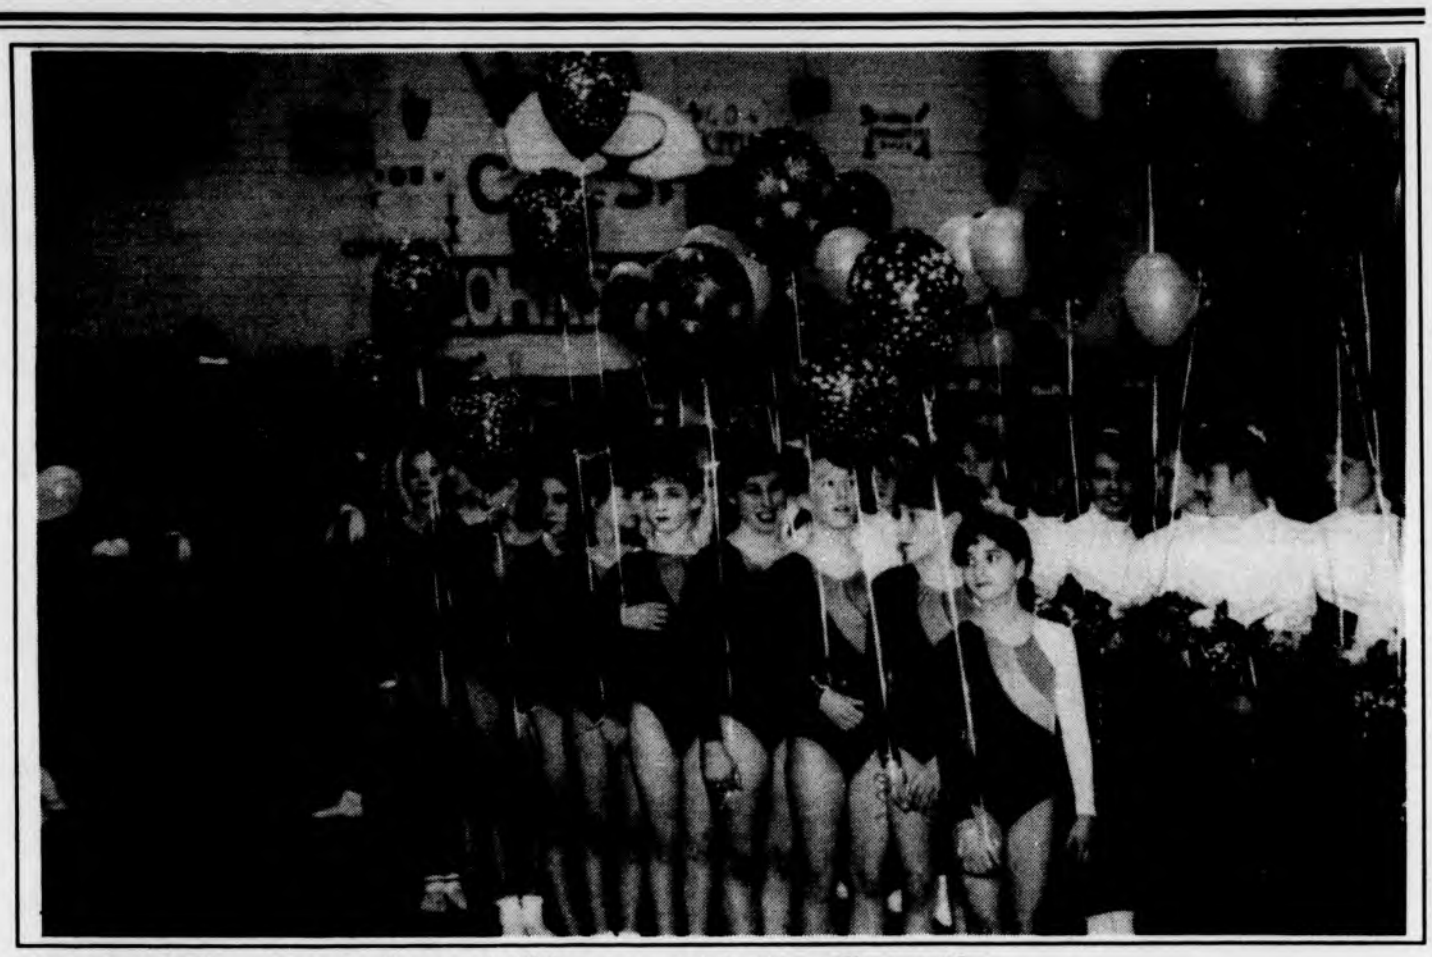
Swim team heads towards season close

The Cohasset High boys' swim team, in its second year of existence is 3 and 4 heading into the last weeks of the season.



Cohasset has defeated Westwood, Taunton and Catholic Memorial High Schools, and been bested by Duxbury, North Quincy, Middleborough and Sandwich. The improvement over last year has been noticeable. Last year's loss to Middleborough was by 45 points; this year's, 16 points.

So far four Cohasset swimmers have qualified for the South Sectional Championships: Chip Anderson in the 50 yard free style, 100 yard backstroke, and 200 yard I.M., Nick Hawks in the 500 yard freestyle, Topher Henderson in the 100 yard butterfly and Dave Leahy in the 100 yard breaststroke and the 200 yard freestyle. John and Tim Brister, Dave Leahy and Topher Henderson are within hundredths of a second of qualifying in the 50 free.

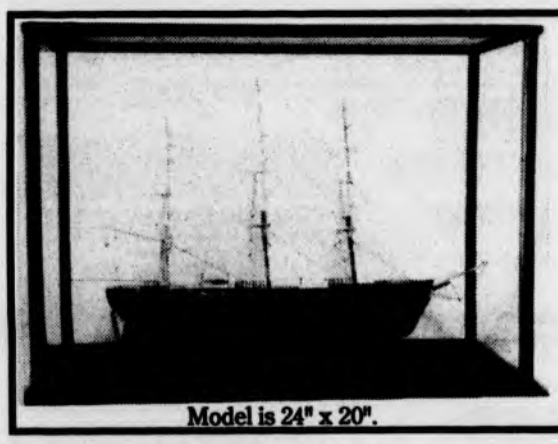
Sophomore Tom Greco has been invaluable in the 100 yard breaststroke and the 100 yard butterfly, and will be swimming those strokes in the Pilgrim Conference Championships on Friday, along with Dave Leahy and Topher Henderson.

Jamey Kondrat will join Chip Anderson in the backstroke and Topher Henderson in the 100 fly. Doug Cameron will be swimming the 500 free and the 100 breast. Bobby Meehan will join Cameron in the 100 breast. J.L. Williams, plagued by the flu is back and will be swimming the 100 back. In a format which gives less advantage to larger teams, the Cohasset squad hopes to do well in the conference championships. If last year was any indication, it will be a close finish and every point and every swimmer will count.

The Pilgrim Conference Championships take place Friday, Feb. 14 at the Lincoln Hancock School in Quincy, beginning at 3 p.m. Admission for adults is $3, for students $2.

CHS gymnastics teams performs at all league meet in Norwell recently.

McElroy and Towle appear on Pierson



Thursday, Feb. 13, host Wigmore Pierson's guest on Pierson to Person in the first segment will be professional wrestler Brittany Brown from Scituate who has been wrestling professionally nationwide for 10 years.

The second segment guests will be Joseph R. McElroy and Herbert Towle, Cohasset, discussing their community service project to preserve and adapt The Light Keepers Residence for public use.

The Pierson to Person television show is broadcast live each Thursday, 8 to 9 p.m., from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channel 53 in Hanover, Hingham, Hull, and Norwell; on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset and Scituate.

Those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road by 7:30 p.m.

For further information about upcoming guests and additional show information contact the Pierson Show's Executive Producer, Robert Belliveau at 545-0643.

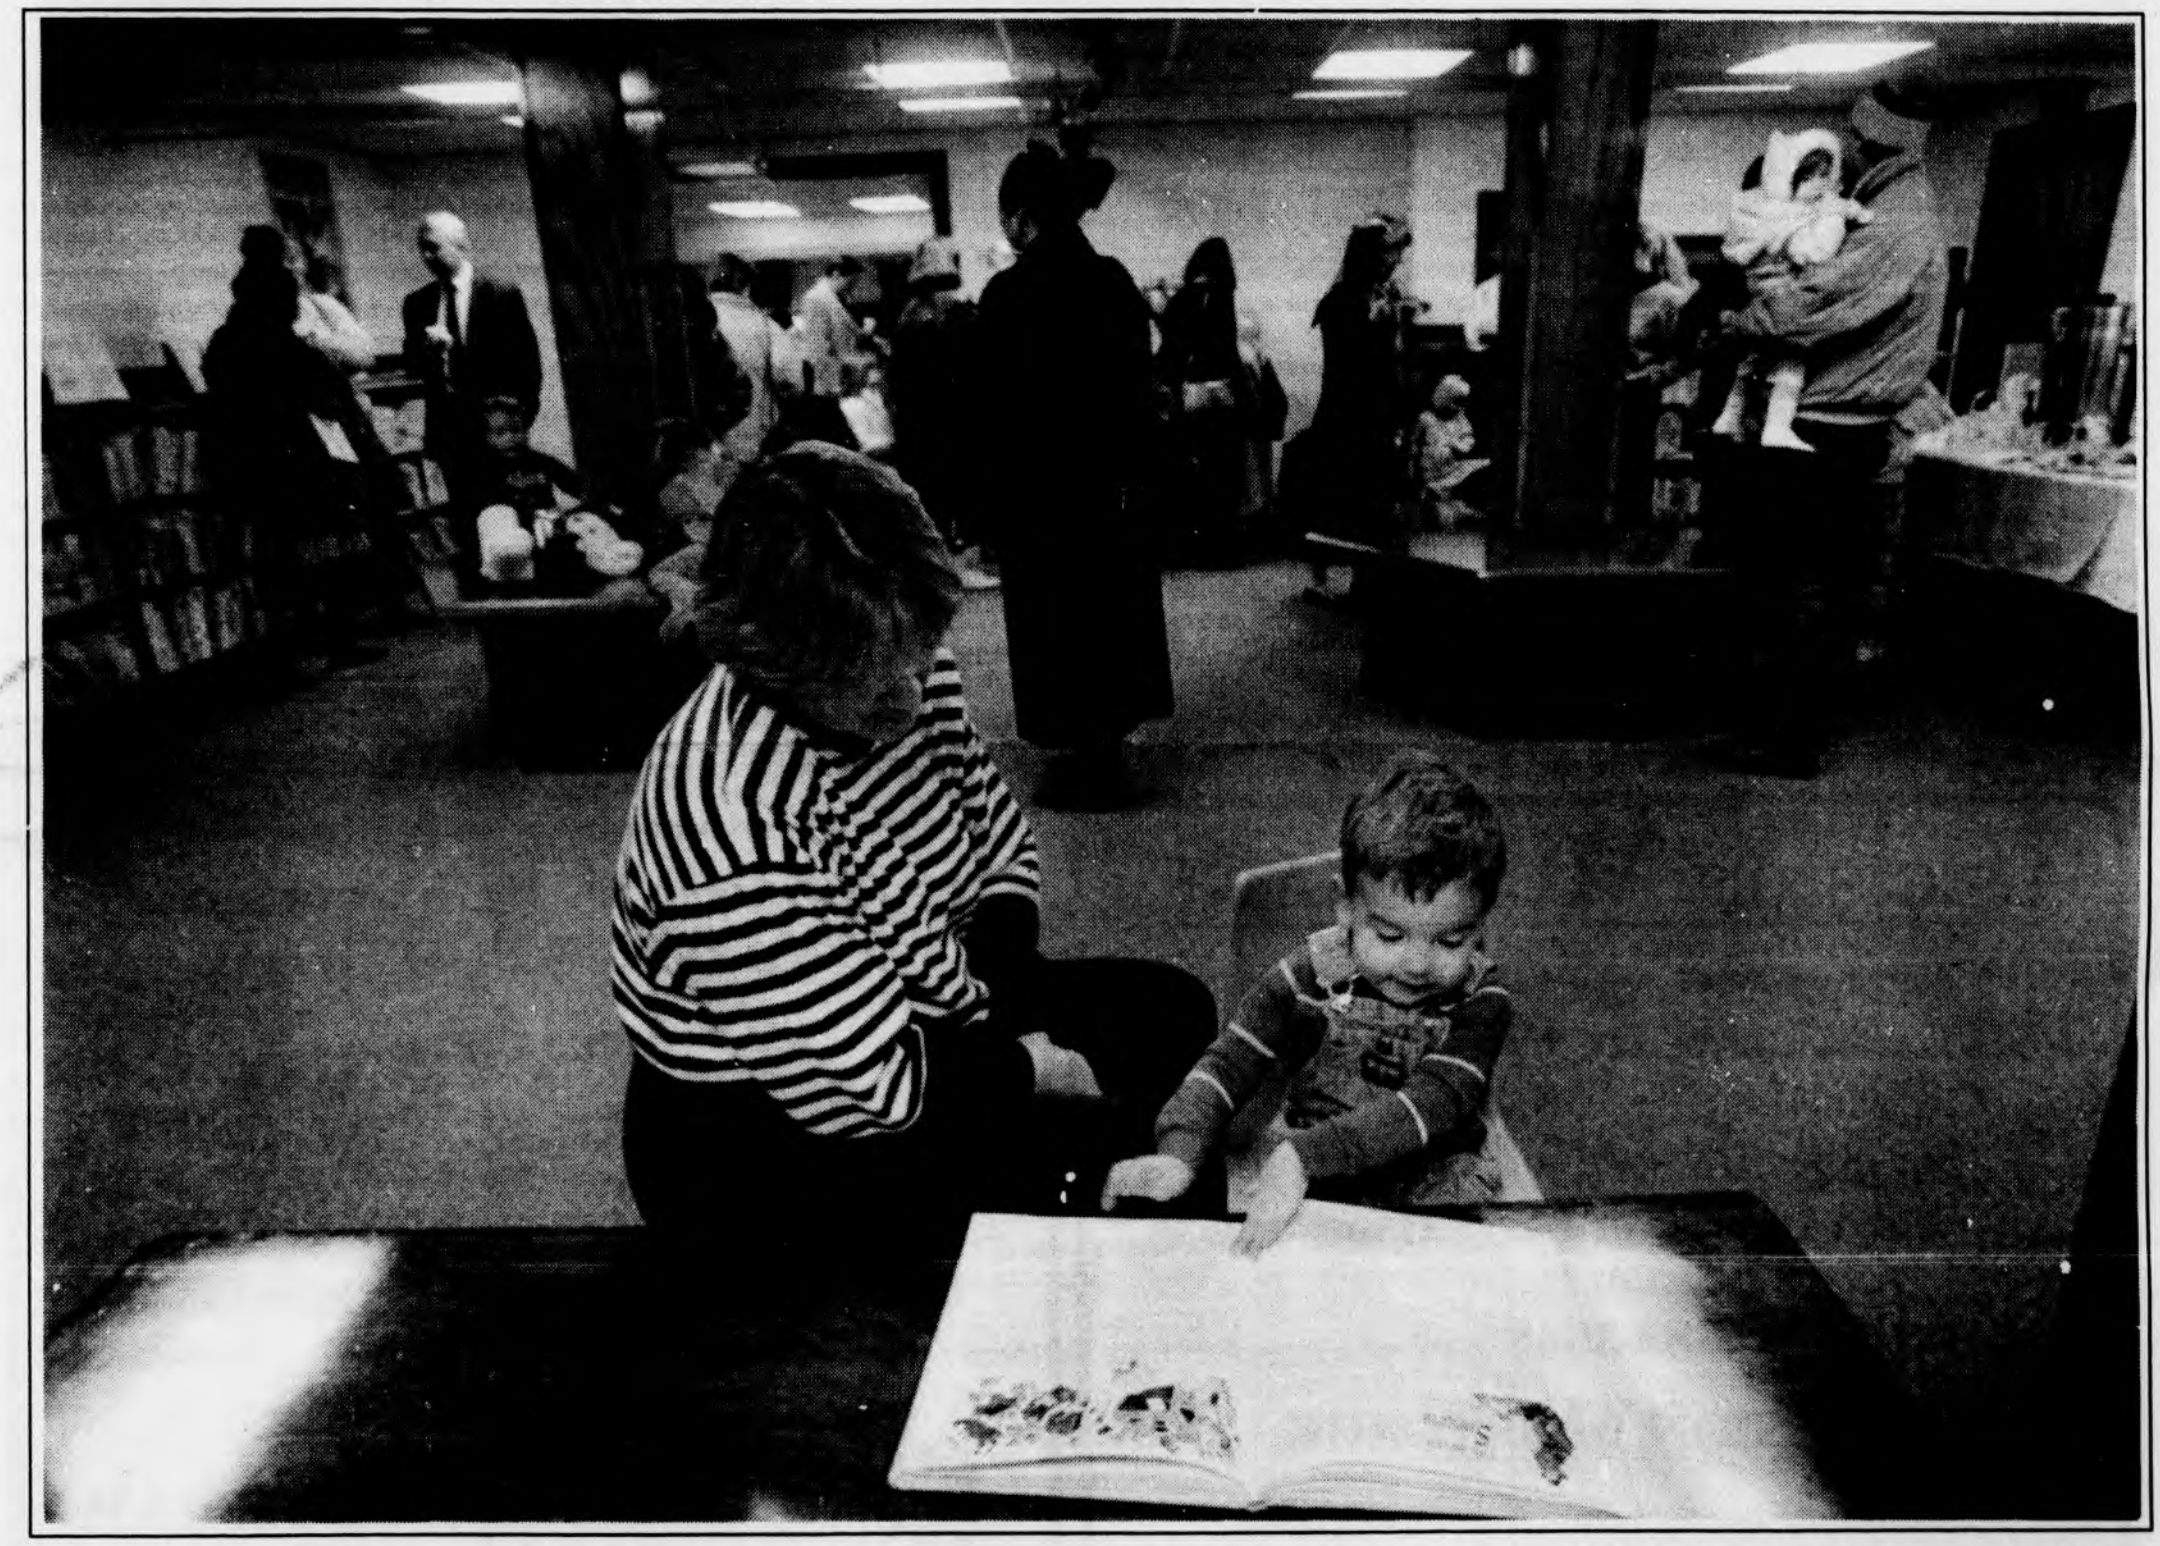
No Cohasset youths arrested as Fake IDs bring down new wave of prosecution

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Since the first of the year, employees of Cohasset Plaza Liquors have turned more than a dozen minors over to the police for prosecution in connection with fake licenses used to try to buy alcohol.

But the police prosecutor, Sgt. Brian Noonan, knows of only five cases that are actually going to court.

All of the youths known to Noonan happen to come from Hingham.



Other information from an inside source indicates there have been court cases involving both Scituate and Hingham youths. The charges against the youths have varied.

It is a felony to possess an altered license for the procurement of alcohol — but Noonan says the actual charge brought is up to the arresting officer. He believes the tough felony law on the books is really meant to be used against people who manufacture fake licenses although he couldn't find a lesser charge that mentioned an altered license. It is a misdemeanor to possess a fake liquor ID but liquor IDs are not acceptable proof of age at Cohasset Plaza Liquors.

Have any Cohasset youths been turned over to police?

At least one witness to the new policy says there have been local kids caught redhanded with altered or otherwise fake licenses.

Tebbetts upset about low FEMA reimbursement

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

State Rep. Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield, wants to make sure the federal government does not underestimate the true cost of the Oct. 30 northeaster to cities and towns along the coast.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency estimates Massachusetts communities sustained $35 million worth of damage from that nor'easter and from last August's Hurricane Bob.

President Bush declared both storms federal disasters. The declaration triggers emergency federal response and pledges 75 percent reimbursement of approved costs incurred during the storms.

The state picks up 12.5 percent, and the community absorbs 12.5 percent of the expenses.

"What we're hearing is that $35 million is a low estimate," said Hynes last week.

"The state cannot pass its 12.5 percent without some sense of the federal damage estimate."

Hynes is chairman of a Special House Committee on the Oct. 30 Storm and with six other legislators — Reps. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, Stephen Tobin, D-Quincy, Robert Lawless, D-Orleans, Eric Turkington, D-Falmouth, Bruce Tarr, R-Gloucester, and Edward Clancy, D-Lynn — is conducting several hearings.

The first was in Scituate Thursday; hearings were held in Nantucket and Chatham Friday; a hearing on the North Shore will be held in the near future.

Cohasset's week

Lahive is congressional aide

Mark S. Lahive of Cohasset has been named a senior legislative assistant to U.S. Rep. Dick Zimmer, R-NJ.

Lahive, 24, currently Zimmer's legislative assistant on economic issues, will now coordinate Zimmer's legislative activities. He will also work on environmental issues.

Lahive previously was a legislative assistant for Rep. Peter Smith, R-VT.

He received his bachelors degree in economics in 1989 from Middlebury College. He is the son of David and Janet Lahive.

111 blood donors

Jan. 28 was a cold winter night and the roadways had a dusting of slippery snow but that did not deter the 111 generous blood donors from their humanitarian good deeds.

Jack Cibelli, co-chairman of the Cohasset Red Cross Blood Drive, said he was a bit concerned a week before the drive knowing that the cold weather and flu season would take their toll. However, the numerous churches, employers, and civic organizations met the challenge and recruited a record number of donors.

Al Odermatt provided the extra push by making over 100 reminder phone calls on the eve of the drive. It was another successful community event.

Annual Special Needs Plan

Cohasset Public Schools is preparing its Annual Special Needs Plan. Interested parents are invited to attend a meeting Wednesday, Feb. 26, at 10 a.m. in the Office of the Director of Student Services when the plan will be discussed.

Participants should call the Office of Student Services at 383-6104.

Town accountant leaves

Mary Gallagher, Cohasset town accountant, was hired by Scituate as the new town accountant. She succeeds William Frugoli who resigned Oct. 21.

Gallagher, Cohasset's town accountant since 1987, was chosen from a field of 30 candidates, including Judith Marden, who has been assistant town accountant since 1979 and was named acting town accountant upon Frugoli's resignation.

Everyone at the library opening got to have a "hand" in decorating the entrance. Ceremonies at the new Osgood School Library were last week. (John Stobierski staff photo)

Scituate selectmen interviewed five candidates in January, and chose Gallagher last Saturday.

"We certainly came up with the best four or five candidates," said selectmen Joseph Norton.

"When it came right down to the wire, in my mind, it was between Judith Marden and Gallagher.

"Judy did an excellent job and should be congratulated."

Marden will continue working under Gallagher.

"The combination of Gallagher and Judith will make for one of the strongest accounting departments in the area," Scituate selectmen Donald Brown said.

Before reaching a decision selectmen also interviewed Taunton city auditor Barbara Hagg, who subsequently withdrew from consideration, Fitchburg assistant city auditor Arti Mehta and Jane Ring DiPalma of Cohasset, an administration and accountancy consultant.

Greeenbush study due

A draft report for alternatives to extending the Greenbush railroad line through the Hingham business district is expected to be completed by the end of April, with a public discussion slated for mid-May.

Peter Calcaterra, project manager, said the revised timetable accounts for the lengthy process in reviewing Hingham's historic and parkland resources.

For further details, call Pam Wolfe at Sverdrup Corporation at 482-7880.

FEMA . . .

A parade of local officials, led by Scituate town administrator Richard Agnew, complained about the lack of response from FEMA inspectors and the inadequacies of their damage survey reports.

"Scituate was hit worse than any other town on the coast, and I find it incomprehensible that FEMA sent one inspector to survey the town who was not even an engineer," said Agnew.

"We dedicated two of our staff full time to FEMA, and we started long before they came."

The engineering staff detailed everything, mapping the coastline, documenting the debris removal,measuring the cracks in the seawall and the broken revetments, he said.

"I question specifically the scope (of the repair projects) and the (estimated) costs."

FEMA spokesman Ed Lecius said Agnew and other officials were told that if they thought FEMA missed something or would like an area to be looked at again, they would be there.

"We have received no request formally or informally. The only thing we have seen is what we have read in the press.

"We're ready to go back to the community, and we have made that abundantly clear not only to town officials but to Representative Hynes, Congressman Studds and their staff," said Lecius.

Cohasset selectmen chairman Ned Tebbetts echoed Agnew's remarks. "Cohasset incurred $150,000 of damage. (FEMA) came up with damage of $62,000 and will pay 75 percent of that.

"In '78 (following the blizzard) and the hurricane, FEMA and MEMA (the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency) covered Cohasset fairly well.

"This time there is far less from FEMA, and I don't know what the state is coming up with."

MacDonald Sprague of 322 Ocean St., Brant Rock, told Hynes he finds himself "caught between a rock and a hard place."

Although his home sustained less than 50 percent damage, he decided to undertake extensive renovations at the same time as he repaired storm damage.

Now, he must elevate his home, either eight feet or 12 feet, and to obtain a waiver from FEMA it will take six months to two years to get resolved.

Sprague blamed himself for the misunderstandings which have placed him in this dilemma and wondered if there was any way a homeowner could be advised.

Another Marshfield resident who also owns property in Scituate said the two towns were handling the rebuilding process differently and urged uniformity.

Marshfield dentist Linda Cruickshank, who lives on Third Cliff in Scituate, asked whether she, as a private citizen, could submit her own disaster survey report to the federal government.

She said her home, 102 feet above the ocean, now is imperiled. The base of the cliff has been scoured, she said.

Cruickshank estimated it would cost between $500,000 and $600,000 to shore up the base of the cliff. "FEMA gave me $10,000, and no contractor will touch it."

Every town department— the building department, the health board, the planning board, the conservation commission — is trying to strike a balance, said Barry Cornwall, a member of the Marshfield conservation commission.

Each has common interests, but they go off in different directions.

Cornwall suggested that perhaps a FEMA bylaw could be put in place that brings together the building code, the Wetland Protection Act, Title 5 of the sanitary code and subdivision control.

"The storm exacerbates this problem, but there is always tension" among the different boards, he said.

Noonan says Cohasset kids know the liquor store has toughened its policy and it would be unlikely they would try to buy at the store on Route 3A.

Noonan said he knows there was one night when police were called to Cohasset Liquors 13 times by the management.

"I think that was probably the first day of the new policy and they may have erred on the side of caution," he said.

With 13 calls in one day and only 5 cases pending in court, might that mean the police response is slow?

Not according to employees in the store who credit Cohasset police with arriving in seconds after being summonsed.

Employees of the liquor store were reluctant to speak on the record about the situation but Feb. 6 in the Hull Times Lisa Rogers, who has worked part time for several years at the liquor store, wrote about the negative atmosphere in that community. To make her point, Rogers said: "I know for a fact that in Cohasset 10 minors have been arrested in January alone at one particular liquor store for attempting to purchase alcohol. Had this occurred in Hull it would have been on the Ledger's front page."

Noonan said only Cohasset Plaza Liquors calls the police with complaints of the kind.

"Maybe it doesn't happen at other liquor stores," Noonan said.

In December Cohasset Plaza Liquors was charged with selling a case of beer to a Scituate minor. When the matter went before selectmen, the decision went against taking any action against the store which is owned by the 380 Corporation.

At the time the store's management said there would be a new tougher policy that would involve prosecution of any minor with a false ID.

Also at the time, there was a great deal of discussion about the fact the youths involved in the case did not face any criminal charges. The Scituate police officer who investigated the case testified he recovered the beer without laying the groundwork for a case against the youths.

Politics proves painful for some politicians

By Senator John Kerry

It seems that a lot of prominent Americans are traveling in the past few weeks. President (George) Bush finally got worried about the economy, and took off to Japan to seek trade concessions. He and the other presidential candidates are traveling to New Hampshire and virtually everywhere else in the country in their search for support and votes.

I took a trip as well – all around the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in the past several weeks. It is a trip I take each year when the Senate is in recess. I met, spoke with, and listened to hundreds of people from all walks of life, and I heard some important but disquieting messages I want to share.

It became apparent very quickly that people in Massachusetts are angry and frustrated, and are pessimistic and in some cases even despondent about their futures. They have lost faith in their government institutions for any real help. Parents, teachers, business owners, students, workers – all had a similar refrain: their leaders seem to have lost touch with the difficult reality of life in 1992.

A man, who attended a town meeting in Ludlow with his young daughter, told me that he had given up on investing in what he termed "the great America that once was." He said that he no longer was able to believe in reviving the economy and was tired of hearing rhetoric about making America competitive again while his and his neighbors' world crumbles around them.

I believe that a significant source of the frustration and unease is fear among many people that they can no longer depend on the security considerations which many Americans have counted on for so long. There is fear their jobs and paychecks may disappear; they may lose their homes; they may not be able to educate their children. In a way, these people sense that what we have always called the American dream has collided with reality – and emerged the loser.

An unemployed worker in Fairhaven explained how his benefits had been cut off because he got some temporary work for a few weeks. Now he is forced to reject short-term work in order to qualify for benefits that keep food on his family's table. I couldn't help but be struck by the hypocrisy of a system that, on one hand, punishes a man just because he wanted to get up in the morning to go to work, and on the other hand, allows the president to promise the same man an extension of benefits even though there was never any intention to fund them.

I visited merchants and shop owners in New Bedford and Taunton striving to make it to the end of each month with no reasonable hope of increasing their sales. They are struggling just to survive on the income they are able to produce, with nothing left for growth or improvement, or savings for the future, for their children's education, or for retirement.

Business owners, bankers and entrepreneurs in Worcester and Fitchburg shared the belief that further business growth and job creation is impossible – and even business survival is a challenge – given the terrible condition of the banking system in New England and the resulting scarcity of capital to finance growth and expansion.

A concerned teacher in Dorchester told me that her school has no librarian and that she has only eight textbooks for a class of 23. Sadly, her story is only one of many about the struggles of an educational system badly in need of basic resources and financial support, but which is being subjected instead to additional spending reductions. Providing a basic education to all citizens is a baseline requirement for a competitive workforce, improved race relations, increased consumer confidence, and heightened self-worth. Efforts to create jobs in our economy will be futile if our workforce cannot even read or complete a job application.

In Springfield I heard labor leaders discussing the cost of providing health insurance to workers and their families. Our nation pays more for health care, in both absolute terms and on a per capita basis, than any other nation – nearly 14 percent of our GNP. Yet millions of our citizens do not receive and cannot afford even very basic care.

A mother of four in Plymouth explained how she felt she had fallen through the cracks when she asked for help in these tough times. She and her husband worked hard for many years to raise a family; they voted, paid taxes, and participated as citizens in the affairs of their community. Now that she needs health care in her later years, no one is there for her. She, like so many others that have written to me or called my office, is frustrated and feels helpless.

I have no doubt that all of us as elected officials will soon be offering our solutions to the real and painful hardships felt throughout this state and country. Before the technocratic policy tinkerers begin to weigh the benefits of capital gains tax reduction versus an investment tax credit, however, and before the Congress blames the President and he returns the volley, my hope is that all who hold elected office will at least take a moment to listen.

We must listen and hear from a citizenry who, although faced with a day-to-day struggle to make ends meet, is still filled with an indomitable spirit and energy. The most important piece of public policy that all of us who hold public office can craft is one that will re-connect us with that spirit and energy.

John McNabb is candidate

John K. McNabb, Jr., 35, recently announced his candidacy for a three-year term on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen at the April 11 Town Election.

"We need a change in Cohasset town government," said McNabb. "We need new ideas and new direction on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen."

"I have the experience, ability and desire to allow our Cohasset town government to be more open, accountable and effective," said McNabb.

"Town finances are the major issue," said McNabb. "However, the first question we must ask ourselves is what level of services, particularly for public safety, education and the Senior Center, do we need?"

"Legal costs need to be better controlled," said McNabb. "I have proposed a Warrant Article for Town Meeting to require better accountability for legal costs and annual reporting of the status of pending cases."

"We must protect our water supply from potential contamination from the Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL)," said McNabb. "We must ensure that CHL provides sufficient financial security so the town will not have to pay for the $1 million a year cost of removing contaminated leachate from the landfill after it closes."

McNabb was an unsuccessful candidate for Board of Health in 1990, where he came in second in a three-man race, and was an unsuccessful candidate for Selectman in 1986, where he came in third in a six-person race. In 1984 he won election to the Board of Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

McNabb is Vice-President of S.A.F.E. (Stop Any Further Expansion), which has been working to protect the town from the proposed 27.5 acre expansion of the landfill.

McNabb is the founder and President of McNabb Associates, an environmental and government affairs consulting firm. He also is Vice-President for

No final vote yet on the MWRA outfall

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Former state senator William Golden wasn't cordially welcomed at the South Shore Coalition meeting last Thursday at Norwell town hall — but he got what he wanted anyway.

The coalition put off taking a vote to back the nine-and-a-half mile outfall pipe until after a forum can be held with both sides represented. The date of the meeting has yet to be established, according to Jean Christensen, staff member of the coalition.

Last month the representatives of coalition towns voted unanimously to bring the outfall resolution back to their communities, looking for a reaffirmation of a vote taken several years ago.

Some of the communities were ready to vote Feb. 13. Others — like Hull —were not so supportive of the resolution.

Golden, who represents a Cape Cod group called STOP which is working to halt the outfall pipe, was not present last month when the initial vote was taken.

As he rose to make his presentation, Selectman Martha Gjesteby of Cohasset, chairman of the South Shore Coalition, told Golden he would be limited to five minutes.

"We've already had a great deal of discussion," Gjesteby said. She pointed out that no one from the MWRA was there to represent the case for the outfall.

Several representatives of coalition towns indicated they wanted to hear what Golden had to say before the vote.

Golden, who said he couldn't make his point in five minutes, asked the matter be tabled until a forum could be held. He talked about problems with the scientific data used by the MWRA in developing its plan.

One of the basic problems was that a computer model was used to demonstrate current flows that used flawed information. He said the MWRA knew the model was flawed but still used the data last month when charts on pollution probability were handed out to the coalition members.

The model developed by MIT originally had a disclaimer attached saying it would only be accurate during certain seasons and only be accurate for the "northwest quarter of Massachusetts Bay," Golden said.

He said what his group hopes to achieve is to change the order of projects rather than to slow the Boston Harbor clean-up. He said they want to see the sewage treatment upgraded from primary to secondary before any material is pumped through a new outfall pipe into Massachusetts Bay.

He pointed out that the MWRA recently sought to abandon the plan for secondary treatment. The court has rejected the matter.

Under the current plan, the sewage with primary treatment would be sent through the nine-and-a-half mile outfall for about two years before the secondary treatment machinery was in place.

He is also asking to have the Nut Island Sewage Treatment Plant closed a year earlier than scheduled.

In the meantime, he wants more study done on the possible effect of the outfall.

Golden said the harbor is getting cleaner each year and will continue to become cleaner.

"What we are worried about is the potential of nitrification in Massachusetts Bay," Golden said. There will be 300 percent more nitrogen pumped into Massachusetts Bay when the outfall goes into operation.

Two views on the effect of the nitrogen were given to the coalition representatives. The views differ sharply on whether the nitrogen in the sewage would have a significant impact on Massachusetts Bay.

Golden pointed out that algae bloom can be caused by fresh water mixing with the ocean waters.

The coalition's next scheduled meeting is Thursday, March 19, at 7:30 p.m. at Norwell town hall.

Bob . . .

Forgot to serve the fruit salad.

When I first met State Senator Bob Hedlund he was the enemy.

We met on the many bridges of Weymouth to defend the primary candidates' philosophy. Every morning for weeks and weeks before the 1990 primary, the Christy Mihos people led by Mihos campaign manager Lil Curley (nee Murray) confronted Bob Ambler's union men in their somber black suits, Don Hussey, and Hedlund's "bright young things" wearing awfully high heels and very short skirts.

So tell me, Bob, how much did you know about Hull, before you became its State Senator?

I probably knew more about Hull than any town in the district. I lived in Hull for probably aggregate total of three years. I moved there after I graduated from Hingham schools, and while I was commuting to Quincy College.

What are you hearing about challengers for your office? Over the last couple of months we've heard about Chartis Langmaid (of Cohasset) on the Democratic Side. Then who?

Well, also on the Democratic side, Brian McDonough. Christy Mihos is the only Republican name I've heard, but I can't read his mind. I've heard it off and on. I heard he approached Charlie Manning, a political consultant, then I heard his father suggested he mind the store right now because of the big take-over which is going on regarding the 7-11s.

Charlie Manning's an interesting guy. The Boston Herald is the only newspaper in the state which has a Sunday professional wrestling column and Charlie Manning is the columnist.

Two years ago, you had a real organization, a real volunteer organization. And I know it took you some time to build it.

We had some good numbers. But we had a lot of Indians and not enough chiefs.

How long have you been involved in politics?

I never did anything outside of the Republican party. I guess I followed the Vietnam War, always had an interest in history, current events, politics. I was an average student in high school and college, but in history, current events and politics I excelled. At one point I wanted to be a high school social studies teacher. And then I worked in campaigns since I was 15. The first campaign I worked in was Avi Nelson's campaign.

The only problem I have with Avi Nelson is that he's big on the guy thing – tends to side with the guys.

This is the best meal I've had in a while, I must say.

Do you live alone? During the last two years, have you become engaged, have you married anybody?

In December 1987 I came very close, and she's still in the area. The other time I came close, I went with a girl who always talked about marriage. And then by the time I came around, we parted ways. Then I got back together with her; after I won the election she lost her job, met a guy at the unemployment office and left me for him. He had better connections. Let's say it was a confused period of her life.

Do you live with your mother?

No. I moved out at 18.

I always figured you lived at home, and your mother was probably supportive, and she still did all your laundry.

No, I've been doing my laundry for a long time, now. Currently, no roommates. My cat went off to live with my X-girlfriend. He (Buster) likes it over there better.

What do you do for your body?

My schedule worked out well last summer. I was able to make a lot of my softball games. I play on three leagues. Sunday mornings it's the Building 19 team. We play other towns – one team's home field is in Beechwood, Cohasset – then Marshfield, Weymouth, Scituate.

Then I play for a Hingham Men's Night League – called Hingham Pizza...prior to this year we won the championship three consecutive years. Prior to that I sponsored my own team, Hingham Motors. Mostly I play outfield, sneak in a little first base. I was always good enough to make the town (Hedlund lives in Weymouth) team, but never good enough to make the starting line-up.

Where are you now, politically? At one point The Boston Globe declared you a loose cannon.

Since the time I voted against the Governor with respect to his cabinet secretaries, I've actually voted with the Governor more than any other Republican State Senator on Veto Messages.

How do you feel about Weld on the abortion issue?

State Senator Robert Hedlund representing the Norfolk and Plymouth Senatorial towns of Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth. (Photo by Chris Bartow)

It's like on the cabinet secretaries issue. He knew where I was coming from. I think he respected my position. I know where he's coming from, and there are portions where I would strongly disagree. I don't think we ought to be lowering the age of consent to 16 years old.

For me it's the worst issue to deal with. Because...there's nothing worse than getting hammered by both sides on an issue.

When you have a guy in his 20s, 30s, calling (Talkmaster) Jerry Williams and saying he doesn't want his girlfriend to abort 'his' baby, I go crazy. There's not even a legal relationship but the guy wants his seed to be born.

It's not a comfortable issue for me to deal with, that's for sure.

What are your re-election plans?

One thing that gives me an advantage is that we've developed a reputation in our office of being responsible to constituent issues. Secondly, I have kept an incredible hectic schedule. Any civic group that's asked me to speak, I've done that. I've held regular office hours in every town in the district. Also, I've had a 100-percent rollcall attendance record. I think the perception is out there that I'm hardworking and earnest. On the political side, we should be ok with fundraising. I'm the only freshman senator who does not accept lobbiest or special interest money. But despite that, we still manage to raise money which will allow us to be competitive.

Are you a member of a church?

I really didn't have a religious upbringing. My grandparents were Lutherans. I attended Sunday school at their church. Later on, my mother put me in the youth confirmation class at Hingham Congregational. Lately I've been attending the First Baptist Church in Weymouth. I like the message over there. It's a good church.

Let me tell you about a bill I filed this year that I'm really excited about, because I got some "hopefully" good news about it. One of the things I railed about during my campaign was career politicians.

It shouldn't be a professional situation up there, and there shouldn't be a full-time legislature. And I disagree with term limits, by the way. What I think we need to do is take the incentive away from these guys who want to serve forever. George Keverian got out with a $56,000 a year pension, which I think is outrageous. What kind of public service is that? Here's a guy on a pension making more money than the average citizen in Massachusetts.

So I filed a bill which would eliminate all "elected" pensions, and pensions for constitutional officers, after 1994. Now, you say, well that sounds great, Bob, but you know and I know there's no chance that your colleagues are going to vote against pensions for their own profession. And they are not going to vote for it.

So why are you so excited?

Well, groups like Common Cause like it. But I recently had discussions about it with some people over at Citizens for Limited Taxation (CLT). And they like the idea. I'm going to try to convince them to consider taking it on as an initiative petition. I guarantee you, if we got that question on the ballot it would pass. And I bet you'd see a lot less of those guys stick around.

There's still the motive of power.

Not really. Once you get over a certain level, they're all looking at pensions. Recently, Speaker Flaherty was going to appoint a man from the North Shore to a leadership post, and he's retiring. This was just going to boost up his pension numbers.

We do that in the towns, too. School committees and boards of selectmen set retiring department heads up.

There is a distinction. Washington and Adams didn't make great sacrifices in their lives to enhance their economic situations, and then call it public service.

The net is that you should sacrifice to serve.

Children's librarian Suzanne Terry works with the youngsters at a preschool story hour at the Paul Pratt Library. around town

• Last weekend marked the end of the youth basketball season, and we think it's high time that George Ellinger got his standing ovation! George has been the backbone of youth basketball for the past 12 years, he is the one behind the scenes that opens the gym at 7 a.m. and takes care of every single detail after that. As the parents drop the kiddos off, or watch, George is the one to thank for their fun and learning of basketball skills. Be sure that you give him a great big thank you the next time you see him...or a valentine.

• We congratulate Katherine and Anthony Bonanno on the birth of their baby girl who was born Jan. 21 at South Shore Hospital. With the Olympics going on, one wonders if she will be the one to win the gold 15 or 16 years from now.

• Lots of you know Gussy Mello of Cohasset fame. He was honored recently by the "then" Ambassador of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, President M. Gorbachev. The letter he received said, "On behalf of President M. Gorbachev I am honored and pleased to inform you that you have been awarded the Commemorative Medal, The 40th Anniversary of the Victory in the Great Patriotic War (WW II). This award is a token of recognition of your outstanding courage and personal contribution to the allied support of the people of the Soviet Union who fought for freedom against Nazi Germany. Please, accept our heartfelt congratulations and wishes of good health, well-being and every success." Enclosed was a copy of the commemorative medal and a certificate, and it was signed by Viktor G. Kompletov. That could well have been one of the last medals awarded by Gorbachev, and certainly makes it doubly special. We all are extremely proud of you, Augustine.

• Oh boy, are Leslie and John Hines happy, ever since Jan. 14. That's when their son, Christian Tabor Hines, was born, and they sure love their new addition. If you think that they are pleased, what about the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L.G. McAdams and Dorsey and Paul Robey, all of Cohasset. Oh my, isn't it nice to hear such wonderful news?

• We have two local students to congratulate this week, Jonathan Mitchell, class of 1995 at Guilford College, and Mark Batts, class of 1995 at Saint Anselm College, both of whom have earned scholarships given by the Francis Ouimet Caddie Scholarship Fund. The Ouimet Scholarship Award is made to deserving students who have worked three summers as a caddie or as a helper in the pro shop or course superintendent operations at a Massachusetts golf club. The fund is an old one, founded in 1949 in honor of legendary golfer Francis Ouimet, and since that time has awarded over $5.7 million to 2700 individuals. The fund is considered by many clubs to be the "golf charity of Massachusetts" and is supported by Massachusetts clubs, corporations and individuals. For the academic year 1991-92, The Ouimet Fund is awarding approximately $320,000 to 200 students who have provided "service to golf" at 78 clubs. Those students are attending 83 colleges and universities.

• We certainly hope that Nancy O'Toole is feeling much better after her recent fall. She is at Mass. General Hospital and would undoubtedly like a Valentine from all of us. As everyone knows, she is Mary Jeanette Murray's right-hand gal. She sends words of all sorts to everyone, so send some to Nancy. How about a valentine?

• Congratulations go to Gregory S. Ferreira, who achieved academic honor of making the fall 1991 dean's list at Salem State College. We know you worked hard to make it, Greg, and everyone is pleased with you and your efforts.

• We also recognize Andrew Nawn, who was named to the dean's list at Franklin Pierce College in Rindge, New Hampshire. Andrew is a senior and majors in History, and is the son of Joanne Young-Nawn of Cohasset.

• Another news flash, Sara Bishop of Cohasset has been named to the Plymouth State College Dean's List for maintaining a grade point average of between 3.5 and 3.69 during the fall semester of the 1991-92 academic year.

• Finally, we applaud Amanda Church, a junior at UMass/Boston and a member of the women's basketball team. Amanda is a junior forward. Amanda has surely made a name for herself at UMass/Boston and was equally impressive at CHS. She earned two varsity letters in basketball and was an All-Star selection in addition to earning four varsity letters in tennis at Cohasset. Alright, Amanda.

• That's the news from here for this week. Don't forget to call me with your newsworthy event...so I can say things like "Happy Birthday, Stacy," which will mean a lot to our friend Stacy Anderson, who we know and love.

State won't promote growth on the South Shore

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC) is moving ahead with plans for a state growth plan that would allocated scarce highway and sewer dollars to potential growth areas in Boston and the western and northern suburbs.

Already plans for growth areas in Braintree and Quincy have been rejected or put on hold by the MAPC committee reviewing potential growth areas.

The South Shore Plaza area in Braintree "does not meet criteria," according to Keith Ratner, chairman of the concentrated development centers committee and a planner from Beverly.

Phil Plageman, Hanover town planner, said he thinks there is at least one area in Hanover that should be considered.

Greg Guimond of Marshfield said he thinks Marshfield Center should be considered as a municipal center, one of the various designations possible.

Several parts of Quincy are under consideration but pieces of information needed are missing from the documentation. Ratner said it may be that there is no affirmative action plan or something of the kind.

Among the areas in Quincy that were proposed — and now are left on hold — are Crown Colony Place, Quincy Center, the State Street Complex, Marina Bay and Yankee Heights.

Two other proposals involving spots in Braintree have not yet been reviewed, Ratner told members of the South Shore Coalition meeting in Norwell Feb. 13. Those areas are: Commerce Park and TriCon Park.

"If a proposed CDC (concentrated development center) does not meet the criteria, it is not automatically rejected," Ratner said. "Instead the committee will indicate changes that must be made in order for the proposed CDC to comply."

By the end of January, 45 areas were proposed for study as growth areas. David Soule, executive director of the MAPC, said there is a possibility that applications for consideration as growth areas will close in May.

He said it is important communities interested in the designation get involve soon.

While many of the growth areas are located in the urban areas of Boston, there are several North Shore areas that have already won the committee's stamp of approval. They include areas in Salem, Gloucester, Beverly, Waltham and Malden.

Martha Gjesteby, chairman of the South Shore Coalition, asked whether part of the plan would be to include money set aside for infrastructure improvements in areas outside the growth centers.

Soule said that decision has not yet been made.

There are actually 11 possible designations under the Metroplan 2000 proposal. They include: Urban Area — Urban Economic Core, Urban Growth Center, Urban Center; Multi-Service Area — Municipal Growth Center, Municipal Center, Subregional Center; Suburban/Rural Area — Suburban/Rural Centers, and Land Resources Protection Area.

None of the communities south of Braintree have requested the MAPC do a study for possible inclusion in the designations, according to Soule.

He said all that is required is a letter.

1991 Federal Tax guide for seniors

Copies of a special guide to assist senior citizens in preparing 1991 federal tax returns are now available.

The four-page guide, which summarizes important federal tax changes affecting seniors and reviews many complicated filing requirements, was compiled by the House Select Committee on Aging. Rep. Gerry Studds is a member of the Aging Committee and serves on its Human Services Subcommittee.

"I encourage interested seniors to contact my nearest office for a copy of the guide," Studds said.

The tax guide is available free-of-charge through Rep. Studds' offices in Hyannis (508-771-0666), New Bedford (508-999-1251), and Pembroke (617-826-3866) as well as local public libraries and area Councils on Aging.

Speaker for peace

Lloyd Fillion of the National Committee Against Repressive Legislation will speak at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, Feb 23, in the Whiton Room at the Hingham Public Library for the South Shore Peace Forum.

He will speak on unfettered security activity.

So what's the deal about the playing fields?

This is a sports-minded community.

Our children play soccer, football, baseball, tennis, lacrosse and so much more on playing fields supported by tax dollars. They play afternoons, weekends, sometimes into the evening hours on fields that are almost always in use.

So is it any wonder that the playing fields are political footballs.

Not long ago, Peter Laugelle, tree and park superintendent and the man responsible for doing the actual field maintenance, appeared before selectmen to talk about problems he's had with the fields.

He notified the selectmen that he wants to close a field on a rotating basis, to preserve the grass.

The selectmen are responsible for field maintenance, according to town bylaw.

Time passed and the recreation commission asked selectmen to appoint a committee to deal with scheduling field use.

John Worley, recreation director, and Richard Barrow, chairman of the commission, went before selectmen with questions on the ultimate field control authority.

Barrow's contention is that while maintenance is up to selectmen, use and control of the fields falls within the jurisdiction of the recreation commission.

He continued to press for a committee to schedule the fields. Barrow asked at least three times for a ruling from town counsel on the question of "use and control" of the fields, using old bylaws and state statutes to back up his position.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson rendered on the issue involves maintenance.

When Barrow said that wasn't the question, he was asking about control, Henderson said he hadn't researched that issue.

In truth, this issue seems like a sideshow. But it exemplifies a practice of failing to deal with the real issue.

Now maybe that happens because people don't always want to spell out the heart of the matter.

Maybe it happens because people aren't communicating effectively.

Whatever the reason, it's time to stop the nonsense.

If the recreation commission is, indeed, charged with use and control of the fields, then it is up to recreation — not a committee — to get on with the work at hand.

If the problem isn't a question of authority, then the people — who choose to remain behind the scenes and make noises about vague problems at the field — should come forward and explain their position.

All that aside, we don't want to see town counsel answering any more silly questions that no one is asking anyway.

Committee sends thanks

An Open Letter to Cohasset

The Drug and Alcohol Committee would like to extend its sincere appreciation to everyone who made the Drug Free Weekend/Winterfest such a success. To the 17 organizations involved in the planning; to the individuals who worked so hard on each event; to the organizations and individuals who contributed money: our thanks! Just as important, we would like to thank all the people in Cohasset who attended the events and, through their participation, made the weekend both enjoyable and meaningful. Thank you all!

Keith Knowles
and the Drug and Alcohol Committee

Report of the Drug and Alcohol Committee

During 1991 our committee continued to be active in creating awareness of substance use and abuse issues in Cohasset. Starting with sponsorship of a seminar for elder care givers in March, the committee expanded its activities into the general community. Attended by individuals from Cohasset and surrounding towns, the seminar focused on issues of substance use in the senior community, providing care givers additional insights into this problem. In May, the committee had a table at the Social Service League's Health Fair, distributing literature on a range of substance use concerns to the attendees. Following the lead of MADD, the committee worked with the Selectmen to implement "Tag-A-Keg" in Cohasset, a program currently being mandated state-wide. We are very pleased that Cohasset was part of the vanguard of this program. We also took the lead in replicating Belmont's Drug Free Weekend in Cohasset. Now scheduled for the last weekend in January, "Winterfest" has been planned and implemented by representatives from seventeen community organizations. Additionally, our committee opened a dialogue with the schools, having two meetings with administrative personnel. This dialogue will be an important part of a coordinated substance awareness program. Finally, our successful "Safe Homes" program expanded again in 1991, adding approximately 20 percent more families to our list of participants. While the program still has a way to go, we are encouraged by its current success. Members of our committee also met with people in Carver, Plymouth, Norwell and Duxbury to assist them in planning their own "Safe Homes" programs. All in all, 1991 was an active and successful year for the Drug and Alcohol Committee. We are particularly pleased that these activities were all funded through private contributions, a measure of the need for this committee in Cohasset.

Respectfully submitted,

New funds are available through the mortgage program

Rep. Murray recently announced that close to 300 Massachusetts residents are expected to purchase homes, thanks in large part to another $25 million that is now available through the state's Mortgage Credit Certificate (MCC) program. This federally-authorized housing program is aimed at assisting low- and moderate- income residents. It is offered through participating lenders by the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency (MHFA) and the Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD).

The MCC program provides a tax credit to reduce the federal income taxes homebuyers will pay during the life of their mortgages. More specifically, buyers receive credits, against their federal income tax obligation, of 20 percent of the interest paid each year on their home mortgages. Since after-tax income for prospective buyers will be increased by the amount of the tax credit, the credit also can be an essential ingredient in qualifying buyers for conventional mortgages.

"To qualify for MCCs, borrowers must be first-time homebuyers (except when purchasing homes in selected areas); must meet income guidelines (a maximum of $35,700 in the greater Boston area and $33,800 elsewhere in the state); and must buy houses that fall within federally-established home acquisition cost limits.

A buyer must have either an Accepted Offer to Purchase or an executed Purchase and Sale Agreement. The buyer should apply for the MCC through a participating lender and should consult that lender to determine whether the MCC is the best financial vehicle for the buyer.

Federal Law prohibits the use of MCCs with the MHFA's mortgage loan programs. MCCs have been found to work successfully when used in tandem with other first-time homebuyer programs, offered by a number of lenders throughout Massachusetts.

A brochure on the MCC program can be obtained by calling the MHFA's Office of Single Family Programs at 451-2766.

Studds supports employment proposal

Congressman Gerry E. Studds joined the Massachusetts Congressional delegation in introducing legislation to prevent thousands of unemployed workers in the state from unfairly losing their full emergency unemployment benefits.

Congress voted last week to extend emergency unemployment benefits for 13 weeks. Last November, Rep. Studds and other Congressional leaders battled with President George Bush to secure 20 weeks of federal supplemental unemployment benefits. Nearly 85,000 unemployed workers in Massachusetts qualified for the initial extension in November, and 65,000 are expected to qualify for the 13-week extension approved last Tuesday.

Massachusetts calculates unemployment benefits in "benefit years," or 52-week periods in which a worker is entitled to receive unemployment compensation. If a worker reaches the end of his "benefit year" while he is receiving Federal Supplemental Compensation, he must re-file a claim with the state for regular unemployment benefits. The worker would not be eligible to receive federal benefits again until his 30 weeks of state benefits are exhausted.

When the new claim is filed, the state takes into consideration any wage earnings from part-time or temporary employment during the previous year. In Massachusetts, if such earnings exceed $1200, a worker will not be allowed to resume collecting Federal Supplemental Compensation benefits. Instead, the worker will qualify for a new state benefit year and his

Community Christmas offers help to the poor

letters

To the Editor:

Imagine how you would feel if you awoke on Christmas morning and there were no gifts—perhaps not even a tree. We tend to think of this happening to inner city, poor families. Well, it's happening right here in our communities on the South Shore.

Quite by accident in 1989, I learned of two children here in Scituate who wouldn't be having a Christmas because their parents were having some financial difficulties as a result of layoffs. The parents were barely meeting household expenses, making gift buying impossible. That was a most rewarding Christmas for me, buying gifts and clothing for those two kids. They were so excited that Santa had remembered them! It was then that I decided there were probably other children and most likely other people who would like to share in the wonderful experience of helping. A non-profit, tax exempt charitable organization called Scituate Community Christmas was established.

In the first year, 1990, we guessed we might have 10 families needing our help. To our surprise, there were 75! Though it may sound like a large number of families, it was slightly more than one percent of the households in Scituate. The most incredible thing happened—over 1,500 people took part in making the holidays brighter for those families! In our second year, 1991, we helped more than 135 families. The increase was due in part to the No-Name Storm and more layoffs. Approximately 2,500 people participated.

We take great care to preserve the identities of those receiving help. It is imperative to assure confidentiality because these people are very proud. We also try very hard to personalize all aspects of the process by shopping for each of the children individually based on information received about their preferences and clothing sizes. Each gift is wrapped with a gift tag to that child. The rewards are immeasurable!

And now, the reason for my letter. I am writing to encourage an individual or group of people to organize a Community Christmas in your town. Yes, you do have families in your town who need a little help during the holiday season. In fact, we had requests from families in your town this past year. Unfortunately, our bylaws do not permit us to assist anyone outside of Scituate.

If you are interested in organizing a group in your town, I would be happy to help you get started. Our Articles of Organization, Bylaws, and requests for tax-exempt status and other legal requirements are available. All you need do is copy them and insert changes where needed.

I can assure you that people will come forward in your community to make it work! You will find your involvement will make a tremendous impact in your community as well as enormous personal satisfaction.

Please feel free to contact me anytime. I can be reached at 545-2788.

Driftnet bill favored

The House Ways and Means Committee has endorsed legislation aimed at eliminating the use of large-scale driftnets by foreign fishermen.

The bill, introduced by U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Cohasset, would establish mandatory sanctions against countries that allow their fishermen to continue to use driftnets in international waters after Dec. 31, 1992, the date established by the United Nations for the beginning of an international moratorium on large-scale driftnet fishing.

Historically, fishermen from Japan, Taiwan and Korea have used nets up to 40 miles long in the Pacific Ocean to catch salmon, squid and tuna.

Those nets also have snared and slaughtered sea birds, marine mammals and sea turtles as well.

In recent years other countries started using these nets in waters beyond the Pacific which ignited the international plea to ban large driftnet fishing.

Studds introduced the bill last April, and it was approved by the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee last October. Because of the bill's trade sanctions provisions, the bill also was referred to the Ways and Means Committee.

H.R. 2152 establishes mandatory sanctions on imports on fish, fish products and sport fishing equipment for those countries whose fishermen use large driftnets after the international moratorium goes into effect.

Additionally, the bill also immediately closes all U.S. ports to any foreign driftnet fishing vessels.

If those sanction are found by the Secretary of Commerce to be ineffective in terminating the use of driftnets or if a country retaliates against the U.S., the bill would authorize the President to expand the embargo to any product imported into this country from the offending nation.

Employment proposal . . .

new weekly benefit will be calculated using the lower wages from the part-time or temporary employment. Consequently, the benefit that he receives may be far lower—in many cases drastically lower—than the Federal Supplemental Compensation.

The legislation sponsored by Rep. Markey and Sen. Kennedy, the Unemployment Benefits Assurance Act of 1992, would require unemployed workers to file a new state claim, but would allow them to elect to continue receiving Federal Supplemental Compensation benefits. Once a worker's federal benefits were exhausted, he could begin collecting his second state claim.

Art For Kids

Kids from all over Massachusetts entered their artwork. The panel of judges included members of the Boston art community; some were gallery owners and artists. There were 50 winners in all. The judges based their decision on which pieces of art best conveyed an emotion and showed creativity. An awards ceremony was held December 10 at the Wang Center. The winners received certificates from both the Wang Center and Boston mayor Ray Flynn along with art supplies. Their work was on display for a month and was seen by everyone who went to see the Nutcracker. The exhibit then was flown to Amsterdam, Holland, as part of an International Exchange Program.

Daffodil Days slated for March 24 and 25

Volunteers in nine South Shore communities are working toward a March 10 deadline for taking advance orders for the colorful American Cancer Society Daffodil Days event of March 24 to 25.

With the aim of continuing the record-breaking performance of recent years, Pauline and Dennis Sweeney of Quincy, co-chairs of the annual effort, report that orders have already been coming in from businesses, professional offices and individuals with every indication that 1992 Daffodil Days will be bigger and brighter than ever.

Advance orders for a minimum of three 10-bloom bouquets at $4 each, may be placed by calling 773-8226, or the Cancer Society office 341-4210. Boxes of 50 bouquets are $200. Available this year is an attractive vase for $6, making a combination of vase and bouquet for $10.

The flowers, by the hundreds of thousands, are grown on the West Coast and flown in the night before in bud form. They are picked up at a central location by volunteers who deliver them to purchasers in the nine communities. Overnight in water they burst forth into the characteristic golden daffodils.

Three-day weekends can transform one's home into a giant refrigerator when everyone is on holiday. Life then becomes a challenge whereby the lady of the house has to shovel food into the fridge as fast as she can, for appetites grow after an hour of skating or a walk along the beach. By planning ahead, however, nourishing, easy meals can be served and one way for a dessert treat is that of Sara Nolan's.

ICE CREAM TREATS

When serving ice cream to a crowd, dress it up by setting the table with cold dessert dishes and serving spoons. Fill separate bowls with chopped-up candies, nuts, crushed Oreos, brownies and fruit. Bowls of whipped cream, chocolate or butterscotch sauces and toasted flaked coconut can also add to the fun. Let people choose their favorites—nothing could be easier, or tastier.

For those who venture out daily to meet the demands of the business world, top priority on a holiday weekend can be as simple as a few hours spent reading. Leafing through a garden catalogue lifts one's spirits at this time of year, leading to visions of scratching in the dirt and planting in the backyard garden under the warm sun's rays. This recipe of Anna Abbruzzese's is one I've made many times, so be sure to add leeks to your seed order. Leeks are one of the first vegetables that early man cultivated. They belong to the onion family, but are sweet and mild, pleasing to those who do not like onions.

POTATO AND LEEK SOUP

1 lb. leeks
1/2 cup chopped onions
1/4 cup butter
3 medium potatoes
1/2 tsp. salt, dash white pepper
2 cans (13-1/2 oz. ea.) chicken broth
2 cups milk
1 cup light cream
Chives

Trim leeks and brown in butter with onion. Add potato, salt, pepper and broth. Cook covered for 45 min., or until potato is almost mushy. Put soup into blender 2 cups at a time and puree. Heat milk and add to soup mixture. Mix with wire whisk. Serve hot or cold. Serves eight.

Many a February weekend is brightened by a trip to ski country and after a day on the slopes, a few sips of this punch might warm the cockles of your heart. Sent to us by my brother in Connecticut, Jack writes: "This recipe dates to the early 70s when we took it to the New Hampshire mountains one weekend—what a party that was. Thought you might want it as a consumer-tested item for the column, (or, for paint removal, etc.)

SWEDISH GLOGG

2-1/2 cups raisins
Whole cardamom
2 tsp. whole cloves
2 cinnamon sticks
Peel of 1 orange
2-1/2 cups sugar
1 gallon dry red table wine
Whole, unblanched almonds

1. Rinse and drain raisins. Peel cardamom pods; extract black seeds and pound seeds to a powder to measure one tablespoon. Combine spices, raisins, orange peel, sugar and eight cups water.

2. Bring to boiling. Reduce heat; simmer for 15 min.

3. Strain (save raisins); add liquid to wine in a kettle large enough to accommodate liquid and wine.

4. When ready to serve, heat to simmering. Place 2 or 3 almonds and a few reserved raisins in each punch cup and pour the hot, spicy brew over them.

Makes 48 1/2 cup servings.

Note: Just a reminder that your recipes, ideas and suggestions make the column what it is. Do send them to me c/o Box 25, Marshfield Hills, 02051. Joan.

200 medley relay team breaks record

At the end of event 4 at the Pilgrim Conference Championships Cohasset was second, trailing only conference leader Duxbury High School.

It was a moment for the team to savor.

Then, the results of the diving portion of the meet were announced. Points for diving were awarded and Cohasset, which has no diving team slipped to fifth place. The team was unable to make up the difference and finished in fifth place.

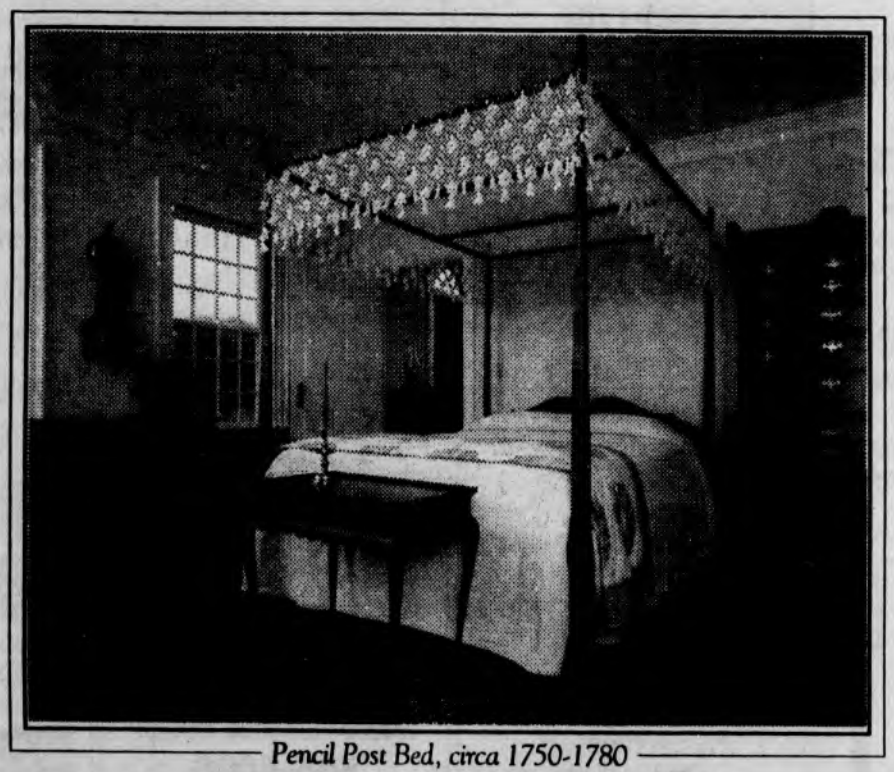
Duxbury was first with 306.5 points; Sandwich, second with 265; and Taunton, sixth with 88 points. Middleborough finished third with 211 points. North Quincy was fourth with 202 points and Cohasset ended fifth with 190 points. One or two close finishes were the difference between third and fifth.

The 200-medley relay team broke its 1991 Pilgrim Conference Championship record of 1:55.84 with a time of 1:52.72, setting a new championship record. Sophomore Dave Leahy also broke his own 1991 record time of 1:11.58 with a new Pilgrim Conference Championship record time of 1:07.27. The 200-medley relay team consists of Leahy swimming breaststroke, senior Chip Anderson swimming backstroke, senior John Brister swimming freestyle and senior team captain Topher Henderson swimming butterfly.

At the conclusion of the meet, swimmers from all six schools were selected for the Pilgrim Conference All-Star team. Cohasset swimmers Topher Henderson, Dave Leahy and sophomore Tim Brister who turned in an amazing third-place finish in the 50-yd. freestyle. Brister's time of 24:99 also qualified him for the South Sectional Championships on Friday and Saturday, Feb. 21 and 22. Five Cohasset swimmers qualified for the Sectionals: Brister, Dave Leahy, Topher Henderson, Chip Anderson and Nick Hawks.

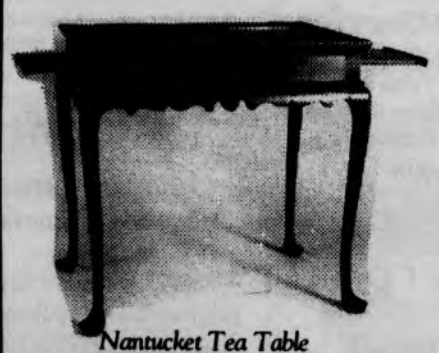
There were few representatives of the Class of 1996 and 1997 at the Championships. Those who were there were all from Cohasset, and they deserve special congratulations. They swam, as they did all season, against sophomores, juniors and seniors from schools with excellent swimming facilities and practice sessions throughout the week. They showed determination and a willingness to swim anywhere they were needed.

Congratulations to J.L. Williams and Bob Meehan. Doug Cameron was twelfth in the 100 breaststroke and 14th in the 500-yd. freestyle.



Finally, there is the strong 8th, 9th and 10th grade representation on the team. Tom Greco, who had been a strong and dependable contender for the team all season, was prevented from practicing all week by a bout with the flu. However, he twice came within one place of scoring for the team in the championships. Nick Hawks was sixth in the league in the 200-yd. freestyle and forth in the 500-yd. freestyle. James Kondrat was 8th in the 100 backstroke and 10th in the 100 fly.

Tim Brister was 3rd in the 90 free and 6th in the 100 free. With all these great young swimmers back next year, hopefully helped by the addition of some strong girl swimmers, Cohasset's future in high school swimming looks bright.



Come Join The Revolution.

Fire budget rises 6.5% — without pay hikes

Selectmen gave the new fire chief part of what he said he needed in the budget for the coming year:

- part time clerical help
- a computer of his own
- training money for both call firefighters and the career employees
- a shot at a new $90,000 ambulance with a diesel engine and air brakes
- as much overtime as is being used this year

Chief John Nadeau has been on the job a month. He had no objections to the $1,115,631.26 budget that the selectmen backed Monday night. His next hurdle lies with the advisory board.

The budget considered by selectmen has no pay hikes for the union firefighters who have been working without a contract for several years. Even without a pay increase, this budget would be part of an override package. To put it in some perspective, the school budget increase adopted by the school committee involves a 1.1 percent above the present level and school officials are talking about the need for an override to fund the increase.

The fire budget for the current fiscal year is $1,047,312.75. Chief Nadeau requested $1.2 million when he met with selectmen Monday. The request was down from his initial budget plan.

Part of the budget increase may turn out to be painless for the town if the chief is right about the amount of old hose he has on hand to sell. Part of the deal he offered selectmen was to fund some small capital items through the sale of surplus equipment — namely, old hose.

For about $15,000, which the chief hopes to make from the old hose sale or auction, he would upgrade the pager system, relocate the antenna, replace an unusable 40-foot ladder, purchase 15 pairs of medical anti-shock trousers, buy a personal computer for his own use, upgrade the present computer which was new last year and add a booster pump for the breathing apparatus.

Discussion of the fire budget took about two hours — just about twice as long as the time allotted on the agenda.

The chief argued forcefully for his own computer, saying it would be putting shackles on him otherwise.

He told the board it is difficult to work in the open area where the present computer sits.

After lengthy debate, Selectman Jane Goedecke moved that all but the computer upgrade and the booster pump — the last two items on that particular list — be authorized whether or not the old equipment sale works.

The vote was three to two in favor of the $9,060 with Martha Gjesteby and Rocco Laugelle opposed. Laugelle had his own priority list which didn't include the Police move privately into the '90s with semi-automatics

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

With the backing of private benefactors who care enough to put up their money the town's 17-person police force will gain new semi-automatics in the spring.

So far more than $12,000 has been raised from 76 local contributors and the 18 needed semi-automatic weapons are on order. It's expected that order will arrive in March. Then training will begin for the police force.

The drive for private funding for the guns came on the action of the Cohasset Police Association (which is not the union) after the town decided two years in a row to hold off on the purchase.

Police Chief Joseph Kealey has the money in his 1993 budget plan and has received the backing of the selectmen.

Sgt. Brian Noonan, who is one of the five members of the gun committee, said donations are still being accepted. The money in hand will pay for the guns and holsters. Extra ammunition is needed for training sessions and so about $2,000 more may be required for the police to become proficient with the new weapons.

New teen center opens Saturday

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The Teen Depot opens Saturday, Feb. 29, at 2 p.m. at 9 Deport Court. But there won't be ceremonies and fanfare, according to Beth Christoffel, one of the adult organizers of the drop-in center.

The center will be open Fridays from 6 to 11 p.m., Saturdays from 2 to 11 p.m. and Sundays from 2 to 5 p.m.

"The opening will be slow. We don't exactly know where it's going. The center is still evolving," Christoffel said.

In a few weeks there will be an open house, of sorts, for parents to get a glimpse into the teen-run operation.

The rules and regulations for Teen Depot were developed by the teen governing board.

The rules are fairly simple:

- no drugs, alcohol or other controlled substances in the center or adjacent areas.

The Friends of Courtney Allen consider plans

By Joan Stack Kovach
For the PSO

Last October, news of the tragic death of Courtney Allen shook the Cohasset community. Courtney had been a student at Osgood School, through the METCO program for first, second and third-graders and was a member of the Cohasset Class of 2000. When his family moved to Milton last summer, Courtney left Cohasset schools and began fourth grade in his new community. In October, his future was cut short by a tragic accident. He was struck by a car while riding his bike home from a local park. Children and families in Milton, in his old Boston neighborhood, and of course in Cohasset were stunned and saddened by Courtney's death. They struggled for a way to make sense out of this loss, and for a way to comfort and support his grieving family. Courtney was a lively smiling boy who brought joy with him wherever he went. Over the winter, Cohasset community members who knew Courtney and had the pleasure of sharing in his joy, have been thinking and talking and meeting, trying to find a way to express their sorrow and to remember Courtney.

Recently this group learned of a plan designed by the Cohasset Garden Club to develop an outdoor classroom space at the Osgood School. The "outdoor classroom" was first proposed by former Osgood Principal Jack Creamer along with some faculty members. About four years ago six picnic tables were purchased and installed in the side yard at Osgood. Since then, classes have used the space for springtime lunches, outdoor lessons and even just a change of scenery when the weather is nice and the school year seems interminable. The Garden Club, at the request of Mr. Creamer, designed a plan for framing the "outdoor classroom" with plantings and fencing to give it an improved and inviting appearance. The plan has not yet been implemented.

Hi tech comes to town

Thursday, March 5, the Cohasset PSO will sponsor the first annual "Technology Fair" at the Cohasset High School at 7:30 p.m.

The Osgood School, Deer Hill School and High School will all be participating in the fair. Each school will provide their own video illustrating what is currently being done in their school and what they hope to do in the future. There will also be hands-on exhibits demonstrated by the students. Six exhibits stationed around the cafeteria will be as follows: Computer Output, including video projection, overhead projection and color printing; Informational Sources, including sorting and retrieval; Satellite Telecommunications; Cable in the Classroom; Computer Music Composition; and Computer Networking.

The sewer treatment plant lies hidden behind the Bates Building on the James River, that leads into Cohasset Harbor. There are plans to expand the present plant. If allowed more homes and businesses could be connected to the sewer line. (PLD photo)

Rotary race plans

Plans are well underway for the Sixteenth Annual Cohasset Roadrace by the Sea. The event will begin at 1 p.m. Sunday, April 5, at the Cohasset Common. This annual ritual of spring is again sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club and is under the direction of Roy Fitzsimmons and Peter Logan. The number of entrants is limited to the first 800, so runners are encouraged to register early. Applications are available at Good Sport, Curtis Liquors or by sending a SASE to P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025. The $10 entree fee includes shirts with the race logo and local sponsors as well as free refreshments and prizes.

This year there will also be a 10k Walk which will start at Sandy Beach and cover the same route as the race and will begin at 10 a.m. sharp. Participants will receive a shirt and refreshments for the $10 fee. All proceeds from the race and walk benefit the many in town charities the Rotary Club contributes to. In 1991, the Club's 50th year in town, it donated between scholarships and donations over $30,000.

The deadline for pre-registration is March 31. The event attracts runners from throughout New England and was recently rated most scenic by the N.E. Runner magazine.

Few contests set but

Election field offers some breadth

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The field of the selectmen's race widened last week as Michael Sullivan, health board member, took out papers for the contest.

This brings to four the number of candidates for the two three year seats on the board. Selectman Diana Kornet is running for re-election. Selectman Chairman Ned Tebbetts is out of the race. He said his health was a concern.

John McNabb Jr., who has been extremely active in the campaign to stop expansion at Cohasset Heights, is officially in the race for selectman.

So is Merle Brown, the chairman of the town's conservation commission.

Anyone who wants to run in the annual election has only a matter of hours to organize. Nomination papers must be obtained from the town clerk's office before it closes at 8 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 27. The papers must be returned with the signatures of 50 registered voters by 5 p.m Friday, Feb. 28. (Despite the fact that the town hall closes at 1 p.m. every Friday.)

This year the election will be Saturday, April 11, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Residents must register by March 20 to vote in the town election and for the annual town meeting (scheduled for Saturday, April 4). There will be a special registration from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Tuesday, March 3, and another Saturday, March 14 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at town hall.

The race for school committee involves two three-year terms. Ralph Kidder is running for re-election. Owen O'Malley of Sohier Street, a teacher in the Boston school system, has taken out nomination papers. Kenneth Wilcox of Beechwood Street has also take out papers. Susan McNamara, a leader in the PSO, has taken out papers but there are reports she may not file as a candidate.

Incumbent school committee member Chris Ford is not running for re-election.

It appears there's a race for the open three-year term on the board of health. Incumbent Sharon Becker is not seeking re-election. Robert Davenport of Sohier Street and Thomas Cook of 281 King Street have taken out nomination papers for board of health.

The rest of the ballot appears to offer no contest.

Marion Douglas, acting town clerk, is currently the only candidate for the one-year unexpired term for that office. Town Clerk Frances Marks retired at the end of 1991.

Ross Rosano of North Main Street has taken out papers for the three-year term as assessor. Incumbent Thomas Duggan has indicated he would not run.

Two incumbents and a former member are running for the three three-year terms on the trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. They include: Barbara Power, Lucia Woods and former member Katharine Sturtevant. Melvin Waldfogel is not seeking re-election.

There are three candidates — including two incumbents — for the three five-year seats on the recreation commission. The candidates are: Mary Muncey, Terese England Duggan and highway superintendent Peter Laugelle.

Also without opposition are Ron Goodwin, water commissioner (a three-year term); planning board member Alfred Moore (a five-year term); Henry Rattenbury, sewer commissioner (a three-year term) and Ralph Perroncello, housing authority (a five-year term).

After receiving nearly 400 entries, three Boston-area judges selected 65 black and white, color and special effects photographs for the South Shore Art Center's 1992 Juried Photography Exhibit. The show, sponsored by the Polaroid Corporation, remains at the Art Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset through March 28.

Charlotte W. Mann of Littleton won Polaroid's Best of Show award for her black and white photo entitled "Dancers-Studio 88." Mann also took first place in the black and white category while Michelle J. Keyo of Manchester, formerly of Hingham, and Priscilla Harmel of Newton placed second and third respectively.

Ronald Wilson of E. Bridgewater won first place for color with "Great Island Dawn." Jean Abbott of Scituate placed second and Kathy Ilowiecki Chabot of Andover won third in the color category.

Only one special effects award was given; first place to Darlene D. DeVita of Somerville for "Spanish Mansions." Honorable mentions in black and white were awarded to Leslie Kilduff of Greenbush, J. Paul MacDonald of Plymouth, and Andree Desiree Wilson of Newton. Jean Abbott also won an honorable mention in the color category as did Becky Haletky of Rockland, F. W. Dolloff and Christine Hotarek of Scituate, Mary L. Lussier of Cohasset, Maureen Flemming of Dedham, Margaret Moran of Brighton and Margaret Kauffmann and Fausto Blasco of Somerville.

The exhibition features photographers from Boston, Southboro, Andover, Needham, Medford, Shrewsbury, Wayland, Roxbury, Gloucester, Townsend, Eastham, Waban, Newton, and E. Bridgewater as well as various South Shore towns. Polaroid is underwriting the continuation of this juried exhibit, after its Art Center run, at the New Bedford Libraries, April 6 through May 7.

The South Shore Art Center's gallery hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information, call (617) 383-9548.

Tim White announces campaign for state senate

Tim White of Hingham has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for State Senate from the Norfolk and Plymouth District.

In announcing his decision to run, White said, "Like the people of New Hampshire who sent a message to Washington, it's time for the voters of the South Shore to send a message to the State House. The people of Massachusetts now pay more taxes than ever, but are getting less. Government today has become so remote and complicated that the people have been forgotten in the process. It's time to send a new message of leadership to the State House, one that calls for a State government that is effective in addressing our problems and is accountable to the Massachusetts taxpayer."

White's campaign will emphasize specific plans targeted to meet the three issues facing the state of Massachusetts — the economy, the education system and the elderly, he said. "By focusing on these three 'E's,' I believe we can make State government more responsive to the needs of the citizens of the South Shore," said White.

A previous candidate for state representative in Scituate and Marshfield in 1983, White has served as special counsel to the Joint Legislative Committee on Taxation and was appointed to the Joint Committee's Local Aid Commission.

White is currently a principal of White and White, a law firm he founded in Weymouth.

Prior to Hingham, White lived in Scituate where he served on the advisory committee and was a member of the Scituate Democratic Town Committee.

In Hingham, White serves as a member on the Long Range Waste Committee, is a youth basketball coach, is a member of the Democratic Town Committee and previously served as a member of the Autumn Hill Association.

White is a graduate of Boston College High, a Cum Laude graduate of Boston College and a graduate of the New England School of Law.

He and his wife Betsy, a business operations manager with Ocean Spray Cranberries, Inc., live in Hingham with their three children.

More information on the campaign can be obtained by calling Greg White, chairman for the Committee to Elect Tim White at (617) 331-7097.

John K. McNabb turns in 170 nomination signatures

John K. McNabb, Jr., candidate for selectman, has turned in a total of 170 signatures on his nomination papers – the maximum number of signatures that can be collected. Fifty are needed to get onto the ballot.

"I have been greatly encouraged by the very positive response to my candidacy," said McNabb. "I want to thank everyone who signed my papers for helping to get me onto the ballot."

"In getting these signatures," said McNabb, "I have spoken to over 100 Cohasset residents and have listened to their concerns about the town of Cohasset. I have been working hard at this campaign so far. I will continue to listen to people's concerns during this campaign and after the election."

"I am hearing that many people want a change in town government," said McNabb. "I have the experience, desire and qualifications to make that change happen."

McNabb is Vice-President of S.A.F.E. (Stop Any Further Expansion), which has been working to protect the town from the proposed 27.5-acre expansion of the Cohasset Heights landfill.

McNabb is the founder and president of McNabb Associates, an environmental and government affairs consulting firm. He also is Vice-President for Government Relations of Corporate Conservation, Inc., a Cambridge recycling company, and is the legislative agent for the Massachusetts Health Officers Association. He is a former legislative liaison officer for the Mass. Dept. of Environmental Protection.

From 1983 to 1987, McNabb was a member and chairman of the Town Government Structure Committee. He also served a three-year term as a trustee of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. In 1991, he was chairman of the Town Groundwater Protection Committee. He was active in the anti-casino campaign on the South Shore in 1981. From 1972-73 he was a non-voting student member of the Cohasset School Committee.

McNabb is a 1974 graduate of Cohasset High School, and is a 1978 graduate of Bowdoin College. He has recently been attending the MBA program at U-Mass, Boston. McNabb grew up in Cohasset and resides at 53 Pond Street.

"I urge all Cohasset voters to turn out for the April 11 town election," said McNabb. "I ask for one of your two votes for selectman."

Crossen blasts Studds

"Gerry Studds is a day late and a dollar short in arranging for the Environmental Protection Agency to hold public hearings on Cape Cod addressing the MWRA outfall pipe," Republican Congressional candidate Mike Crossen said.

"The EPA has already approved the siting of the Boston Harbor outfall pipe, and construction has already started," Crossen explained. "If Gerry Studds were truly the environmentalist he claims to be, he should have insisted upon public hearings long before the project was underway. Gerry Studds runs a terrific public relations machine, but in truth he is no protector of this district's environment."

Crossen contends that "Studds failed the 10th District" by not critically evaluating and opposing the pipe years ago when it was in the early planning stages.

"The siting of the outfall pipe went through the hearing and approval process right under Studds' nose, and the voters did not hear a peep out of him," Crossen explained. "He neglected to do his job and a few hearings now cannot hide that fact."

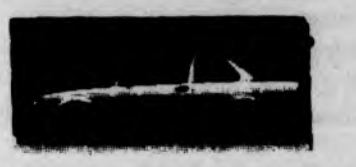
Atty. General rejects landfill bylaw

The State Attorney General has disapproved the "Structure" warrant article which was approved 214-40 by the Town at the Oct. 7 Special Town Meeting.

The article, if approved by the Attorney General, would have limited the height of the Cohasset Heights Landfill to 45 feet and would have required a building permit for any landfill construction.



"This rejection flies in the face of the will of the people of Cohasset," said Alix White, SAFE President. "SAFE will continue to fight, however."

This article was rejected because the Attorney General ruled that it would have required a new permit requirement — a building permit — for a landfill.

The Attorney General rejected the Article because the Solid Waste Act of 1987, in a section written by the solid waste industry, prohibits cities and towns from imposing any new permit requirements on landfill after July 1, 1987.

"Sen. Robert Hedlund has filed a bill, S-922, on our behalf to amend the Solid Waste Act and return Home Rule powers over landfills to cities and towns," according to John McNabb. "We hope Cohasset residents will support passage of this bill."

Teen center . . .

- no rough housing.
- no smoking.
- no foul language.
- no viewing R- or X-rated movies.
- adult supervision is mandatory when the center is open.
- respect for the center and its facilities is demanded.
- no open containers may be brought to the center.
- the adult supervisor is the final authority.

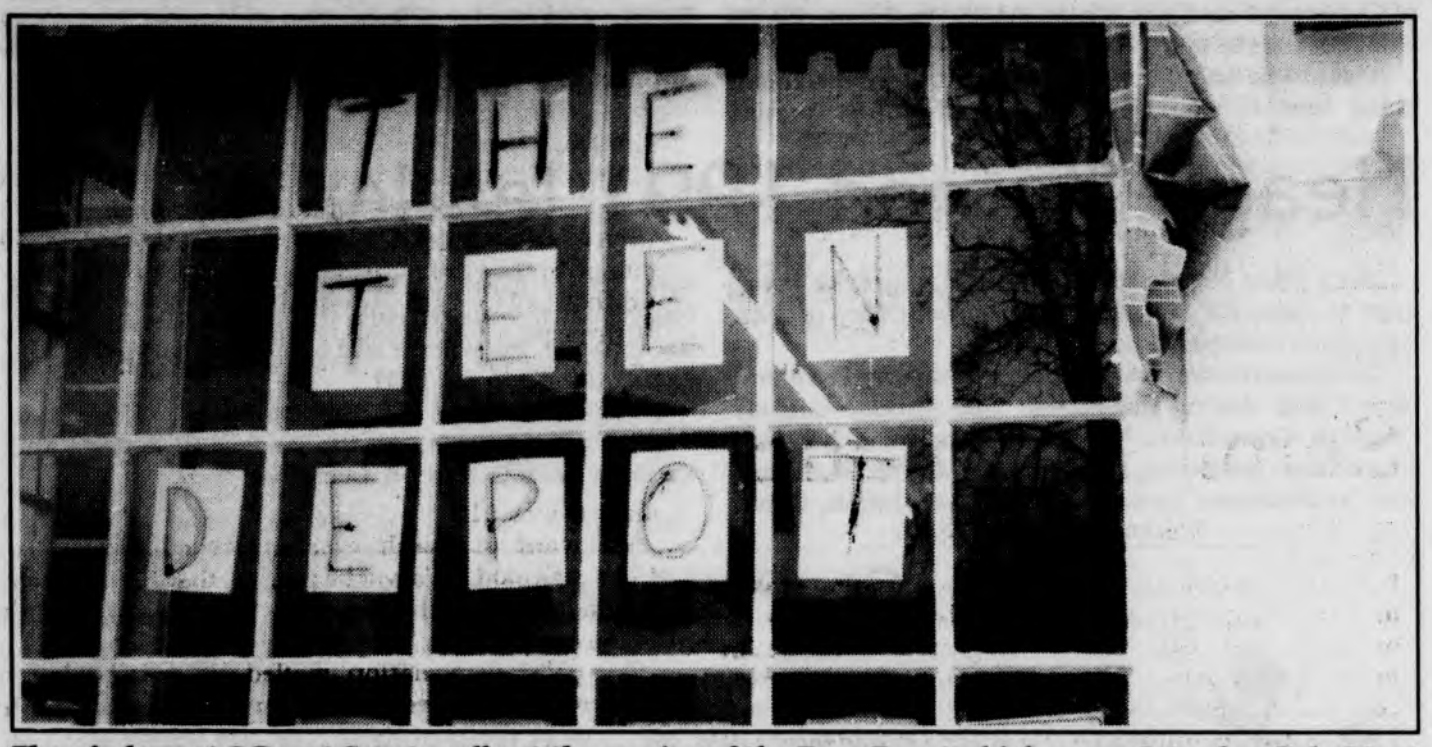
Use of the center is free. Teen-agers using the facility will have membership cards with a photo identification. The membership fee will merely pay for the cost of the card.

Membership is open to anyone who is a resident of Cohasset (no matter where they go to school) between the time the fall when he or she enters grade 7 until the fall after graduation from high school.

The teen governing body includes 22 youngsters. A few more will be added sometime soon.

Four adult supervisors have already been hired for the Teen Depot. One or two more adult supervisors will probably be chosen to allow for back up work, Christoffel said.

The four supervisors are all people in their 20s who are graduates of Cohasset High School. They are: Ted Carroll, who works for the Cohasset recreation department and South Shore Sports Center, Torin Sweeney, a teacher and wrestling coach, Amanda Church, a tennis instructor for Cohasset Comunity Center and student at UMass. Boston, and Mike Ellis, who runs a desktop publishing company in town.



A final budget for the center is being developed. Donations from the Cohasset Community Center (the landlord that charges Teen Depot no rent), gifts of money and equipment from individuals and businesses plus some seed money funnelled through the town's drug and alcohol committee from the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs.

Donations to date have included a television, a VCR, a sofa and labor. More overstuffed furniture is sought.

The adult advisory committee includes: Beth Christoffel, Karen Hettstrom, Bill Baird, the Rev. Gary Ritts, Keith Knowles, Paula Knowles and Pat Carlton of the Social Service League.

There is still space on the advisory board for more help. Anyone interested should get in touch with one of the members.

The advisory committee has been meeting since October to work on the teen center. Soon afterwards the group reached an agreement with the Community Center about the use of the Deport Court space. Since then they have been working on other organizational details.

The windows at 9 Depot Court spell out the coming of the Teen Depot whicl. opens Saturday, Feb. 29, at 2 p.m. The teen drop-in center will be open to those in grades 7 through 12 on weekends.

Fire budget . . .

personal computer but did include the ladder and booster pump.

"To me that's lifesaving," Laugelle said.

The fire department has 15 breathing units with seven-and-a-half hours capacity. Last year there were 42 structure fires. Chief Nadeau guessed that of the total between 8 to 12 were working fires that might have involved use of the breathing apparatus.

The ambulance will be a separate question on the town meeting warrant. It was bought in 1985 and has more than 70,000 road miles. Idling time increases wear on the engine but is not known.

Chief Nadeau is seeking a $90,000 heavy duty ambulance which he suggests would have a seven-year replacement life. The cost per year would be $16,006 under a lease/purchase plan, according to the chief.

He said the type ambulance he suggests is a "new trend."

The board asked him to gather more information on the old forestry truck before it would make a decision on repair or replacement.

The selectmen chose to add some money into the budget for training and recuitment of call firefighters. About $27,000 would be needed to train and outfit the new men. Part of the money would go toward buying protective gear for call firefighters already working who have no protective clothing or outdated models.

There are already 14 call firefighters, with protective gear for seven.

With the additional money, the chief said he hopes to add another seven call firefighters to the staff.

All the call firefighters would be trained beginning next September. By January, the training would be complete.

Chief Nadeau said there might be some overtime saving after the call firefighters were trained.

Selectman Laugelle pointed out that the overtime is dictated by the minimum manning clause in the contract and that call firefighters would not be allowed to drive the fire equipment anyway.

A request for dress uniforms for the call force was deleted from the budget by selectmen who did not argue the value of uniforms.

"You won't hurt my feelings be taking it out," Nadeau said in reference to the uniforms. "But I'm trying to create an environment that leads to success. It looks sharp, it feels sharp, it is sharp," he said.

On the clerical issue, the selectmen voted to cut the amount requested, which was $9,000 for the coming year to $7,305, which would allow a clerical worker 15 hours a week. There would be no benefits — which Selectman Chairman New Tebbetts said add 40 to 50 percent to the cost.

Clerical help was cut from the fire budget several years ago. After that time the question of ambulance billing became a problem for the town.

The overtime line allowed by selectmen was $97,884 which is about $20,000 more than this year. Apparently it is in keeping with expenses.

Semi-automatics . . .

Frederick Grassie head for a two-day training session in New Hampshire at the factory school run by the manufacturer, Sig-Sauer. The guns are American-made, which was an important requirement for the committee charged with selection.

After the training session Sgt. Abbadessa and Patrolman Grassie will instruct the rest of the department in the proper use and maintenance of the guns. Abbadessa is the department's armorer.

The training is being done on off-duty time for all the officers involved. There is 16-hours of classroom training and 8-hours of range training involved. Each officer will fire at least 500 rounds during the training sessions.

The guns will be issued for use on-duty after training is complete — something that is expected to happen mid-May.

"Now we are ready for the '90s," Sgt. Abbadessa said.

The choice of the 12-shot Sig-Sauer was made by the committee that includes: Sgt. Noonan, Sgt. Abbadessa, Patrolmen Grassie, Clifton Jones and Lawrence Ainslie Jr.

Four guns were evaluated by the committee with weapons from Smith & Wesson, Beretta and Glock competing with the Sig-Sauer.

Sgt. Abbadessa said the Sig-Sauer with its double-action is closer to a revolver. It takes a 12-pound pull to set off the trigger each time the weapon is discharged.

He said some of the other semi-automatics are more volitile, firing more easily after the first round.

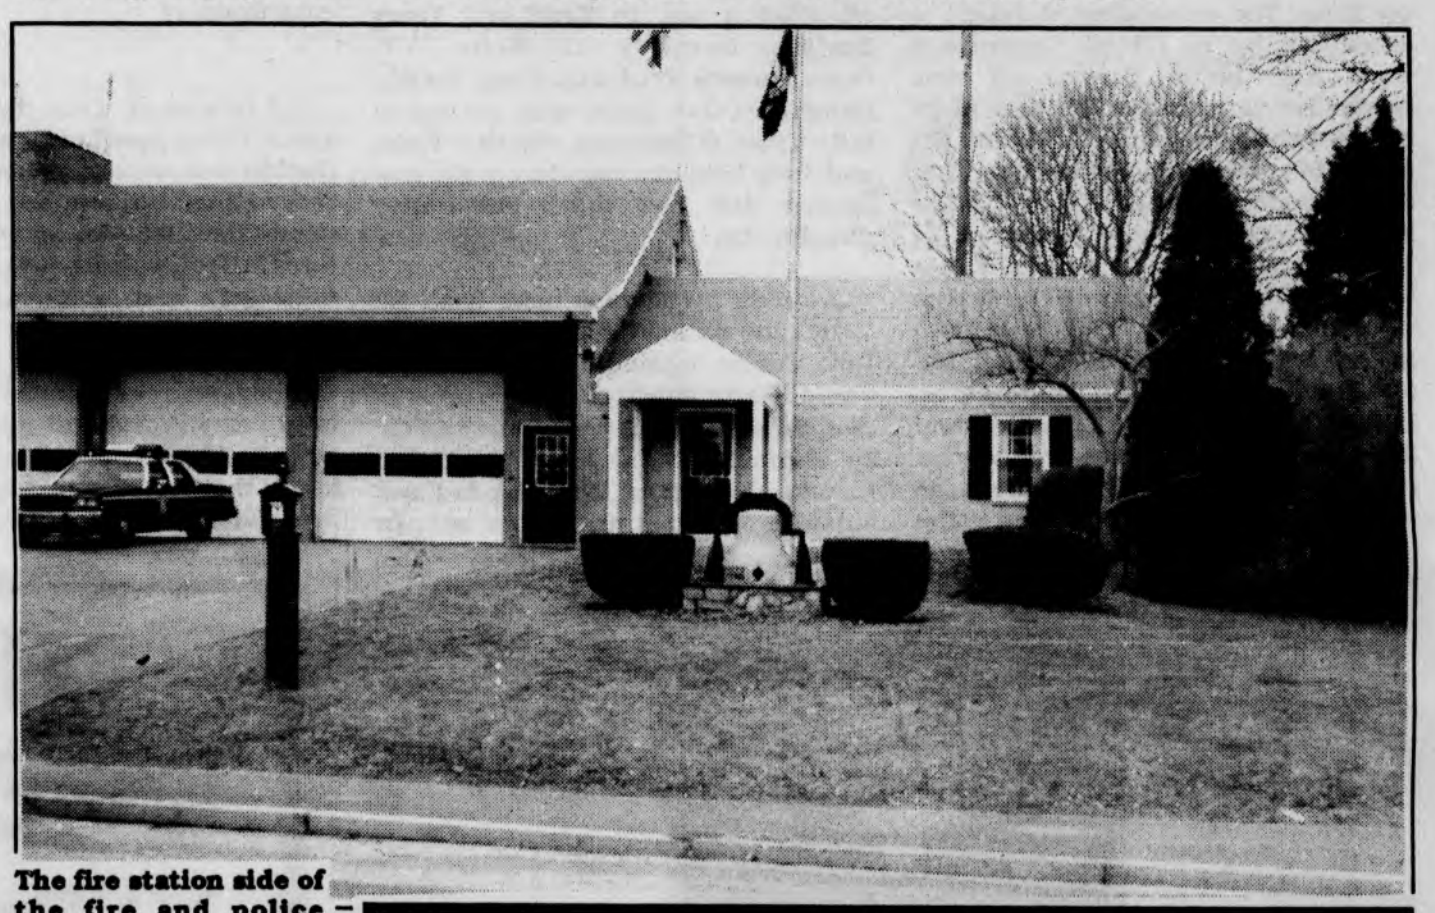
"The tranisition is easiest with this," he said.

A .40 calibre bullet will be used with the new weapons. The .40 calibre bullet is more powerful than a .9 mm bullet.

The project has the support of the chief.

Most of the departments in the area have already switched from pistols to semi-automatics. Hull still uses the old guns.

"They are more effective, more accurate," Sgt. Noonan said. He said they are easier to break down and there is less recoil.



The largest donation was a $4,000 contribution. The smallest was $10.

"We want to thank everyone who contributed," Abbadessa said. "We will be issuing thank-yous later."

Abbadessa said the department was pleased at the response.

The police association mailed about 200 letters explaining the project. There was also a story in the Mariner on the project. Since December, 76 donors have come forward.

The members of the police force do not often use their weapons. The last armed robbery in town happened several years ago at a store on Route 3A. But armed robberies and other violent crimes happen across the town's borders on a weekly basis.

The fire station side of the fire and police station now has a door for public use and another marked for employees. That's not the only change at the station.

around town

❑ Topping off the column this week are David Chittim and Gerard Keating, as most of you know, I spend my spare time working at "Dazzle," an ear-piercing, costume jewelry establishment at South Shore Plaza.

On Veteran's Day...Gerard and David were among the top five walkers who raised the most money in the third annual Walk-a-Thon for Meals on Wheels, conducted at the South Shore Plaza each year. We sure do congratulate you, David and Gerard, your contributions of time and energy are so appreciated. By the way, next time drop in at Dazzle (owned by Phil and Joan Shockman of Cohasset), and we will pierce your ears for 20 percent off, as they offer to any Cohasset resident. Jewelry items too!

❑ To continue to speak of senior citizens and their claim to fame, you all know that Ellery Clark immediately comes to mind. A direct letter from Ellery reads as follows: "All American award is based not on my winning the national championship, which I did in 1991, in men's group 80-84, 10 kilometer race walk (6.2 miles) which I did last July 13 at Niagara Falls, but on the excellence of my time. The established standard of excellence, by the Athletic Congress of the U.S.A., for an 81-year-old male racewalker is to better the time of 78 minutes and 36 seconds. I did, with the time of 69 minutes and 48 seconds. That created a new American record. It also beat the existing world record of 74 minutes and 45 seconds, held by Walter Keeler of Great Britain, in 1979. My time was four minutes 57 seconds faster than his. Now this Cohasseter is after Mr. Keeler's record. It will be submitted to an International Records Committee and they will vote yea or nay in several months. I know of no reason it would not be accepted. The race was conducted by the ruling body of American Track and Fields, the Athletic Congress of the USA. Time was correct, official, over an approved and measured course, with proper judges, etc. Let's hope one of Capt. John Smith's later lads will be able to claim and get the world record, in the name of the Town of Cohasset.

❑ All that were involved hope that you saw the great tape (video that is) of the Drug Free Weekend that Ed Hettstrom made that was aired on Channel 3...we know that many did, because there has been such a great response, and many pledges for help for next year's second annual... remember the work that the committee did, and how well received it was, and do what many of you have promised...participate! As you saw on the video, a great time was had by all that organized it or participated in the fun.

❑ Here's the latest report on babies born to "ex-Cohassetites: A boy, Luke Aaron Kulturides to Cindy and Lou Kulturides of Eustis, Florida on Jan. 23, 1992...brothers Alex and Jaime think he's great, and aunt and uncle Judy and Peter of Log and Line thrilled for them all. Also, a boy, to Todd and Tracy Smith, formerly of Wells, VT. Grandparents Fred and Judy Smith, formerly of Oak Street were present at little Tyler O'Donovan Smith's birth, and Judy held him even before the new mother did! Now that's one happy grandmother!

❑ Here's a real nice news flash for teens...the committee for the Cohasset Teen Center, located at 9 Dept Court, would like to announce the opening of the Cohasset Teen Depot, Saturday, Feb. 29. The facility will be open Fridays 6 to 11 p.m.; Saturdays, 2 to 11 p.m.; and Sundays, 1 to 5 p.m. and will not be open during high school or community center dances. The center will be open for grades seven through 12, and there will be supervision at all times. What a super idea. Please help with a donation, checks are made payable to "Teen Depot," P.O. Box 902, Cohasset, MA., 02025. Hey you guys, you wanted a place for your teens to go, you've got it! Help them.

❑ We must congratulate the Cohasset Rotary Club, they are unbelievable. This year they are donating $12,500 to local causes; $10,000 to the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation, the rest for the expansion for the Joseph Osgood Library Expansion for tables, chairs and resource machinery. That's fifty years of community service folks, appreciated for sure. Have you made your contribution?

Ralph Kidder and his wife Linda Keller enjoyed the un-cocktail party at South Shore Art Center during Winterfest. Kidder is running for re-election to the school committee. (PLD photo)

❑ A note to all of you that may not be aware of her qualifications...Shellanne Durkin was recently named as the new recreation liaison to the Harbor Committee. Between her being a mom of three little ones, and her dad being one of Cohasset's best lobstermen, she sure knows what is going on.

❑ Boy, we'll tell you one thing, ask a busy person syndrome again. Can you imagine, Marita Carpenter as one of the heads that raised over $62,000 for the families for the Floating Children's Cancer Center. We are so proud of you and your efforts, Marita, you are sure one mom that rallies for your children's cause (we love you for it).

❑ Last week was school vacation week, there is a lot of news out there...please let me know yours, then we'll tell ours, then they'll tell their's, etc...got the picture, pick up the phone with your latest event, we'd appreciate it.

Land trust contributes

Earlier this month the Cohasset Conservation Trust made the first installment of its $200,000 contribution to help purchase Lily Pond Estates, according to John Hubbard, president of the trust.

In 1990, the trust agreed to contribute the money to help the town buy the land near the water treatment plant.

"Residential development of Lily Pond Estates could have proposed a serious threat to the contamination of the town water supply at Lily Pond," Hubbard said.

The trust has received a contribution from Mrs. A. Werk Cook to add to the funds.

The land acquired by the town will be called the Robert S. Pape Reservation. Anyone who wants to make a contribution to the project can send a check to the Cohasset Conservation Trust, PO Box 314, Cohasset, MA 02025.

No Olympic medals

For most Americans, the 1992 Winter Olympic games was an eagerly awaited event.

Names, forgotten since Calgary, were dusted off, polished and placed back on their pedestals.

For local fans, it was especially exciting, as a legion of New England-born skaters and ice dancers, including half the Olympic hockey team, travelled to Albertville for a shot at the gold.

If only CBS could have captured that excitement and beamed it back fresh, rather than smothering it in ribbons and bows to be presented as a generic prime time package.

In an age where information travels literally at the speed of light, the "thrill of victory and the agony of defeat" loses some of its punch when aired 12 hours after the fact.

The corporate powers-that-be spent hundreds of millions of dollars to ensure America knows how much Bonnie Blair's bartender thinks of her, and took great pains so we wouldn't miss an inside glimpse of the German luge team's lederhosen collection, but they fumbled the ball when it came to what the Olympics really represents.

It's not about Tim McCarver and Paula Zahn. It's not about the trivial nuances uncovered in an athlete's televised biography.

The Olympics are a celebration of excellence, of a dedication that transcends national boundaries. Yet the network, in it's frenzy to please the "official sponsors," only looked as far as the next potential Pepsi star.

It dared not disrupt the time-honored soap opera block to beam in breaking action, and its insidious army of Gortex-swathed commentators seemed to overrun the slopes in their desperation to be the first reporter taped live at the scene.

In contrast to the gaudy, expensively amateurish CBS, the BBC's coverage of the '88 Calgary games was the essence of dry professionalism.

The brown paper package contained no mesmerizing computer graphics, no globe hopping interviews and very little sideline editorializing.

In what would have been suicide for an American television producer, the BBC let the event lead the way without pushing, prodding and squeezing out every last drop of entertainment value.

If the audience wanted to watch Britain's first ski jumper finish last, they had to tune in at 4 a.m. And they did.

What made the Olympics exciting to watch in Great Britain was the fact that for a few weeks, this common bond of athletic showmanship drew people together. And the BBC was the facilitator.

Maybe it's time for the CBS brass to pull their heads out of their wallets, because they sure aren't winning any medals this year.

- Andrew MacLellan
Mariner staff

chamber chatter

By Paula Knowles

My mind works in strange and mysterious ways. I've been told on more than one occasion (and by more than one person, I must add). So don't be alarmed if you cannot quite follow the logic of how I get from one subject to another—It makes sense to me, but...I have had a couple of real eye-opening experiences during this past year, and I have learned some valuable lessons. I thought that I would just pass them along.

Earlier in the year my daughter finally talked us into getting her contact lenses to replace the glasses that she never wore. Finding out that she had been playing varsity sports while barely able to see the balls involved had a lot to do with our acquiescence, I will admit; but for whatever reasons, we made the appointment and ordered the lenses. However, when it came time for a replacement pair, as it did quite quickly (who knew that a lens could be blown away in the wind while a person was playing soccer?), our eye doctor refused to give us the prescription. Having already paid $300 for the visit and lenses, we felt under no obligation to pay three times as much for replacement lenses by going through him. Needless to say, he saw it differently. To make a long story short, a pharmacist in Cohasset gave us the number for the state licensing bureau involved, as well as an education on our rights in this matter. Thanks to that honest and caring professional, we have our prescription, Jenn has her lenses, and we are looking for an eye doctor here in Cohasset.

Much later in the year—just recently, in fact—we had reason to change cars on our insurance policy (as any of you who read captions under pictures in the weekly Mariner will know). Unfortunately, this was the one policy that we had not yet switched over to our agent here in Cohasset, so we made the transfer and registered the new car—or so we thought—through our old agent in a neighboring town. Again, to cut to the chase, we found that the agent in question no longer had a valid license to work as an insurance broker in Massachusetts; and, in fact, he was waiting for sentencing on four counts of insurance fraud already! By following the advice of a concerned agent and broker here in Cohasset, and by being stubborn and, at times, nasty, we recovered our loss and registered the new car.

We learned a number of valuable lessons with these two "incidents." We learned that you have to ask questions BEFORE you pay for a service, even one "purchased" from a professional, such as a doctor or lawyer; that the consumer has rights that BOTH the buyer and seller should be aware of; and that it is not only all right to check out the legitimacy of a company or person with whom you plan to do business, but it should be required! Once again I found out how smart it is to do business within the Town, whenever possible. And I found out how caring most professionals doing business in Cohasset really are. The people who helped us with their advice and concern had nothing to gain, monetarily, at that point. But they gained our everlasting gratitude and good will—and our business in the future. And, we hope, yours as well. Car Insurance, legal advice, toothache, prescription to be filled, headache to be diagnosed. Check with your Cohasset directory, phone book or Chamber of Commerce to find help right here in Cohasset. You'll save yourself a lot of time and, perhaps, grief, in the future. And you'll not only find a professional to serve you, but also a friend to help you for years to come.

3. Statements must be submitted by the deadline of Monday noon for publication that week.

4. Statements should be used as a forum to address issues, not to attack personalities. The newspaper reserves the right to edit any material deemed libelous or tasteless.

5. Candidates' Corner will be published on a space-available basis. Priority will be given to those candidates in contested races. However, we will run all statements from candidates in a specific contest, or none at all. No more than one statement per candidate will be published each week.

Letters:

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates during the campaign.

The Mariner will publish other letters on campaign issues but all politically-oriented letters will be cut off two weeks before the election.

Candidate announcements

Major races such as selectmen, school committee and other contested campaigns will be covered by the paper's editorial staff.

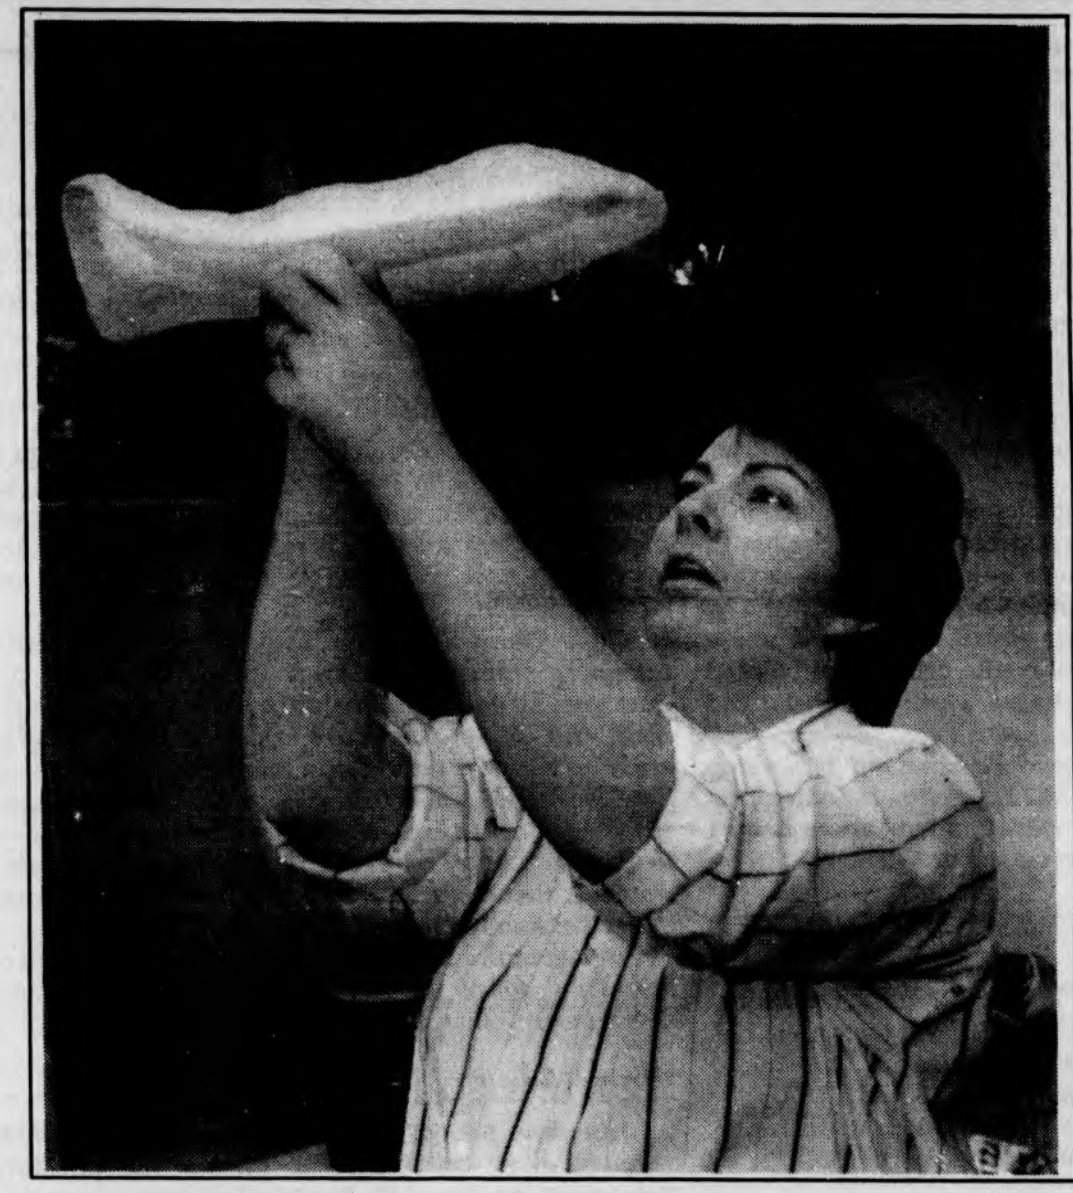
After the nomination deadline is past, the newspaper will publish a general overview of the upcoming election and the candidates.

Candidates for contested offices are welcome to submit a release announcing their candidacy until Monday, March 16, which is the deadline for the board of registrars submitting all nomination papers to the town clerk.

News coverage

Any event throughout the campaign which is deemed to be newsworthy will be handled by the editorial staff. The Mariner will strive to be evenhanded and fair to all candidates in the news coverage it provides prior to the election.

In the week prior to the election, the Mariner will publish Candidate Profiles - brief biographies about the candidates running for major offices, including selectmen and school committee.



These biographies will include a photo of each candidate. If the candidate has a suitable glossy, he or she may submit that for publication. Otherwise candidates should contact the Mariner to arrange to have a photo taken by a member of the staff. That photo will be for the exclusive use of the Mariner.

Candidates are also encouraged to advertise their campaign in this newspaper. For more information about our advertising rates, please contact Judy Almeida at 1-800-649-6661 or 837-3500.

Scholarship auction

As the auctioneer, Norman McCullock bellows these words for the last time late the evening of March 7, Old Colony Montessori School of Hingham hopes to have raised $10,000 for its scholarship fund and for the purchase of new equipment and materials. The theme of the Annual Arts & Services Auction "We are the World, We are the Children" will have special meaning for 20 percent of this, non-profit, "parent run" schools students, who receive some form of financial assistance.

The Auction will be held on Saturday, March 7 at the South Shore Conservatory of Music in Hingham. The evening will begin at 7 p.m. with a silent auction of over 100 items, followed at 8 p.m. with the live auction from the stage of the Cox Recital Hall. Complimentary hors d'oeuvres and desserts will be served with a beer and wine cash bar.

Leading the list of romantic getaways to be auctioned is a weekend at Shore Way Acres in Falmouth followed by weekends at the Red Jacket Inn in North Conway, NH and the Ocean Edge Resort in Brewster, the "Cuddle & Bubble" evening at the International Inn located in Hyannis, a weekend at the Ripley House Bed and Breakfast located on Main Street in Hingham, and a weekend on Martha's Vineyard.

Many heirloom treasure bidders can choose from are quilts, hand-crafted porcelain dolls by Ruth Lakie Sprague, a tiger maple Queen Ann mirror from Eldred Wheeler Co., a pickled pine cedar lined blanket chest made by Steve Mullen of Vintage Woodworks, an overlay stained glass mirror donated by Campeaus Designer Glass and a gold mirror painted with a scene of Boston Garden by folk artist Kathy Beagley.

Items for your home that will be available are a Sony boom box and Sony 4.5 inch t.v. with appliances. Secure Alarm of Hanover has donated a set of waterproof speakers, a gorgeous glass and brass table lamp was donated from the Light Stop. Additional items include botanical prints courtesy of Antique & Flowers of Hingham and color t.v., a brass and glass ceiling fixture and a Panasonic massager lounger.

Staying fit and having fun will be no problem for those bidders that choose any of the memberships offered by New England Health and Racquet, Ridge Athletic Club, L.A. Visual or Webb's Pro Fitness. And you could follow your workout with a make-over or a complete day of beauty from your head to your toes.

Many local merchants have donated items that would make wonderful gifts, including a confectionery gift basket from Maxwells, photo albums from Noble Camera Shop, a bracelet from Whitney Gordon Jewelers, a leather "Park Avenue" handbag from Conte's Dress Shop, a fruit basket from The Fruit Center Marketplace, a cloth bound stationary set from The Heidi Shop and a Bauer hockey bag from Pilgrim Skating Area, and a bird feeder from Wompatuck Hardware.

Tickets for outings such as sports events and various cultural events have always been annual favorites. Just a few of the items to be auctioned are tickets for a Celtics game, the Boston Pops, the Children's Museum, the Comedy Connection, the Blue Hill Trailside Museum, the Edaville Railroad.

No auction would be complete without a collection of treasures especially for children. Topping the list in this category is a signed book by local Hingham author Marc Brown in which contains an original drawing by Marc. Among many other items for children are a geosafari computer, a Bell traffic light, hand painted ballet slippers, "care" packages, stuffed animals, and hand knit sweaters.

Tickets are $10 and can be reserved by calling Cheryl McKendry at 740-0571. Due to limited seating at the conservatory, prospective "bidders" are requested to make their reservations as soon as possible.

cohasset community center

Judo comes to the CCC

Jim Craig, with a first degree Black Belt ranking with the United States Judo Association, will be teaching a class in Judo at the Cohasset Community Center. Judo comes from the fighting systems of feudal Japan. Founded in 1882 by Dr. Jigoro Kano, Judo is a refinement of the ancient martial art of Jujitsu. Judo was introduced into the Olympic Games in 1964 and is now played by millions throughout the world. People work at Judo to excel in competition, to stay in shape, to develop confidence, and for the fun of it.

Judo can best be described as a special form of wrestling that stresses throws as well as pins. Unlike most other martial arts, there is no kicking or punching in Judo. Judo emphasizes sport, fun, safety, and full physical activity for top conditioning. Judo utilizes virtually every muscle of the body and is an excellent overall conditioner.

Craig has been studying Judo since 1964 and has taught in Foxboro, Braintree, and at the Naval Air Station in Weymouth. Classes at the Cohasset Community Center happen Saturday mornings from 10:30 to 11:30 starting March 7. Call 383-0088 to register for the first 10-week session. Classes for adults and children.

Osgood heads to Emerson

Papa Gino's of America, Inc. will sponsor 675 second grade students from schools in Acton, Arlington, Auburn, Burlington, Cohasset, Danvers, Fitchburg, Lawrence, and Woburn, to attend "Strega Nona," a musical adaptation of an award-winning children's story by Tomie dePaola.

"Strega Nona" is being produced by Emerson Stage — the presentation wing of Emerson College — Feb. 26 to 28 at the Emerson Majestic Theatre, located at 219 Tremont St. in Boston.

Papa Gino's is sponsoring 50 students and 15 chaperones from the Osgood Elementary School in Cohasset to attend the Feb. 27 11:45 a.m. school performance.

Papa Gino's sponsorship is made possible through a grant from its Children's Appeal Funds. Employees recently raised money through the sale of Children's Appeal Coupon Books; the money is donated to various children's organizations throughout New England and New York. To date, the restaurant chain has donated over $1.5 million to local organizations including the Multiple Sclerosis READaTHON, the Kids Free Program at the USS Constitution Museum, and several local D.A.R.E. Programs.

Emerson Stage has been producing high quality theatre for children for over ten years. Since 1989, Emerson Stage has presented its plays at the Emerson Majestic Theatre, a recently renovated 825-seat historic landmark. The theatre is considered one of the most beautiful in the country and also is used by non-profit professional companies.

Courtney Allen . . .

but this is now being considered by the Friends of Courtney Allen as a way to remember Courtney and establish a tribute to the METCO Program which brings so much to the Cohasset Community.

The plan is multi-phased and begins with an archway, some lattice fences and shrubs which would enclose the outdoor classroom space. Additional developments would include the planting of a tree to enhance and shade the area and then other trees in other areas of the Osgood yard. The development of a seating and performance area between the picnic tables and the play park is a possible later phase of the plan. How much of the plan would be implemented would depend on how much community support developed. At this time the PSO-based Friends of Courtney Allen Committee is looking for some donations of time, money and energy to make the first part of the plan a reality.

Garden Club President Jane Goedecke said she is thrilled that at last there is a group willing to implement this plan. She added that as part of the Club's ongoing commitment to beautifying the Osgood grounds, it would seek to make future annual gifts to the school complement whatever steps are taken in the outdoor classroom plan. "The efforts of the METCO Committee's work is a perfect way for this plan to come to life."

METCO Committee Chairwoman Dayle Dickinson is also happy with the possibilities. "A permanent fixture in the Osgood yard where Courtney played is a fitting way for us to remember Courtney's happy and generous life."

Anyone interested in knowing more about the plans under consideration may call Dayle at 383-0892 or Sheri Anderson, who is coordinating the Friends of Courtney Allen group, at 383-0587. The group is planning to recruit interested persons and if the project can be done, begin work soon this spring. Contributions may be sent to: Friends of Courtney Allen, c/o Cohasset

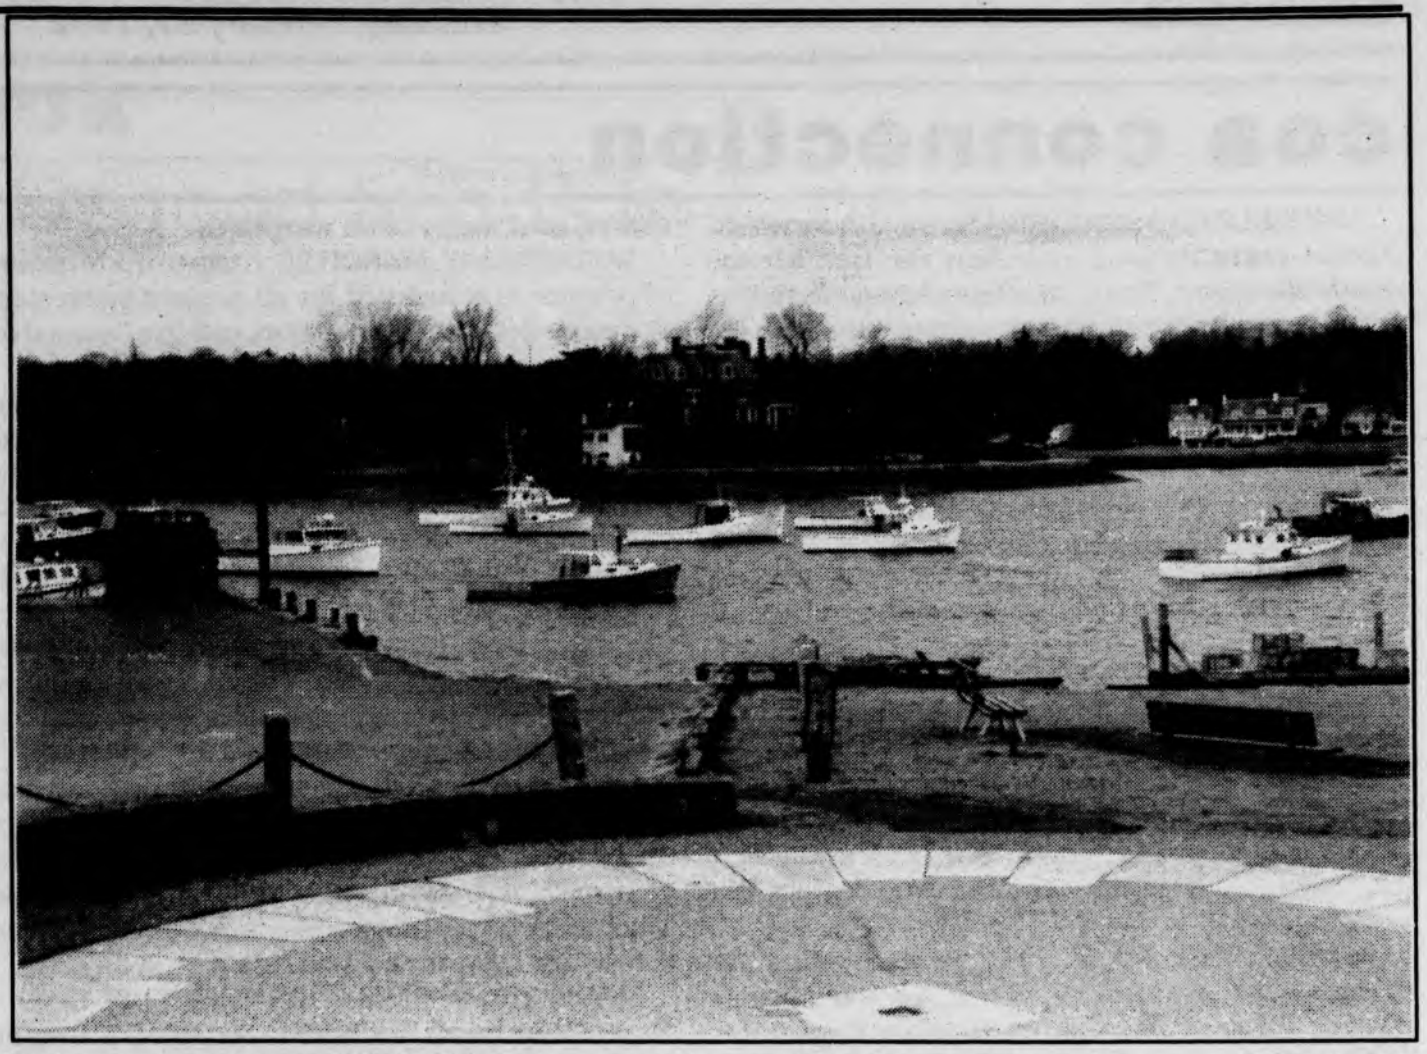
Tax payment deadlines



The second-half Fiscal 1992 Real Estate and Personal Property tax bills have been mailed. the due date for these bills is May 1. The Treasurer-Collector's office will be open Wednesday, April 29 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Thursday, April 30 from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Friday, May 1 from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Postmark dates will not be accepted. Payment must be received in the Collector's office by 1 p.m. May 1. No Exceptions!

Elizabeth Ripley, treasurer-collector, said, "Anumber of bills have been returned to our office because of improper mailing addresses. Any property owner who has not received a tax bill should contact the Collector's office at the Town Hall, 383-9900, ext. 113. Failure to receive a tax bill does not waive payment of the tax and does not excuse the homeowner from interest charges on payments received after the due date.

"The first commitment of Motor Vehicle bills for 1992 was mailed on Feb. 12. These bills are due and payable upon receipt, payable without penalty by March 13. If you received a bill and the vehicle listed on that bill has been sold, stolen, traded, declared a total loss or registered out of state, you must contact the Board of Assessors at 383-9900, ext. 124 and inquire about an abatement.

"The 1992 mooring bills have also been mailed and are due no later than 4:30 p.m. April 1. Failure to pay the mooring fee will result in the loss of mooring privileges."

Payments may be mailed to the Treasurer-Collector's Office, P.O. Box 296, Cohasset, 02025 or paid in person at the Town Hall. Our office is located on the second floor of the new addition. Any early payments will be appreciated. By mailing these bills earlier than usual we hope to avoid the costly procedure of borrowing in anticipation of tax revenue. Once again the Senior Center sent volunteers to help our office prepare all of these bills for early mailing. Their help is greatly appreciated, Ripley said.

D.A.R. Valentine tea

The February meeting of the Old Colony Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution was a joint meeting with the Colonel Thomas Lothrop Chapter of Cohasset, and was held at the home of Mrs. Edward Dillon of Jerusalem Rd., Cohasset, Feb. 12.

Following a Valentine Tea, a unique program consisting of historic objects owned by members, was presented. Among the unusual items displayed and described were: a christening dress worn by five generations of the same family; a gold thimble in a miniature basket which originally belonged to Priscilla Mullen's father (ca. 1577-1621) and which presently belongs to a direct descendant of John Alden.

Government Island plan

Only one group sent in a proposal for the use of town property at Government Island. The plan isn't a surprise but it will be explained in detail during a public meeting at 8:15 p.m. Monday, March 2, in the town hall auditorium.

Selectmen took the detailed proposal of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corp. (CLC) under advisement until that time.

Joseph McElroy, president of CLC, said the decision will be important.

The proposal says, "Some exterior and interior alterations to the historic are generally needed to assure its continued use but it is most important that such alterations do not radically change, obscure or destroy character-defining spaces, materials, features or finishes."

The plan calls for new parking spaces, new entrances or windows on the second floor, plus a whole additional floor and atrium — an exterior addition is under consideration.

A line drawing submitted with the CLC plan for the duplex at Government Island.

Nickerson reopens

Footlights will brighten the Nickerson Theater again in April. The Company Theater of Weymouth held a press conference Wednesday, Feb. 26, to announce that it has taken over the darkened Nickerson Theater on Accord Park Drive.

Negotiations between the building's owner, Ralph Tedeschi of Tedeschi Realty in Rockland, Larry Baumeister of Bank of Braintree and the theater's broker were finalized Feb. 21. The Theater is leasing the Nickerson building with an option to buy.

The Weymouth theater company plans to create a Center for the Arts in the building which has been empty since last August's presentation of "Man of LaMancha." An opening ceremony on April 3 will include The Company's production of "Gypsy."

The Company Theater is a 14-year-old non-profit oprganization which has performed in and around the Greater-Boston area. Members run the Academy of the Company Theater, an after-school and summer program for children, and create and perform new works. The theater was originally co-founded by Jordie Saucerman and Zoe Bradford to provide an outlet for theatre on the South Shore.

The Company hopes to establish a home for their productions and to invite other art groups to perform at the former Nickerson Theater. They previously performed at Weymouth's South Junior High but were forced to leave when the school closed in 1990.

The gymnastic finale

By Ruthann Sargent
CHS gymnastics coach

Feb. 13 the CHS Varsity Gymnastics Team had their last meet of the season. Cohasset hit a team high for the season of 111.90. Although Cohasset performed well, it was not enough to beat the visitors Notre Dame with a 112.50. A loss of .60.

The Skippers performed well on bars. Capt. Tara Gallagher led us off with a 7.80 followed by Capt. Erin Sutherland 5.80 and teammate 7th grader Megan Pratt 5.70. (Top performer for Notre Dame Camille St. Cyr 8.10).

Cohasset swept the balance beam by almost four points. Again Capt. Tara Gallagher led us off with a 7.90 followed by Tafana Fiore, Megan Pratt with a 7.0 and Captain Erin Sutherland with a 6.50.

A the half time, Cohasset was ahead by 3.10. The next event Vaulting was Cohasset's problem all season. Having Marnie DeMichele and Tara Gallagher with injuries the whole season they were unable to compete all season on the horse. Although Cohasset has had great improvement on the horse it was not enough against Notre Dame. Top Vaulters for Cohasset Captain Erin Sutherland 7.5, Jodi Colwill 7.3 and Caroline Delima 7.1. (Top performer for Notre Dame Camille St. Cyr 8.30).

Going into the Floor Exercise Cohasset was ahead by .30. Jodi Colwill received a personal best of 6.80. Tara Gallagher led us off with a 7.90, Erin Sutherland 7.5, Pratt 7.4, Erica Hettstrom and Tafana Fiore 7.10 and Julie Smith 7.0. Although Cohasset performed well on floor, so did Notre Dame. Notre Dame edged over Cohasset for the win of .60.

Nicole Haefner and Marnie DeMichele helped out in reaching a team high of 111.90.

The following gymnasts received trophies and awards from Cohasset Coach Ruthann Sargent at a recent Gymnastics Banquet held at Friday's. Seventh Grader Julie Smith and Eighth Grader Tafana Fiore received the Most Improved Gymnast Awards. Captain Senior Erin Sutherland was awarded "Beam Queen," "Most Spirited and Enthusiastic Gymnasts" and "Most Consistent Gymnasts." We will miss you next year!

Hoopsters advance in State Tourney

By Paula Knowles
Mariner sports writer

Both the Wrestling and Boys' Varsity Basketball teams ended their February vacations with a bang this weekend as both groups advanced in their respective State Tournaments.

On Sunday, Feb. 23, a scrappy Cohasset basketball team, previously believed to be crippled by the loss of its two top players, advanced to the second round of the State Tournament with a come-from-behind win against Southeastern. Fueled by balanced scoring and a great team effort, the Skippers came back from a 13- point deficit, pouring in 22 points in the last nine minutes of the game and holding Southeastern to only 5. While junior Doug Ellinger was keeping his team steady, former Junior Varsity players Dorian Bryant, Joe Andrade, Chris Kondrat and Brian Pattison were getting ready to show the world that they were varsity material. Their solid play, including Dorian's game-high 11 points and a clutch 3-point play from Andrade, were key elements in Cohasset's 44-38 win, according to assistant coach Ron Ford. "This is a very young team," said Ford, "and every tournament game they play is giving them invaluable experience for next year's Tournament — where they should be one of the leading contenders."

Game 2 was scheduled to be played Tuesday night, Feb. 24 against Medfield.

Wrestlers go to the mat

Torin Sweeney's Wrestling team scored big over the weekend in their tournament at Carver High School.

Ray Jones took first place in his 145 pound weight class to qualify for the State Tournament this coming weekend. Steve Harrington, with a second in the 140 class, and Ryan Freeman (112) and Nate Fiore (135) with third place finishes in their classes, also qualified for the "States." And senior Captains Carlo Lagrottieria (119) and Jason Thayer (160) still have hopes of extending their final season for the Skippers. Their fifth place finishes make them alternates in the State Meet this weekend.

All those fans who want to cheer these Skipper teams on can get starting times and directions to the Tournaments by simply calling the high school during regular hours.

Restoration time for Government Island home

By Charlene Vandini
Mariner correspondent

Selectmen voted unanimously to accept the Cohasset Lightkeepers' proposal for renovation of the Government Island duplex, and said they would sign the lease for the property as soon as town counsel has approved the document.

Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation president Joe McElroy explained in detail Monday the group's plan to convert the building into a function and meeting facility, with two apartments on the second floor.

At least two residents questioned the CLC's proposed design which called for the addition of two windows on the first floor. One window would be placed between two windows on each side of the front doors. This, McElroy explained, would enhance the view of Cohasset harbor from the Lightkeeper's building.

Noel Ripley and Hamilton Tewksbury both opposed this plan, saying the additional windows would jeopardize the historical commission's application to include the property on the National Register of Historic Places.

The two new windows would "spoil the integrity of the front of the building," Ripley said.

Tewksbury added that there is no reason to make these changes, and that there is no "historical basis" for this change.

Historical society president Burt Pratt initially opposed the additional windows, but said he was no longer convinced that they would harm the application for National Register status.

The plan for the building would make it handicapped accessible. Rents from the second floor apartments will "keep the building self-sustaining," McElroy said.

Each 740-square-foot apartment would have one bedroom, bathroom, a living room with a fireplace, and kitchenette with a dining area. The two units will share a common laundry room, and will have access to a deck over the rear terrace. This deck will also provide secondary egress, in compliance with state regulations.

He said it would be possible to seek a waiver from this state regulation, but since a secondary egress is a safety issue, the CLC wishes to comply with it.

In addition, McElroy said, the 1,100 square-foot first floor meeting room will accommodate approximately 68 persons, and would be available to local community service organizations at a small fee to cover custodial costs. It will also have commercial kitchen facilities, two restrooms, and a storage area. Additionally, the room could be rented for private functions for a small user fee, plus the charge to cover custodial costs.

The CLC will be soliciting donations to cover the projected $196,000 cost of the renovations, McElroy said. Of that figure, approximately $5,000 has been budgeted for a connection to natural gas service, with $30,000 for exterior site work on the grounds surrounding the property.

"Fund-raising will be a daunting task" in the current economic climate, he noted.

McElroy believes the renovations could be completed by "Harborfest, 1993."

National recognition for local student artist – the hard work finally pays off

By Andrew MacLellan
Mariner staff

Jay Nothnagle is a hard worker. If you ask him he'll tell you so.

In between school, his paper route, after school sports and scouting, he still found time to win a state award as part of Barbara Bush's nationwide White House 200th Anniversary Art Exhibition.

Nothnagle, a Cohasset resident, has Down Syndrome.

But thanks to his enthusiasm, curiosity and determination and an ambitious classroom mainstreaming program, the 18-year-old is realizing more than many average kids.

After two years at Gates Intermediate Junior School in Scituate and another two at Scituate High School, Nothnagle has formed a solid relationship with the entire student body.

His teacher, Kathleen Hughes called him a "mature and talented student."

He is manager for both the hockey and football teams, works in the school cafeteria and is about to earn his Eagle Badge with the Troop 12 Boy Scouts.

And he just began working at Stop & Shop after school.

In his spare time, Nothnagle plays the drums — he's an avid heavy metal fan — bowls with friends at the Cohasset Community Center every Thursday and works out at the gym a few times each week.

Hughes said Nothnagle is well-developed and very coordinated for a Down Syndrome student.

His daily regimen includes 20 sit-ups and 20 push-ups.

He also plays hockey on a special needs team and loves to skateboard.

Despite the list of interests, Nothnagle's teachers and mother Helen "Taffy" Nothnagle believe his true talents lie in art.

As a student at the South Shore Art Center's visiting artist program several years ago, Nothnagle first discovered his calling.

Senior issues hit the airwaves

By Andrew MacLellan
Mariner staff

South Shore seniors now have a source of news and information on the airwaves thanks to John and Michael MacNamara.

Although they're unrelated, both men have committed to the elderly community with their WATD talk show "Senior Issues."

Every Sunday from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. the MacNamara's invited guests and call in listeners discuss topics from health and fitness to alternative living arrangements and nursing home care.

John, a Scituate resident, owns an insurance agency in Cohasset and began working closely with senior claims two years ago.

Michael, who lives and works in Cohasset, owns an investment planning agency and has helped seniors manage their finances for 12 years.

He has another show, "MacNamara on Money," which airs before Senior Issues at 6:30 p.m.

"Seniors control about 85 percent of our nation's wealth, and typically they need a lot of help," John said.

"Often they are not getting good advice."

The MacNamaras try to cut through the veneer left by disingenuous sales pitches and advertisers.

Through their show, they provide protective services in areas from finances

No-go for Gallagher

Selectmen refused to accept the resignation of town accountant Mary Gallagher, but will go ahead and advertise for her replacement.

Gallagher was recently appointed Scituate town accountant.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle initially made a motion reject her resignation, but it did not receive a second. Selectman Jane Goedecke then moved to table the matter.

"I'm not prepared to vote on this now," she said, adding that she did not care to comment further at this time.

Later, during Monday's meeting, executive secretary Greg Doyon outlined for the board's approval his procedure for seeking candidates to replace Gallagher.

He will advertise the vacancy in the Massachusetts Municipal Association's Beacon, review applications, interview a number of candidates, and recommend three candidates for interviews with the board.

Laugelle questioned whether the board could "legally do this without accepting her resignation." Doyon said he did not believe it would be a problem.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she wants to see all the applications.

The board voted unanimously to follow this procedure.

New study group member

The selectmen have named Terry Atherton to the Public Works Garage Study Committee.

Hold that parking

Cohasset Imports owner Peter Capozzoli will have to wait another week to learn if the selectmen will allow him to increase the number of cars he presently parks on his property.

Capozzoli's used car dealer's license has been temporarily renewed while the selectmen determine how many cars may be parked on the lot. His former license specified 20 vehicles. He is now requesting permission for a total of 60 cars: vehicles for sale, awaiting repair, and the private cars of Capozzoli and his employees.

Attorney Christopher Pitt said Monday that no cars will be parked on land that is within the Route 3A layout. In addition, the conservation commission has no objection to daytime storage of cars on the gravel area at the rear of the property.

In addition, Cohasset Fire Chief John Nadeau said Capozzoli's proposed parking plan allows emergency access to the rear of the property, and there is adequate space between the cars parked in the front of the lot that firefighting hoses could run through the lot.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby was prepared to vote Monday, but selectman Jane Goedecke asked that the matter be continued to the board's next meeting.

Goedecke said that she wants to look at the property one more time, with the fire chief's and conservation commissions reports.

Information needed

A victim of a hit and run accident is searching for some answers.

Janice Kelleher was driving north on Rte. 3A across from Cushing Plaza on Friday, Feb. 28 at 3:30 p.m. when her car was struck by an identified car travelling south. Her vehicle sustained substantial damage, yet the driver of the other car sped from the scene. Although police attempted to locate the second driver, they were not successful. Police believe the car was a white station wagon with wood panels on the sides.

Kelleher, who was not injured in the accident, would like to find the driver of the second vehicle. If anyone was a witness to the accident, please call Kelleher at 383-2421.

Donations accepted

The last sentence was omitted from an article which appeared in last week's issue of the Cohasset Mariner about the late Courtney Allen, a former METCO student in Cohasset.

Contributions may be made to the Friends of Courtney Allen, c/o Cohasset PSO, METCO, P.O. Box 30, Cohasset, 02025.

Resident donates to trust

In 1990, the Cohasset Conservation Trust agreed to contribute $200,000 towards the purchase by the Cohasset Water Department of Lily Pond Estates, a proposed development property located adjacent to Lily Pond near the Water Department pumping station.

Residential development of Lily Pond Estates could have imposed a serious threat to contamination of the town water supply at Lily Pond.

The trust has received a generous contribution from Mrs. A. Werk Cook to be added to its funding for this project.

The first installment of the Trust's contribution was made early in February, as requested by the Town Treasurer's office.

The land acquired by the town will be called the Robert S. Pape Reservation.

Anyone wishing to make additional contributions to the project can do so by sending their check to the Cohasset Conservation Trust, P.O. Box 314, Cohasset, MA 02025

Town to comply with education guidelines

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

In order to conform with federal guidelines for special education programs, the school committee Monday night approved the use of a Special Education Annual Plan for tracking the program's performance.

Compliance with federal guidelines does not alter the town's special education program, according to director of special education Jack Leary.

"It's the manner of reporting the program that had to be changed, "Leary said.

The federal government found that Massachusetts wasn't complying with national reporting standards of special education, according to Leary, so every community in the state is changing its reporting format.

School committee member Ralph Kidder was concerned that the cost to conform with the new reporting guidelines was excessive, and unwarranted.

"This first year the cost will be high, but once it's done and in place, reporting for subsequent years will be easy and take less time," Leary said.

The new format will help the special education department be more introspective and focused on future goals, he added.

Leary did not know the cost of producing the plan, but said he and his assistant spent approximately 80 hours to create it.

The town has 212 students enrolled in its special education program, up from 205 last year. The students enrolled are between ages three and 21.

Superintendent Stephen Hart said Cohasset spends approximately $6,443 per special needs student compared to a state average of $6,959.

Hart said a comparison of the two averages is skewed by the fact that demographic differences dictate that some communities must offer additional classes for special needs students.

For instance, many inner-city special needs students need a bi-lingual teacher. There is no need for bi-lingual education in Cohasset, and therefore that amount is not added into the town's average expenditure per student.

Leary noted that the school will need to spend more next year in order to make the high school handicap accessible.

In other committee news:

*A 93/94 school schedule was approved, pending approval by the teachers' union. If approved, school will start Sept. 9 next year and end June 22. Any school days cancelled because of snow will be made up after June 22.

*The seventh graders' trip to the Cape Cod Canal was approved.

*Musicians of all grades will travel to a band competition in Williamsburg, PA in the spring.

Hard work pays off . . .

Today, he works in any medium from clay to magic marker. His teachers encourage him and marvel at his talent.

Last year, Nothnagle travelled to Brown University in Providence, R.I. to work on an art project with his sister, Melissa, who is a junior.

To enter the White House contest, he had to research the history of both the building and presidential families.

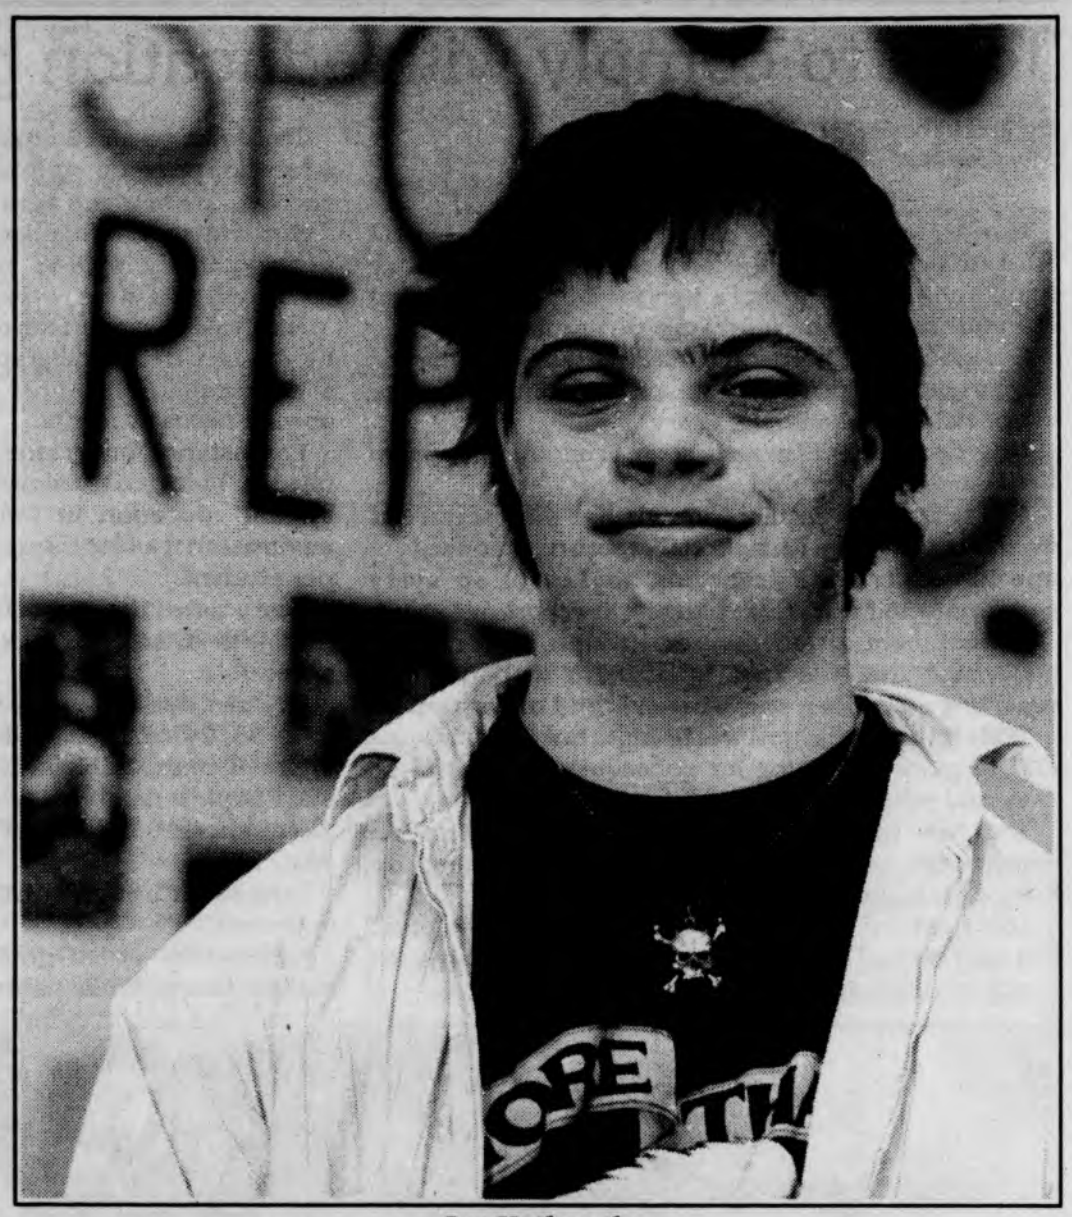
Nothnagle's "Millie and her Pups" depicts the president's dog lying on the front lawn surrounded by her litter.

It will hang in the JFK Library as part of a permanent exhibit. A ceremonial dinner is scheduled June 2.

The contest was designed to promote awareness and build self-confidence in disabled children.

"Did you know," the brochure asks, "that Franklin Delano Roosevelt, one our most popular presidents, was stricken with polio when he was 39 and often used a wheelchair in the White House?"

A national move to help disabled students push themselves to their limits is growing, and according to Nothnagle's mother, Scituate's mission to develop independent, self-assured children is paying off.



"The school is just doing an incredible job including him and mainstreaming him, not just at the high school but at Gates too.

"Jay sees what others are doing and he's doing all the projects they are.

He recognizes talent and loves being with other kids."

As one of WHDH Channel 7 television's "Comeback Kids," Nothnagle was featured last September riding his bike on his paper route and hanging ten at Scituate's skateboard park.

"He takes an awful lot of initiative on his own," said his mother, "and the Scituate high program has been really good at helping him develop that."

Jay Nothnagle

Correction

An article on Cohasset Heights Landfill which appeared in the Feb. 13 issue of the Cohasset Mariner contained erroneous information.

A statement in the article noted that "The Board of Selectmen, Board of Health, Planning Board and Conservation Commission all filed objections to the plan." That statement is inaccurate.

The Cohasset Planning Board decided that it was inappropriate at this time to comment in the Supplemental Draft Environmental Impact Report for Cohasset Heights Landfill since the project could come in front of the board for a site plan review. The planning board did not file any objections to the plans nor did it endorse the plans.

YOU CAN RELY ON!

John and Michael MacNamara on the set of "Senior Issues" at WATD's Marshfield studio.

Senior issues hit the airwaves . . .

to personal safety.

Upcoming shows include a review of Medicaid laws, health care issues and how to pick the best nursing home.

Last week, council on aging coordinators from Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell and Weymouth participated in an on air forum, and the recognition rate is growing rapidly.

"We're just getting to the point where the councils on aging are seeing the value of the program," John said.

"It's a viable way of helping them get their job done. They can contact a wide audience, inform them of programs and find funding."

Scituate council on aging coordinator Ruth Sisson, who worked for the last two years on a similar project, met the MacNamaras several months ago and helped them put the show together.

Together with Scituate's Ellen Stephens, Sisson lines up guests and books upcoming spots.

"It an opportunity for people in their leisure time to learn about senior issues," she said. "They can call in and ask experts in the field questions which pertain directly to their lives."

"I'm extremely pleased that they're doing this," said Cohasset's council on aging coordinator Kathleen Bryanton.

"It's a very informational outreach effort to help enlighten seniors to pertinent issues.

It has great potential, and to me it's meeting a need."

The show is not just for seniors John pointed out. Adult children may also be concerned about a particular medical or financial subject which they don't feel comfortable broaching with their parent.

With their new sub station WATB, WATD radio carries the show from Quincy to Provincetown and the islands.

The MacNamaras recently contacted Carla Priest, director of gerontology for Cape Cod Community College.

She is beginning a television show there, and the two groups have pledged to promote one another.

About 21 percent of the population south of Quincy is over 60 years old, according to ATD's marketing director Robert Parkis.

"That's a lot of people who are entitled to work with their local COA," John said.

"One of the biggest problems is that people don't know where they are, what they are or what they're good for."

The MacNamara's are currently spending about $11,000 of their own money to get the show going, but advertising is picking up, according to Michael.

This Sunday's show will focus on Alzheimers and "how the family tends to be victimized by the disease."

There is no shortage of guests.

"We're growing like wildfire," John said. "We're booked out until April."

"We're a real community service vehicle," said Michael.

"It's a way to tie together those councils on aging that have similar needs and provide them an opportunity to make public service announcements.

"This isn't just a radio show. It will evolve."

Contests set for April 11 town election

There are only three contested seats in this year's election race, as 22 residents met last Friday's nomination deadline for the April 11 town election.

Upon certification by the registrars, campaigns for selectmen, school committee and the health board will begin in earnest.

Incumbent Diana Kornet will run for one of two open three-year selectmen seats, as will John McNabb Jr. and conservation commission chairman Merle Brown. Selectmen chairman Ned Tebbetts will not seek another term in office.

Helath board member Michael Sullivan also will run for the selectman's seat. He said he will resign from his present post if elected.

Two three-year school committee seats are being sought by incumbent Ralph Kidder, Owen McNally and Kenneth Wilcox. Christopher Ford will not run for a third term.

On the health board, Thomas Cook and Robert V. Davenport will vie for the single three-year seat. Chairman Sharon Becker will not see nomination for a third time.

Marion Douglas is the only candidate seeking election for a one-year unexpired term as town clerk.

Unopposed are Ross Rosano for assessor, Ron Goodwin for water commissioner, Henry Rattenbury for the sewer commission and Alfred Moore for the planning board.

Also running unopposed are Ralph Perroncello for the housing authority and Paul Pratt Library trustee incumbents Barbara Power, Lucia Woods and former trustee Katherine Sturtevant.

On the recreation commission, tree and park superintendent Peter Laugelle and incumbents Mary Muncey and Terese England Duggan are the only candidates.

Retarded adults to become homeowners

With funding from the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens (South Shore ARC) is conducting a national demonstration project making it possible for 25 individuals with mental challenges to acquire the housing of their choice. The options include buying or renting their own house, condominium or apartment in single or shared arrangements.

South Shore ARC has received a grant of $96,248 from HHS Administration for Children and Families to initiate the program. The total project budget will exceed $500,000 not including the financial arrangements to help purchase properties. HHS is expected to provide an additional $200,000 toward the program's costs, and the agency will pursue other sources for funding to match the federal monies.

Entitled "A Home of One's Own," the program is expected to last three years. During that time, the agency will enable individuals with developmental disabilities to determine their housing needs and desires, and become homeowners if they want.

The Home of One's Own project seeks to return control and decision-making responsibility to persons with disabilities and their families. In a break from the current norm, the person's choice in a home setting will be considered separately from his or her need for support services.

The agency will seek to help the individuals develop an informal community-based network through family, neighbors and friends. When necessary, paid staff will be available for specific skills training or to provide other assistance to enable each individual to live and participate as independently as possible in the life of the community.

South Shore ARC currently is accepting applications to participate in the program. All individuals who are developmentally disabled who want to take part in the program are strongly encouraged to contact the organization for more information.

Participants must be adults who are developmentally disabled and are 22 years or older by the end of 1994. The individual with disabilities, or his or her parents, must reside in one of 37 cities and towns in southeastern Massachusetts. The eligible communities include: Abington, Avon, Braintree, Bridgewater, Brockton, Carver, Cohasset, Duxbury, East Bridgewater, Easton, Halifax, Hanson, Hanover, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Kingston, Lakeville, Marion, Marshfield, Mattapoisett, Middleborough, Milton, Norwell, Pembroke, Plymouth, Plympton, Quincy, Randolph, Rochester, Rockland, Scituate, Stoughton, Wareham, West Bridgewater, Weymouth and Whitman.

Interested individuals and their families are encouraged to write or call the South Shore ARC for additional information and application guidelines. Write to South Shore ARC, P.O. Box 58, North Weymouth, MA 02191 or call 617-335-3023.

Episcopals host seminar series

Trinity Episcopal Church of Marshfield Hills will host an upcoming Cathedral School program entitled "Faith, the Individual and Community" sponsored by the Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts.

The series will be presented on four consecutive Monday evenings from 7 to 9:30 p.m. beginning March 9.

A committee consisting of members from several area Episcopal churches has developed the program with assistance from the Diocese. March 9, the Reverend Floyd Naters-Gamarra will discuss how we can apply Christian faith as active members of the community. He is the rector of St. Stevens Episcopal Church and has worked in the inner city for 25 years.

March 16, Ben Strohecker, president of Harbor Sweets, Inc. in Marblehead, will discuss the conflicts that arise between Christian values and the values of the workplace.

March 23, The Reverend Jeanne Sproat, Canon Pastor of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul in Boston and health care advocate, will discuss how current health care issues such as AIDS and care of the elderly and poor challenge our sense of community.

March 30, The Honorable Byron Rushing, a state representative from the South End/Fenway, will discuss how Christian values can have impact in the political arena.

The registration fee for the entire series, including a light supper of soup and bread, is $10 (seniors/students $8). Although preregistration is preferred, registration will be accepted at the door.

The Episcopal Diocese invites both members and non-members of the Diocese to participate in this program. For more information, call Trinity Church at 834-8575 or Ann Samuels at 837-5856.

Naturally, top billing this week goes to an internationally famous couple of Cohasset fame, Mary and Evy Scotvold. As most of you have read, they are the couple that coach and choreograph Nancy Kerrigan and Paul Wylie. Paul won a silver medal in the men's skating competition, and Nancy won a bronze in the women's skating competition. Imagine winning two medals in the Olympics, especially when you weren't "picked" to do so well...imagine contributing to one of the best American showings in figure skating since the 1950s. Our heartiest congratulations go to the Scotvolds, and we are sure their phones will be ringing off the hook for other future Olympiads.

We heard great news this week. Noel Edwards is home at last, after a lengthy stay in the hospital, followed by a stay at a nursing home. When he went to the luncheon at the Senior Citizen special, he heard a round of "For He's A Jolly Good Fellow," followed by a standing ovation. Everybody loves you, Noel, and we are all so glad you are on the mend.

Bobby Sweeney called last week and he reports that he is fine, as is his brother, Bernie. They are both brothers to Walt Sweeney, and lots of us have been wondering where they have been "hiding." They sounded super.

If you see what appears to be a special ray of sunshine coming from Hammond Avenue, don't be surprised! It is Midge and Dennis Kuntz, beaming out their glee at the birth of their very first grandchild. On Sunday, Feb. 23, their daughter, Nancy, gave birth to a baby girl in Santa Barbara, California. Their little granddaughter's name is Nicole Rene Kraemer, and naturally Dennis and Midge cannot wait for the next school vacation to hop a plane and go see their pride and joy. Congratulations go to all of you. Babies are so wonderful and so special, especially grandbabies.

Speaking of California, a lot of you remember John and Mary Benbow. John was a minister at the Second Congregational Church for many years, and Mary a teacher in the Cohasset Schools. John is going to be a minister at the church in La Jolla California, and he and Mary will be leaving in mid-April. Although they left Cohasset quite a while ago, they have always "been around," and they will be missed by many of us.

We are happy to report that Charlotte Fratus is home and doing extremely well after her recent stay in the hospital. We hope you feel better and stronger every day.

We are also glad to be able to tell you that Leslie Reed, formerly of Jerusalem Road, now a Hingham resident, is feeling much better after his recent by-pass surgery, and that he is up and about just like always. We all love you, Les.

Maurizio Capellupo cheers for his friends as the residents of the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home participate in their version of the winter Olympics. (Staff photo by Alan Chapman)

Congratulations go to Lisa (Fichtner) and Jeff Pratt, brand new newlyweds as of Feb. 22.

Many people still cannot believe that Marion Sullivan, a town figure and legend in her own way, has passed away. She was a teacher of the old school, an English teacher that many generations learned from and enjoyed. Young and old alike enjoyed Marion. She loved life and all that it involved. A true people person and a dedicated teacher, she will remain in the hearts of many forever. Everyone has a "Miss Sullivan story," pause for a moment and remember it. You will be doing yourself a big favor and pay tribute to her at the same time.

Be sure to mark March 10 on your calendar. It's the date for this year's candidates' night, sponsored by the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce. You can meet the candidates face to face, and hear their opinions on the issues. It will be held at the Art Center, with the time being 7:30 p.m. for coffee, 8 p.m. for the program's beginning. Get involved, show them you are concerned and let the Chamber know you are grateful for their efforts.

Speaking of the Chamber of Commerce, did you know that they donated a lot recently? To the Teen Depot, FISH, the Cohasset Recreation Dept. for their annual Easter Egg Hunt, Harborfest, Drug Free Weekend for 1993, Cohasset Rotary Red Book, and the Cohasset Police Association. See what they do? Shop Cohasset!!

Before we forget, attention all teens. Teen Depot has opened. Enjoy it, and be sure to thank those involved for making it possible. It is so good to see a number of people and organizations that care about teens. Respond in kind by taking advantage of the benefits and taking care of the Depot.

Sandra (Hitt) Young was in town last week, taking time to help her mom clear out in order to sell her house. She and her brother wished to be remembered to all.

That's the news from here for the week. Be sure that you let us in on your news.

Remembering Black history

February was Black History Month. Throughout the United States, people celebrate the accomplishments of scientists, teachers, inventors, and other professional blacks. Only one month (the shortest month) of recognition for over four centuries of achievements. Is this really enough time to showcase the contributions of the African-Americans? In the 28/29 days, are all of the contributing black Americans acknowledged?

The answer to both of these questions is "NO!" Hundreds of black achievers remain unknown because in the short time slot allotted for black history education, teachers feel that they must teach about the famous names: Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Harriet Tubman, Fredrick Douglass, etc. Due to the pressure to inform students before the 28 days are up, only the most prominent black Americans are recognized.

For example, do you know who Garret A. Morgan is? I didn't think so. He was an inventor who made two of the most important modern conventions. The traffic light and gas mask were both the ingenious creation of this black man. Without the aide of another black man, you would only be able to read this article by sunlight. Lewis H. Latimer helped Edison in his invention of the light bulb, but you've probably never heard his name either.

Black history recognition was originally only given a week, so clearly it has come a long way. But just as that week evolved into a month, the month must somehow evolve into a year. All year long students should be taught about the achievements of black Americans just as they are taught that Columbus discovered America and George Washington was the first president of the United States. As Mrs. Patricia Brown, the Cohasset METCO coordinator, stated, black history education "should be infiltrated through English, Social Studies, Science and all the other subjects. It seems as if society is trying to cram all of our achievements into one short period."

Upon proposing that black accomplishments should be recognized throughout the year, I am not saying that Black History Month should immediately be eliminated. For now it is the only hope students have for learning about the other part of history. Ultimately, though, we should be working toward a combination of the two different histories (black and white) so that courageous soldiers such as Sgt. William Carney, who was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for his bravery in the Civil War, can be acknowledged in the country he jeopardized his life for!

Let's make the spin doctors heads spin

What's a spin doctor?

You might think he's the Maytag repairman, Paul Wylie going for the gold or Roger Clemens blazing in his fastballs.

No, sir.

Spin doctors make a pitch but they don't use stitched rawhide.

They are political pundits who put a spin on the words, deeds and votes of their candidates.

They'll tell you their candidate won even though he got fewer votes than another candidate.

They'll tell you the voters are sending a message about draft deferment, marital infidelity or media intrusion on privacy.

They'll talk about comebacks, native sons and lost momentum.

They'll poll you to death with frontrunners, backlashes and side issues.

They'll talk about the sunbelt vote, the rust belt vote and the Bubba vote.

We are in a serious recession or depression—whichever way you look at it.

The difference between a recession and depression is whether you have a job or not.

If you have a job it's a recession.

If you don't have a job it's a depression.

Because of how deeply the faltering economy has cut, this just might be the most important primary since the presidential preference was introduced 40 years ago.

In 1952 the primary changed.

For the first time voters could vote for the candidate they wanted to see become their party standard bearer.

Before this time, voters simply elected delegates to their party's national convention, state committees and town committees.

The Democrats have nine choices. There are five candidates who have campaigned fiercely—Tsongas, Clinton, Kerrey, Brown and Harkins.

And there are four others on the Democratic ballot—Nader, LaRouche, Agran and McCarthy.

The Republicans have three candidates—Bush, Buchanan and Duke.

There is also an Independent Voter party ballot with eight candidates. (One is Bo Gritz who some say is the subject of the Rambo movies.)

This Independent Voter party may confuse those who are used to calling themselves "independents," but are actually unenrolled.

At the polls, unenrolled voters have to ask for a party ballot. They immediately become enrolled in that party. After voting they can fill out a card and become unenrolled again.

Whatever ballot a voter chooses, there certainly are clear choices among the candidates.

The spin doctors will have a field day next Wednesday when they try to tell us how to interpret the results of Super Tuesday.

Let's make the spin doctors' heads spin.

Let's not send any messages.

Let's just vote for the person we think will make the best president of the United States.

Candidates policy

No candidates are endorsed by the Mariner Newspapers and no preferential treatment is offered any candidate seeking public office.

Candidates' Corner

The Mariner will publish a column called Candidates' Corner for candidates to make statements pertinent to the election. Candidates' Corner will end two weeks before the election.

Candidates' Corner is open to all candidates for all town boards. The rules are:

1. Candidate statements must be brief - not more than one typed page, double-spaced. Statements will be cut by editors if they are too long.

2. Statements must be typed or legibly written and include the candidate's name and telephone number for verification. They should be clearly marked to the attention of Candidates' Corner.

3. Statements must be submitted by the deadline of Monday noon for publication that week.

4. Statements should be used as a forum to address issues, not to attack personalities. The newspaper reserves the right to edit any material deemed libelous or tasteless.

5. Candidates' Corner will be published on a space-available basis. Priority will be given to those candidates in contested races. However, we will run all statements from candidates in a specific contest, or none at all. No more than one statement per candidate will be published each week.

Letters

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates during the campaign.

The Mariner will publish other letters on campaign issues but all politically-oriented letters will be cut off two weeks before the election.

Candidate announcements

Major races such as selectmen, school committee and other contested campaigns will be covered by the paper's editorial staff.

After the nomination deadline is past, the newspaper will publish a general overview of the upcoming election and the candidates.

Candidates for contested offices are welcome to submit a release announcing their candidacy until Monday, March 16, which is the deadline for the board of registrars submitting all nomination papers to the town clerk.

News coverage

Any event throughout the campaign which is deemed to be newsworthy will be handled by the editorial staff. The Mariner will strive to be evenhanded and fair to all candidates in the news coverage it provides prior to the election.

In the week prior to the election, the Mariner will publish Candidate Profiles - brief biographies about the candidates running for major offices, including selectmen and school committee.

These biographies will include a photo of each candidate. If the candidate has a suitable glossy, he or she may submit that for publication. Otherwise candidates should contact the Mariner to arrange to have a photo taken by a member of the staff. That photo will be for the exclusive use of the Mariner.

Candidates are also encouraged to advertise their campaign in this newspaper. For more information about our advertising rates, please contact Judy Almeida at 1-800-649-6661 or 837-3500 .

The choice is 'None of the Above'

By Mary Curran
Mariner staff

To divert myself from local troubles, I spend a lot of time reading about state and federal government woes. Some of us are just plain junkies, I guess.

The more I read of potential presidential candidates, the more disgruntled I get. Call me aberrant, but I don't see Mario Cuomo as the answer to the Democratic party's, or anyone else's, prayers, and don't really care about Bill Clinton's sex life or Paul Tsongas' lack of charisma.

I was giving up hope.

But at a recent lecture given by E.J. Dionne, author of Why Americans Hate Politics, I learned there is a way to avoid lackluster, hackneyed candidates and their less-than-inspirational rhetoric.

The answer is in the U.S.S.R.

That's right folks, bless their Bolshevik hearts and cynicism, the Russians have come up with an unorthodox approach to western democracy.

Maybe they were just fed up with party types.

Maybe they read American papers. I suppose Tass has a field day with some of the more colorful American elections.

I'd love to see what they wrote about Louisiana's foray last fall into the electoral equivalent of theatre of the absurd.

But, I digress.

Maybe they really do consume all that vodka as they sit and discuss politics.

Maybe they just have a wonderful sense of humor.

Whatever the reason, in the U.S.S.R., if you don't like the candidates on the ballot, you just cross out their names and write, "None of the Above," Dionne said.

If enough people refuse to cast a vote for the ballot candidates, the party has to come up with others the voters may find acceptable.

Brilliant in its simplicity, eh?

Libertarians will love the concept. I don't know how it works in the U.S.S.R., but I'm willing to bet in the United States it would guarantee less government.

It's hard to govern when there's no one at the helm (forgive me, Jesse).

It boggles the mind to consider what the course of U.S. history would have been if we had only adopted the Russian approach.

Nixon, Regan, Bush, Helms — ah the list could go on forever — may never have made it. In Massachusetts we might have missed Furcolo, Kevin White, Weld, Silber, Clapprood. Be still my heart.

And there we were in the '60s, chanting, "Power to the People," calling for revolution. What a waste.

Who knew four little words could have straightened it all out.

If the party machinery and our legislators won't change the rules regarding candidates (a likely guess), I suggest we resort to petitions in all 50 states.

"None of the Above" will allow us to cast a vote rather than leave blank after blank on our ballots.

And, from a reporter's perspective, it should make elections a real hoot to cover. The best story, of course, would be the one about the power-hungry pol who would actually change his name to None of the Above.

So, voters, remember you have nothing to lose but the worst of your candidates.

Practice glasnost. Break out the vodka and cast your ballots for "None of the Above."

Ken Wilcox vies for school committee

Ken Wilcox has announced his candidacy for a three year term on the Cohasset School Committee.

His experience spans both business and academic communities. He has lived in Cohasset for ten years.

Wilcox began his teaching career as a science and mathematics teacher for grades 4 through 8 at St. Francis of Assisi Elementary and Middle School in Flint, Michigan. He later received a M.A. and a Ph.D. in German Studies from Ohio State University. Wilcox taught for two years at Indiana University as a Visiting Assistant Professor, and for two years at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill as an Assistant Professor. Both assignments included the training and evaluating of 35 to 40 teaching assistants.

At Indiana University, Wilcox was writing course material that came to the attention of Random House Publishing. This resulted in a text book writing contract. Wilcox has written five textbooks and a number of articles on teaching.

In 1983, Wilcox received an M.B.A. from Harvard University. Since then, he has worked as a commercial banker specializing in early stage high technology companies. He is a Senior Vice President of the Silicon Valley Bank of California in their Wellesley office.

Wilcox has served on the Cohasset Garage Study Committee and on the Capital Budget Committee. He is also a former treasurer at First Parish Church and chairman of its Financial Planning Committee.

Wilcox is married and has two children. One child is a first grader at the Joseph Osgood School; his other child is in pre-school.

John McNabb urges accountability

John J. McNabb, Jr., candidate for Selectman, urged better accountability for legal costs for Special and Assistant Town Counsels.

"Town legal costs are out of control," said McNabb. "There is no annual reporting of the status or costs of town legal cases. In many cases, legal fees from special town counsels are paid by the Selectmen without any reporting of what services were performed."

"This article is not directed at the town counsel's office, but only at special and assistant town counsels," said McNabb.

"Also," said McNabb, "one cannot find in the town report any complete list of special town counsels for various town boards and committees."

"How much do we spend on legal costs for special town counsels? Undoubtedly, it is in the tens of thousands of dollars a year. The Town Report does not report this," said McNabb.

"I have proposed a warrant article for the April 4th Annual Town Meeting to better control town legal costs and to tell the people of Cohasset about what tax dollars are being used for legal costs."

"My article," said McNabb, "would require annual reporting in the Town Report of the status and costs of all pending legal cases. The article would require annual reappointment of special and assistant town counsels, and only if the counsel provides a written report."

"Finally," said McNabb, "the article would prohibit the payment of a bill for legal costs unless a report was provided about what legal services would be provided."

"I urge Cohasset voters to support this article at the April 4 Annual Town Meeting," said McNabb. "Also, I respectfully ask for the support of all Cohasset voters in my campaign for selectman at the April 11 Town Election."

Candidates' night to be held by Chamber

Mark March 10 on your calendar. That is the date for this year's Chamber of Commerce's Candidates' Night, the only opportunity most of us will have to see the candidates face to face and hear their opinions on issues concerning the town.

All candidates for office in this year's election will be invited to take part that night at the art center. The public is invited to ask questions and/or listen to the candidates' positions. Coffee is at 7:30 p.m., and the program begins at 8 p.m.

At their last meeting, the Chamber's Board of Directors voted to make donations to the following groups or activities: The Teen Depot (new teen center); Cohasset FISH; Cohasset Recreation Department (for the Easter Egg Hunt); Harborfest (parade); Drug Free Weekend Committee (for 1993); Cohasset Rotary Red Book (the Chamber pays for the full page detailing Cohasset Churches and religious services); and the Cohasset Police Association.

This last donation is for their drive to purchase new semi-automatic weapons for the officers. At present, the men and women who are asked to protect your property and personal safety are outfitted with sidearms that are ludicrously out of date. Any contribution that you, as a business, can make to the fund drive can only serve to help our police officers protect and serve you better.

Here comes Mariner's Max

Max is coming! Max is coming! Max is coming!

So are we talking your Uncle Max, your golden retriever Max or your new baby nephew Max?

None of the above. We're talking a new city-look country-conscious supplement which will be inserted monthly in Mariner newspapers. We're starting experimentally small (like Norwell, Cohasset, Hingham, Scituate, Marshfield and Hanover).

Max will cover the local social scene, in a column (MAX SCENE), written by MAXINE, an absolutely outrageous columnist. It will be loaded with photographs of you at your fundraisers, your house parties, dances, benefits, and balls. Max is your own South Shore Vogue. Beauty tips, fashion trends, and health information are the meat of our beat.

Max includes video reviews, book reviews, answers to commonly asked psychological questions, touching essays and a monthly philosophical question that you as subscribers will answer. It's a woman's magazine. It's for women, about women, by women. But the truth is, it's about humans and the human condition which includes our brothers, our men friends, our fathers, our husbands, our sons.

Max is for You and we can't wait.

If you have an event, a party a social happening that you would like written about in our April premiere issue, call 837-3500 Ext. 222 or write to: The Mariner, 165 Enterprise Dr., Marshfield, MA 02050, Attention MAXINE.

Music and spirits in concert

Chamber Music at Broad Cove House will present the third in a series of three evenings of Fine Music and Elegant Wines Friday, March 13 at 8 p.m.

The concert, sponsored by the Broad Cove Chorale and Unicorn Singers, will feature the "two-man big band" Guy Van Duser and Billy Novick in a program of jazz favorites from the swing era played on acoustic guitar and clarinet.

This will be the third time the eclectic and captivating duo has performed at Broad Cove House since 1977.

Together, Guy and Billy have toured throughout North America and Europe and have appeared frequently on "A Prairie Home Companion." Billy is also a member of the internationally-acclaimed New Black Eagle Jazz Band.

A reception featuring a selection of wines will follow the concert. A few seats remain for this sure sell-out, and are available at $16 until Wednesday, March 11 (or until concert is sold out) at Noble's Camera (Hingham Sq.) or by mailing a check (payable to Broad Cove Chorale) to 66 Lincoln Street, Hingham.

For further information call 749-7890 or 749-6561 (message machine). No tickets will be available at the door for this concert.

Workshop for parents

It's never too early for parents to begin talking with their children about illegal drug use, and modeling behaviors that reinforce the message.

That's why the Social Service League of Cohasset is sponsoring a training workshop for parents with children in grades 4 through 8 March 11 and March 18 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. in the living room of the First Parish Unitarian Parish House.

Patricia Carleton, LICSW, M.S.W., M:Ed., A.B. will present the seminar that is based on the award winning program "Drug Free Kids."

The program shows examples of effective and ineffective methods of handling these situations. It also gives examples of good parenting skills for the teenage years over and beyond the drug and alcohol issues.

You will have a chance to learn, practice and apply these skills during the seminar. There is no fee.

If you would like more information call the Social Service League of Cohasset at 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Lawyers on cable show

Thursday, March 5, host Wigmore Pierson's guest on "Pierson to Person" will be a panel of lawyers discussing the state of the legal profession in the United States today and "Why does everyone hate lawyers."

The panelists are Prof. Richard M. Perlmutter, law professor at Suffolk University Law School and an arbitrator for the American Arbitration Association; Assistant Attorney General Dwight Golann who is Chief, Government Bureau in the Mass. Dept. of the Attorney General; Mitchel S. Ross, Partner in the Boston law firm of Bernkopf, Goodman & Baseman, and Head of the Litigation Department; and Prof. Victoria J. Dodd, law professor at Suffolk University Law School specializing in Civil Procedures and Constitution Law.

The Pierson to Person show is broadcast live each Thursday from 8 to 9 p.m., from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision.

The public is invited to be part of the studio audience each Thursday evening and those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road by 7:30 p.m.

For further information about upcoming guests and additional show information, contact the Pierson show's executive producer, Robert Belliveau at 545-0643.

Update on spring soccer

With the spring soccer season just a month away, the Cohasset Soccer Club is in the process of completing the various pre-season requirements.

Registrations are still being accepted for girls and boys in kindergarten, first and second grades. Also, the club is asking that families of last year's players search their homes for uniforms that were not turned in. There are still approximately twenty-five sets (Cannon Blue & White vertical striped top and Cannon Blue pants) that are missing.

The replacement cost for each set is $30. Amnesty will be given to any parent/family/player who locates and returns a uniform.

If anyone would like to volunteer a few hours each weekend to help the Club by coaching a team, the following teams still need a coach: girls under 8; girls under 10; girls under 16; and boys under 8.

Contact Larry Schultz at 383-0597 if you would like to register a child, have any questions or would like to volunteer for one of the teams mentioned above.

Newcomers host events

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers Club is sponsoring the following events: Monday, March 9 at 7 p.m., Ladies Night Out. News from First Parish

Rev. Edward T. Atkinson, Minister
Parish House (617) 383-1100
23 North Main Street
FROM THE MINISTER'S STUDY:

Someone once defined a sermon as something a preacher would travel across the country to deliver, but would not cross the street to hear. I strongly disagree. Much as I enjoy preaching, one of the most troubling aspects of ministry for me has been that as a worship leader I so rarely have the opportunity to attend a service as a member of the congregation. Thanks to Andrea Greenwood's visit this past Sunday, I was afforded the rare pleasure of sharing a service from the perspective of the pew.

I have always loved to go to church and for the life of me I cannot understand why more people do not feel the same way. The simple vision of the Meeting House, the lovely flowers displayed on the communion table often highlighted against the honey colored pulpit by the sun streaming through the south windows, the stately music of the organ calling us to meditation and prayer, the joining of voices in song, the inspirational words read or spoken placing one's life in the perspective of the transcendent, the sharing of our life stories through the lighting of candles, the greeting of friends old and new: there is a wealth of spiritual growth and enjoyment to be shared each Sunday morning.

But his past Sunday added a new dimension to my love of church attendance, as for the first time ever I decided to try singing with the choir. I do not read music, but by standing close to those who do it was not difficult to pick up the parts, and joining with a group of people who especially enjoy singing gave an extra measure of pleasure to the morning. If you like to sing you should give it a try!

Attendance last Sunday: 62 in the Meeting House; 15 children, seven adults in the Parish House.

PARISH NEWS

The Outreach Committee will meet Tuesday, March 10 at 7:30 p.m. in the Parish House.

Women's Book Group 2...will meet next on March 11 at 7:45 p.m. at the home of Priscilla Tebbetts. The comic novel Fried Green Tomatoes at the Whistle Stop Cafe by Fannie Flagg will be discussed.

The Parish Committee will meet on Tuesday, March 17 at 7:30 p.m. in the Parish House.

The Lenten Manual Simple Pleasures will be in the mail at the end of this week. Depending on the vagaries of bulk-rate mail, you should receive it in time for Ash Wednesday and the beginning of Lent.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION NEWS:

This week we are very pleased to have Iri Bloomfield meeting with our seventh and eighth grades. The topic under discussion will be Darwin's Big Idea and Genesis: The Story of Creation. All of the members of this class have been notified by mail — we urge you to be here.

The Religious Education Committee has planned a talent show in late March — participation in this event is open to all members of the Parish.

Please reserve March 8 and plan to attend our annual Un-Birthday Party. It's a great way to dispel "the Februaries."

Please note: This Sunday all children beyond nursery age will go to the Meeting House for the first part of the service.

The Rev. E. Clifford Cutler, Rector

FROM THE RECTOR
Lent Means Knowing God and Knowing Ourselves

There are many questions about what importance Lent has in our life as a community. Is it a glum time of self-disparagement and denial? If so we may wish to take a rain check and hop right to Easter, which in fact many of us do.

Lent is very different from this and so much more important. First of all, Lent is a time of acknowledging our humanness. Giving something up, or fasting on Ash Wednesday and Good Friday for instance, help to remind us that we have needs (a very basic one is for food). We are not self-sufficient. For those times we forget our limitations, in Lent we are penitent. We acknowledge our need to know more. So traditionally a course of study is provided in Lent, this year — a study of the Gospel of Luke.

A four session class will be held for primary age children (grades 1 to 3) on the meaning of communion, beginning Sunday, March 8 through March 29 from 3 to 3:30 p.m.

An additional class for older children, intermediate age (grades 4-6) on the meaning of communion will be held on the same Sundays from 4 to 4:45 p.m.

For children who have not yet received communion, this class will give helpful background and understanding. Easter would then be a very special time to begin to receive that sacrament. Even children who currently receive communion would be helped by this course.

Cohasset High actors win awards as play advances

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Cohasset High's "Graceland" came out on top Saturday at the annual Massachusetts High School Drama Festival, advancing to the semi-finals in two weeks.

The preliminary round held at Scituate High featured one-act plays from seven schools. Nearly 100 schools competed at different sites statewide.

Cohasset actors Alison Welz and Erin McAllister also won individual acting awards.

The only negative of the day was that just three schools at each preliminary round advanced to the semi-finals March 14 to be held at a variety of sites across the state.

Other advancing schools are Hingham — "A Midsummer Night's Dream"; and Weymouth — "Dolls."

"Graceland," a two-woman play, surrounds the rivalry between two Elvis fans — Bev Davies and Rootie Mallert — who both want to be the first inside their idol's mansion.

Saturday's competition was the 15th consecutive preliminary win for Cohasset.

Drama director Ron Emmons gave the event high marks.

"It's a great way to have my kids see more theater and to show people where we are — to get criticism and grow," he said.

STAFF/CREW

The Cohasset staff included: assistant to the director, Corrina Minnar; technical director, Jason Hunter, assistant to the technical director, Tracy Hyde; stage manager, Katie O'Sullivan, Assistant stage mangers, Rebecca Kirk and Carole Smith; art director, Colleen Lucas; prop construction, Nicole Haefner, Katie Brennock, and Christine McMackin; and Elvisologist, Jenna Emmons.

The crew consisted of Jemilah Afshar, Katherine Barrett, Nicole Bieryla, Cecilia Candia, Caitlin Connolly, Jill Day, Elizabeth Deveney, Emily D'urso, Kendra Gray, Meredith Hansen, Erin Lennon, Mary Ellen Rayment, Alli Ritz, Holly Russell, and Amy Sylvia.

Judging criteria included acting (characterization, vocalization, interaction and physical skills); directing (staging, blocking, tempo, and interpretation); technical (lighting, sound, make-up, costuming, and set); and total impact.

Peter Guild, spokesman for the drama guild, said the purpose of the festival is to encourage and promote drama and acting in high schools. The festival, in its 61st year, is open to any high school, public or private, he said.

Winners of the semi-final round March 14 go on to the finals. And those winners will participate in the New England Drama Festival.

Ground rules included keeping the performance to 40 minutes or less. Five minutes were allowed to set up; and five to strike the set. Going over by even one second would result in immediate disqualification.

Drama clubs from Hanover, Rockland, and Scituate also competed at Scituate High Saturday.

Introducing a CD for optimists that even pessimists will love.

5.43% Effective Annual Yield | 5.30% Annual Rate

THE WIN|WIN CD.

The rate goes up as the economy improves but never goes lower than your opening rate. Do you see a great CD rate today or a CD rate that will be even higher in the future? Either way you win. Bank of Boston's Win/Win CD is the only CD that starts out with a good rate and adjusts itself every three months to stay ahead of select U.S. Treasury bills.* Yet it never goes lower than your opening rate. And unlike mutual funds this two-year CD is FDIC insured. But this offer won't be around forever. So whether your glass is half empty or half full, the Win/Win CD is a smart investment now. And the best is yet to come.

BANK OF BOSTON

Put our strength to work for you.

Member FDIC.

Initial offering rate subject to change at any time. After a CD is opened, the interest rate may change on May 7, 1992 and on the fifth business day of every third month afterwards, but will never be less than the initial rate.
*Rate adjustments will be determined by adding a "margin" of one-half of one percentage point to an "index" equal to the average rate for the weekly auction of short-term (13 week) U.S. government bills sold at a discount from face value. Interest is compounded monthly if you maintain certain accounts and have a combined banking statement, otherwise quarterly. Offer applies to personal, commercial and IRA CDs of $1,000 or more. Maximum $100,000 deposit for commercial CDs. Annual yield assumes that principal and interest remain on deposit for at least one year at initial rate. Offer may be withdrawn at any time. Substantial penalty for early withdrawal. Member FDIC.

Science Center offers early spring programs

Join Joni Benn (9 to 11 a.m.) or Jini Foster (1 to 3 p.m.), Wednesdays, March 11, 18, 25, April 1, for Kindergarten (members/$40; non-members/$55, per four-week session). Trail walks, stories and crafts teach children about their local wildlife and habitats, how animals find food, and how they keep warm during the long winter. Children must have turned 5 by Jan. 1.

WEDNESDAY WALKS

Join a Science Center naturalist every Wednesday, 9:30 a.m. to noon (members/free; non-members/$5), for a leisurely walk along the Center's trails, a visit to nearby Jacobs Pond, or exploration of other beautiful South Shore community areas. These informal walks are perfect for all ages. Call ahead to determine destination.

WEEKEND NATURAL HISTORY PROGRAMS

Saturdays, 10 to 10:30 a.m., and Sundays, 1 to 1:30 p.m. (members/free; non-members/$2), join Science Center naturalists for "drop-in" natural history programs. The whole family will enjoy nature walks, stories, and crafts. Face painting follows each program. Call ahead to determine program topic. Pre-registration is not required.

This spring you can explore the wildlife on the South Shore, the mountains and rivers of Peru and the tropical splendor of the Everglades. Adventure awaits you at the South Shore Natural Science Center!

ADULT AND FAMILY PROGRAMS

Wednesday, March 11:

Magic Carpet Luncheon – The Mountains and Rivers of Peru, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. (members/$8; non-members/$11) Our own globetrotter, Duncan Donahue, will be your tour guide. Visit the breathtaking Altiplano (the southeast region of Peru bordering Bolivia); see entire villages floating on Lake Titicaca, explore the historic Inca ruins at Machu Picchu; and float down the western estuaries of the Amazon. Amazing slides and delightful, informative commentary followed by a regional luncheon.

Saturday, March 14

Rockland Trust robbed at gun point

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

A lone gunman is still at large after robbing a local bank of more than $3,000 in cash last week, police said.

A clean-cut, blue-eyed, white man robbed the Rockland Trust Co. in Cushing Plaza, Sgt. Brian W. Noonan said.

The robbery was the first armed, bank robbery in Cohasset in at least ten years, Noonan said.

'You wouldn't expect it in Cohasset"
Douglas H. Philipsen
Rockland Trust president

He said the alarm rang at the station at 2:06 p.m. Friday, March 6. Cohasset police immediately dispatched two, marked cruisers to the scene.

"As soon as he (robber) ran out the door, they (bank personnel) also called," Noonan said.

The man ran from the bank toward Walgreen's.

Noonan said police have a few leads but "are not ready to drag anyone in yet" regarding the robbery.

Although the local bank personnel have received training about what to do in the case of a robbery, the location was a surprise.

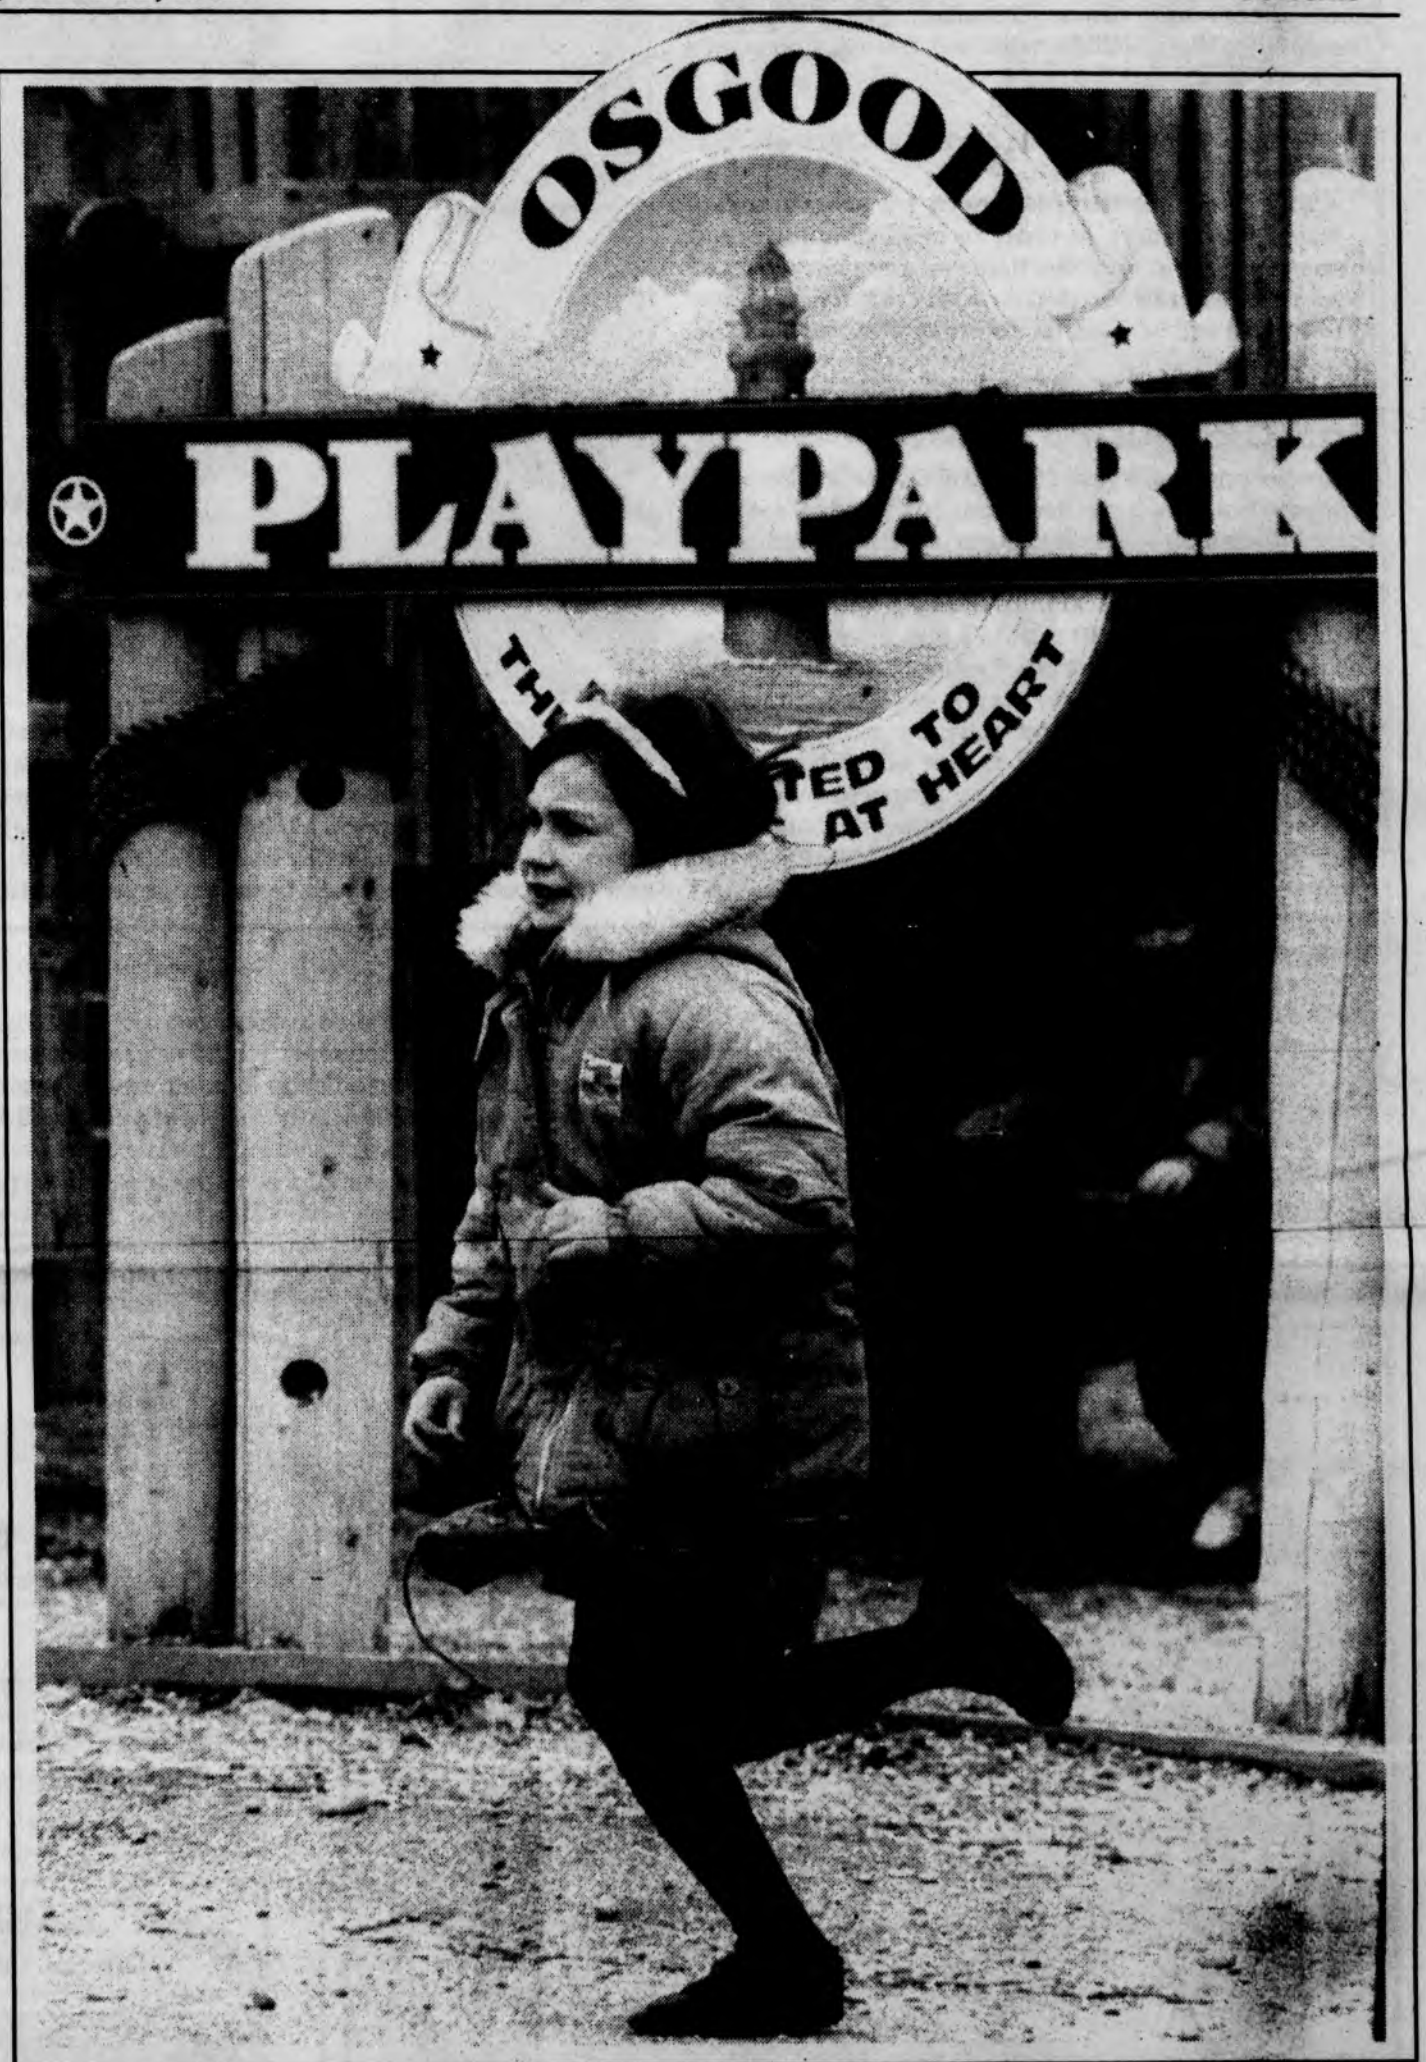
Citizens lobby to stop CHL growth

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff



It's back to the drawing board for the proposed expansion of the Cohasset Heights landfill off Route 3A.

And S.A.F.E., a grass roots' organization opposed to the landfill, is calling the setback for C.H.L. a victory for the little guy.

"Getting people concerned is extremely important. Only through citizen participation can this kind of landfill be stopped," said S.A.F.E. president, Alix White.

About 55 citizens commented on the C.H.L. report. Eighteen commented a year ago when Barry submitted an the initial draft to the state's Executive Office of Environmental Affairs.

Chilean teacher shocked: Cohasset kids 'like' school

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Carlos Salas Lind is shocked by American students—they LIKE school.

At least, he adds, the students he's been teaching at Cohasset High School for the past six weeks.

mariner visits

"They are very dedicated and very well-mannered — I didn't expect that."

The Chilean is one of 44 Latin American teachers placed in United States schools this year as part of the American Field Service (A.F.S.) teacher exchange.

AFS, which established itself as a world renown sponsor of international student exchanges, expanded its program about 10 years ago to include teachers. Lind considers himself lucky to be one of the few chosen for the newer program.

Lind, 27, is normally teaching English at a private school in Iquiqui, a city on the northern coast of Chile. His U.S. teaching experiences give him a valuable comparative view.

"The main thing I want to stress is that the students here like school. In Chile they try to escape it."

He offers several theories for the disparity.

In Chile, the average high school student studies 12 subjects per semester, more than double the course load of most U. S. students. The classes are just as rigorous as those in the U.S. though, Lind adds, so many students feel overwhelmed.

The school system in Chile evolved under the military dictatorship of General Augusto Pinochet and is centralized. Schools must follow a plan for national standards, leaving teachers and students with little room to vary from established procedures.

The rigidness contributes to students' disenchantment with school, according to Lind.

Another reason many Chilean teenagers try to avoid classes is simply because "there are so many other things for them to do outside of school."

Because of the fewer resources in Chile, the schools are regional and nearly always located in a large city. The city offers many temptations to the teenagers, he said.

"Where would a student in Cohasset go in the winter?"

However, the Chilean school system includes a three-

Information night set

The Chamber of Commerce cordially invites all parents to attend Town Candidates Night, 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, March 17, at the South Shore Art Center.

Please come to hear all candidates for town offices, including school committee candidates Ralph Kidder, Ken Wilcox, and Owen O'Malley. The Chamber's Candidates Night will be televised live on Cohasset's Cable TV channel 3.

Important upcoming dates:

• Town meeting, Saturday, April 4, at Cohasset High School

• Town election, Saturday, April 11, at town hall.

Voter registration: in order to be eligible to vote at town meeting or in town election, you must be registered to vote by March 20. On that date, the town clerk's office at town hall will be open for voter registration 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Tax deadlines listed

The second-half Fiscal 1992 Real Estate and Personal Property tax bills have been mailed. the due date for these bills is May 1. The Treasurer-Collector's office will be open Wednesday, April 29 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Thursday, April 30 from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Friday, May 1 from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Postmark dates will not be accepted. Payment must be received in the Collector's office by 1 p.m. May 1. No Exceptions!

Elizabeth Ripley, treasurer-collector, said, "Anumber of bills have been returned to our office because of improper mailing addresses. Any property owner who has not received a tax bill should contact the Collector's office at the Town Hall, 383-9900, ext. 113. Failure to receive a tax bill does not waive payment of the tax and does not excuse the homeowner from interest charges on payments received after the due date.

"The first commitment of Motor Vehicle bills for 1992 was mailed on Feb. 12. These bills are due and payable upon receipt, payable without penalty by March 13. If you received a bill and the vehicle listed on that bill has been sold, stolen, traded, declared a total loss or registered out of state, you must contact the Board of Assessors at 383-9900, ext. 124 and inquire about an abatement.

"The 1992 mooring bills have also been mailed and are due no later than 4:30 p.m. April 1. Failure to pay the mooring fee will result in the loss of mooring privileges."

Payments may be mailed to the Treasurer-Collector's Office, P.O. Box 296, Cohasset, 02025 or paid in person at the Town Hall. Our office is located on the second floor of the new addition. Any early payments will be appreciated. By mailing these bills earlier than usual we hope to avoid the costly procedure of borrowing in anticipation of tax revenue. Once again the Senior Center sent volunteers to help our office prepare all of these bills for early mailing. Their help is greatly appreciated, Ripley said.

Marshfield Fire Cpt. Gerard Cashman waits by an overturned delivery truck which tipped near the Route 3A bridge in Marshfield 11 a.m. Friday. The truck, driven by Randy L. Salvador, 26, of Cohasset, apparently suffered from transmission problems. Unable to stop the vehicle, Salvador swerved from bank to bank to avoid colliding with cars stopped at a traffic light on the bridge. The accident closed the state road for almost two hours. Salvador was cited for driving the truck while improperly licensed. Marshfield police and the state police truck team are investigating the accident.

St. Stephen's says thanks

W. Robert Nast, property committee chairman of St. Stephen's Church, thanked selectmen for their recent approval of the addition of a street light adjacent to the church Parish House on Highland Avenue.

"The installation is much appreciated and hopefully will provide the necessary illumination to provide a safer access to the rear of the church building," Nast said.

CHL plan denied . . .

White said citizens with expertise in areas like civil engineering and hydrogeology wrote "very solid letters" against the proposed expansion.

"And some letters were (personal) testimony from those who live with the odor and traffic," she added.

Town boards in Cohasset and Hingham and a variety of public interest groups also commented on the report.

The E.O.E.A. rejected the supplemental draft of the environmental impact report (SDEIR) last week. In a ten-page decision, Susan Tierney, secretary of the E.O.E.A., said the project "does not adequately and properly comply" with the state's environmental policy act.

Paul Barry, landfill owner, declined to comment on the report's rejection.

Barry is seeking approval for a 14.2 acre expansion of the landfill and approval to accept maximum refuse of 500 tons per day.

Michael Sullivan of the board of health said the rejection is a "significant setback."

"I don't think C.H.L. really believed Tierney wanted the detail she does. It will be expensive to meet her requests," Sullivan noted.

Sullivan also said the "big thing is that so many citizens came together and spent a lot of time and hours" writing letters.

He said the people at the E.O.E.A. aren't in the landfill business and don't know everything.

"They can use all that information to educate themselves. It gives them more information to effectively rebut the issue," he said.

White said despite the setback for C.H.L., more citizen input is needed.

"It's like getting an 'F' on your homework," White said about the rejection of the C.H.L. report. "You still get it back and can do it again."

White said that landfill currently can accept only 'demolition' debris, which can include "anything in a dumpster by a work site," such as paint and batteries.

Barry's proposed expansion would accept municipal solid wastes, industrial solid wastes, commercial solid wastes, and construction and demolition wastes.

'It is like getting an F on your homework. You still get it back and can do it again.'

Alix White
S.A.F.E. president

S.A.F.E. submitted two warrant articles about the landfill for town meeting next month.

One would require C.H.L. to provide sufficient financial security to prevent contaminated landfill leachate — which White described as "liquid garbage" released through the ground — from polluting Lily Pond, the town's water supply. And the other would limit the landfill to demolition waste.

Sullivan said C.H.L. does have bonds in place on the existing facility to protect the town from future problems if the site were abandoned and the town was left with closing and maintaining the landfill. The amounts of the bonds were not readily available.

He said the health board was doing some analysis and extrapolating some figures to get the bottom line.

The EOEA report is available at the library.

Chilean teacher compares schools . . .

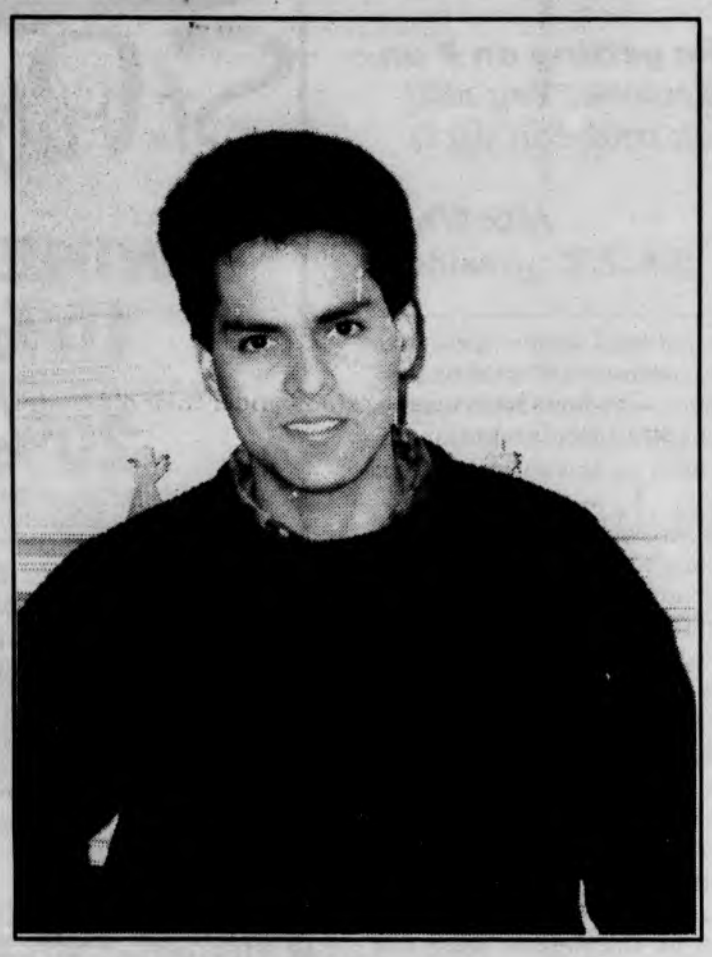
hour break as part of its established procedures, a practice no doubt many U.S. students would like to see adopted.

Students in Chile attend school from 8 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., and then go home for a heavy meal and a siesta. They return to school at 4:30 p.m. for another two hours of instruction.

'Students concentrate more on their studies when they aren't conscious of what someone else is wearing, or what they are going to wear.'



Chilean teacher on why uniforms in school are a good idea.

Another favorable aspect of the Chilean system noted by Lind was the use of uniforms.

"Students concentrate more on their studies when they aren't conscious of what someone else is wearing, or what they are going to wear to school."

Uniforms hide class distinctions, he said, which are prominent in Chile. Even public schools require they be worn.

According to Lind, teachers in Chile have similar complaints to those of their U.S. counterparts: little pay, much work and diminished authority.

In Chile, however, a teacher's salary is so small many work at two schools. "It is not uncommon for a teacher to put in 50 hours of classroom teaching between the two jobs."

A teacher in Chile earns approximately $250 a month, he said.

The goals of both systems are the same, but the resources in Chile are fewer and "therein lies the difference."

Although the Chilean schools are not funded as liberally, the funds are dispersed more equitably.

Unlike the U.S. system, where local property taxes pay for local schools, educational funding in Chile is from the federal government. Public schools are the same quality, whether they are located in an affluent community or a poor community, Lind says.

Lind will be in Cohasset, with the Jenkins family of Jerusalem Road, until the summer.

Lee Jenkins said Lind is about the twentieth foreigner on an exchange she has hosted in her home.

"He's been a fantastic asset to the community and the school system."

And to the family.

Lind even taught Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins, (both named Lee) and their daughters Jessica and Rebecca how to perform traditional folk dances from Chile.

Teachers sign two-year pact

Teachers will take less to save more, school officials say.

The 93-member teachers' union ratified a two-year contract last week giving them an average raise of 1-1/2 percent a year.

The contract, which is retroactive to September, provides for no raises this year and about a three-percent raise next year.

Superintendent Stephen Hart said teachers understand that taking less could save jobs.

"Teachers realized that by accepting a modest increase, they hope teaching positions will remain in the budget," he said.

Teachers' union president Mary Babaian said the negotiating process was difficult for both sides.

"This is not viewed as the very best contract we've ever negotiated," Babaian said. "But everyone is aware in these times, it's perhaps the best we could do.

"I think the teachers are very good accepting no raise; they haven't complained. They've given 110 percent to the kids of Cohasset," she said.

Hart said he hoped the townspeople will support an override to help fund the proposed $5.8 million, FY'93 school budget, which is up about 3.3 percent over this year's budget.

He explained that the advisory committee determined that any increase over level-funding would require an override.

Teachers have been working under their old contract since September.

Now that he has 51 parking spaces, Cohasset Imports owner, Peter Capozzoli says the town won't hear from him again.

After a heated discussion led by Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle, selectmen approved Capozzoli's Class II (used car sales) license Monday.

The new license increases the number of cars allowed at the site from 20 to 51.

Laugelle was the sole member to vote against approval.

With the extra parking spaces, Capozzoli promised not to store any additional cars around town.

"I can assure you — you will not hear from me again relative to numbers. I will not store anywhere else," Capozzoli said

He had requested spaces for 60 cars.

But Selectman Martha K. Gjesteby presented a plan to the board trimming nine spaces from Capozzoli's plan. Gjesteby wanted to allow more room at the entrance to the parking lot and a larger fire lane around the building.

She also asked that there be no penalties imposed if Capozzoli should go over 51 cars because of cars temporarily parked at the site — such as a mail or delivery van.

Laugelle said he opposed the expansion because the business is in a residential area.

"If it was next door to you, how would you feel?" he asked.

Laugelle also charged that Capozzoli was storing cars illegally at other sites in town.

"He has cars where he's not supposed to," he said.

Capozzoli's attorney Christopher Pitt said the issue should not "be a political thing."

"You should not be punishing a guy who is unable to comply with an unreasonably low limit," he said.

The board discussed requiring Capozzoli to install railroad ties to delineate the entrance and exit but decided it would be unfair to add that provision to a license.

Instead, Capozzoli must provide some delineation — such as painted lines — to protect the entrance, egress and fire lanes, selectmen said.

Introducing a CD for optimists that even pessimists will love.

5.43% Effective Annual Yield | 5.30% Annual Rate

THE WIN|WIN CD.
The rate goes up as the economy improves but never goes lower than your opening rate. Do you see a great CD rate today or a CD rate that will be even higher in the future? Either way you win. Bank of Boston's Win/Win CD is the only CD that starts out with a good rate and adjusts itself every three months to stay ahead of select U.S. Treasury bills.* Yet it never goes lower than your opening rate. And unlike mutual funds this two-year CD is FDIC insured. But this offer won't be around forever. So whether your glass is half empty or half full, the Win/Win CD is a smart investment now. And the best is yet to come.

BANK OF BOSTON
Put our strength to work for you.

Member FDIC.

Initial offering rate subject to change at any time. After a CD is opened, the interest rate may change on May 7, 1992 and on the fifth business day of every third month afterwards, but will never be less than the initial rate.
*Rate adjustments will be determined by adding a "margin" of one-half of one percentage point to an "index" equal to the average rate for the weekly auction of short-term (13 week) U.S. government bills sold at a discount from face value. Interest is compounded monthly if you maintain certain accounts and have a combined banking statement, otherwise quarterly. Offer applies to personal, commercial and IRA CDs of $1,000 or more. Maximum $100,000 deposit for commercial CDs. Annual yield assumes that principal and interest remain on deposit for at least one year at initial rate. Offer may be withdrawn at any time. Substantial penalty for early withdrawal. Member FDIC.

Bank robber still at large . . .

Philipsen, president of Rockland Trust, said.

Noonan said a U.P.S. truck driver spotted the man run behind Walgreen's.

"We can only surmise that he had a car waiting on the other side of Walgreen's," Noonan said. "One officer thought he saw skid marks but no one saw the vehicle or anyone get in.

"We searched the wooded area (near Walgreen's)," Noonan added.

The subject is described as in his early 20's, 5 ft. 11 ins. tall, and medium weight. Police said he has short, brown hair with a little bit of wave at the sides.

The Rockland Trust Company was the scene of an armed robbery last week.

His eyes are big, blue and very noticeable. All witnesses spoke of this part of the subject's description, police said.

They also said the man was good looking and quiet.

Although he appeared to be nervous, the robber knew what he was doing, police said.

When handed "the bait" by a teller, the subject threw it back, Noonan said.

Police and Philipsen declined to describe "the bait" for security reasons.

The subject was wearing a faded, dungaree jacket with snap buttons, a dark-colored T-shirt, and a red, white, and blue baseball cap, police said.

The man held a small hand gun in his right hand, which was shaking. He demanded money at the first teller and then went down the line to tellers numbered two and three.

Noonan said the gun appeared to be a semi-automatic, possibly a 38 snub-nose revolver.

Noonan said the state police, FBI, and Boston police are assisting in the investigation. He said Cohasset police planned to meet with Weymouth police to see if there's any connection with a recent string of robberies in that town.

Noonan said finger prints were taken from the tellers' window area.

"Hopefully some prints will come through," he said. Noonan explained that the prints can be run through a computer to see if anything "pops up."

"And if we get a suspect later down the line, we can match them," Noonan said.

Police have released a composite of the bank robber compiled with an Identi-kit by the Hingham police. An artist is also drawing up a composite with more detail, Noonan said. The second composite will be available later this week.

Philipsen said he was "thankful no one got hurt."

"A guy walked in, he had a gun.

"He was just another one of these crazies, who knows what motivates him," Philipsen said.

Police released a composite of the man who robbed the Rockland Trust Company in Cushing Plaza, March 6. He's described as a white male in his early 20's; height 5 ft. 11 ins., weight 165 lbs. Police said he has brown hair and blue eyes and is clean cut. Please contact the Cohasset Police Dept. at 383-1212 if you have any information on this robbery.

around town

❑ Had a nice chat with Vera Infusino last week, and she wanted it shared by all. Vera's husband, Frank, was ill and had to use the ambulance to get to the hospital. Neither one will ever forget the kind, gentle and efficient manner in which Frank was treated, they say that the service was great.

They want to thank the Cohasset Firemen for all of their helpfulness. This is the fourth time they have had to use them and each has been memorable.

It is yet another tribute to our own ambulance in our own town taking care of our own people. Thanks from all of us, gentlemen.

❑ No one can believe Ken Coleman. As most know, he has "retired," into a life that most could not keep up with and at a pace that would stop most of us in our tracks.

Just try following this schedule (most of you sports-minded gents would love to!!). Ken spent the week at the Red Sox Old Timers Fantasy Camp with such players as Bob Stanley and Jerry Remo in attendance. There were 104 campers from 27 states, and you have to be at least 35 to attend. Everyone from every phase of life wants to go; and Ken reports that a great time is always had by all, from the players to the "campers."

When Ken returned from Florida, he went to Washington D.C. for a retirement party for John Simpson, who was the director of the Secret Service and past president of Interpole.

Ken was a guest speaker, as he knew John so well because of his Jimmy Fund work. Ken presented him with a plaque from the Jimmy Fund, and all were so pleased!

Then there was more Jimmy Fund work. This time Ken was the program host for the Greater Bostonians in Newburyport for the Jimmy Fund. He was on the Nick Manzello Sports Show in Worcester.

This past Saturday, Ken was at a baseball card show, with Jim Lonborg and Dalton Jones (the former Red Sox infielder who lives in Plymouth now). The show was held in Middleboro, and we'll bet it was a smashing success.

Whew, that's all while being retired, folks! Wonder what life was like for Ken when he was working!

❑ Did you know that "Hot" Sullivan just underwent knee replacement surgery? It was in early February, and from all reports he is doing great, and is now in therapy. Hope you are soon on your feet and running round the block faster than ever!!

❑ Seems like yesterday that Mark Lahive was a hero on the Cohasset Football field, now he has been named a senior legislative assistant to U. S. Rep. Dick Zimmer, R., New Jersey. Mark is Zimmer's legislative assistant on economic issues, and will now coordinate Zimmer's legislative activities. He will also work on environmental issues.

Mark is a 1985 CHS grad, and 1989 Middlebury College graduate. He is the son of Janet and Dave Lahive, and we know they are proud of him.

❑ Daffodil days is fast approaching...that's when all of the businesses, professional offices and individuals order daffodils for the American Cancer Society. The flowers are grown on the West Coast and purchased through the American Cancer Society as a fund-raiser. A lot of money is raised through this event. Support the places that have the daffodils on March 24 and 25.

❑ Hope that Ken Coleman had a great vacation in the warmth of the sun...a busy man like him certainly has earned it!

❑ Attention all of you runners!! The plans for the 16th Annual Roadrace By-the-Sea, sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club, is scheduled to start at 1 p.m. Sunday, April 5.

Roy Fitzsimmons and Peter Logan are at the helm again, and this year promises to be bigger and better than ever. The number of entrants is limited to the first 800, so you have to register early. There is a $10 entry fee, which will include T-shirts with race logos and local sponsors along with refreshments and prizes.

And, walkers aren't left out. This year there will be a 10k Walk, which will start at Sandy Beach and cover the same route as the runners and will begin at 10 a.m. There is a $10 fee also for the 10k Walk, with the same benefits.

The deadline for both to register is March 31. All of New England is aware of the event thanks to the fact it was in the New England Runners Magazine, so be sure to register early. And, remember that the proceeds go to the Rotary, who in turn contribute to all of the town charities and school scholarships...everyone benefits!

❑ You don't have to be Irish to love this one, the St. Patrick's Day dinner dance at the George H. Mealey Post that is!

They serve a wonderful dinner, corned beef with the works, and the Irish music promises to be grand. Dinner is at 7 p.m., dancing starts at 8 p.m. Tickets are $7 a person and can be bought from any member of the Legion or at the post. Call 383-9657 for more information.

❑ Remember a couple of weeks ago when we listed the "Wish List" for the Teen Center: We guess that everyone is in need these days...the Historical Society needs a color television set and a VCR in good working order for use in their "Living History Program." If you have one or both of these pieces of equipment which are in excess of your needs, they would be most grateful for the donation. We also hope that you know someone to call...Burtram Pratt is the President, T. Gerard Keating is first vice president, Martha E. Hurtig is second vice president, Gordon Flint is treasurer, Arlene Orr is assistant treasurer and Doris Flint is the secretary.

The board of directors consists of Bob James, Roger Porter, David Pottenger, John Hartshorne, Pat Murphy, John O'Toole, Glenn Pratt, Doug Peck, Penny Redfield, Noel Ripley, and Joyce Steele.

That's the Board of Directors and they are sure a hard-working group. Be sure to help them in other ways if you cannot help with their current wishes...

❑ One more note about the Historical Society, they have produced a number of video tapes on local subjects of interest that record various facets of Cohasset history. They include interviews with local persons recalling earlier days in the town, and a series of old Cohasset photos gleaned from the society's collection. Copies of the tapes have been made, and one is placed in a lending library.

For a $5 deposit they may be withdrawn for viewing, the program is available now.

❑ Congratulations go to Cohasset students this week! First we have to applaud Laura Slotnick, who won the New England Girls' 14-and-under tennis tournament played this past weekend in East Providence Rhode Island.

Laura defeated Amy McLure of Rehoboth, MA, in the finals, 6-4, 6-4. Yeah, Laura!

❑ And, how about Ray Jones and Nate Fiori! Both were in the States in wrestling, which took place in Connecticut. Ray finished second, and Nate finished sixth...great work guys. Finally, David Leahy took part in the States' Swimming Finals, which took place in Springfield, MA.

When you stop and think of the numbers involved in the state, our little town with its big athletes does an awesome job all of the time!

❑ Thanks to Kenneth and Elizabeth Heugel there's a brand new baby boy on the South Shore, born at South Shore Hospital on Feb. 20. Best of luck goes to all of you, enjoy your new baby boy.

❑ Hope all of you read about Henry Hydell and his water treatments, that he started working on while in our town, in the red barn across from the Little League Field in fact. It seems like yesterday he was chasing goats across the back yard, now he is purifying water...one never knows!

❑ Happy birthday greetings go to Bernie Mulcahy this week! Our calculations show that he is a half century old, here's to another half!

❑ Speaking of birthdays, here's to Jeanne and Edward Travis and the birth of their brand new baby girl, born on January 25 at South Shore Hospital.

❑ And, waiting for birthdays with bated breath are Bob Magner Sr. and Bob Magner Jr. of Cohasset Savings Bank and Mahoney and Wright Insurance respectively. Their daughter/sister is awaiting the birth of twins as this is being penned. If not beforehand, mid-March is the due date...wouldn't it be great if Chrissy gave birth on St. Patrick's Day? Oh what a celebration that would be! Anyway there will be a grand one, watch for the balloons!

❑ Anyone who has read our Cohasset Mariner over the years knows of Jay Nothnagle, and of all his accomplishments! It was a real treat to read all of his latest feats in the recent issue, and may we take this chance to give Jay a standing ovation for all of his efforts.

❑ Our daughter Kim and her husband John are in San Diego this week on business, and have made arrangements to meet Walt and Nanci Sweeney for lunch mid-week. We will be sure that they fill us in on all the details of "Sweeney-land" upon their return, stay tuned...

❑ The last newsworthy event is one to mark on your calendar, its the 9th Annual Glastonbury Abbey Auction to be held in the Hingham High Gym on Saturday, March 28. Tons of great things are available, from services to art to tickets for various events...stay tuned as we fill you in with more information.

❑ Finally here's to success for "Pop Fone" as he undergoes local surgery for his finger...hope it is as good as new in no time at all Pop!

editorial

One for us

On Tuesday the voters of Cohasset went to the polls at about the average percentage rate for the state of Massachusetts— about 34 percent.

Maybe it's voter disillusionment with the quality of the national contenders—then again maybe Cohasset residents are like most people, more concerned with things perceived to have a direct effect on their lives.

After all, it's easy to become bored and disaffected with national campaigners who seek to be all things to all people—at all times.

Cohasset, as all other localities has concerns that are exclusive to its environs. Like many other towns in the state and across the country we are facing a problem of waste disposal. With no irony intended, this problem is not pretty or easy to contemplate. Many of us would rather have others do our thinking and responding for us.

Fortunately for Cohasset, so many of our fellow citizens are knowledgeable and active in concerns for the whole town's welfare.

In this regard many residents responded with insightful and informed written opposition to the proposed expansion of the Cohasset Heights landfill off Route 3A.

The members of S.A.F.E. served themselves and the interests of the town, as they perceived them, by opposing the 14.2-acre landfill expansion.

Letters to the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs (E.O.E.A.) ranged far and wide on the question.

Such esoteric issues as hydro-geology and civil engineering were addressed by informed citizens.

More mundane subjects like odors and road traffic were addressed on a personal level by others.

The combined weight of this storm of letters, helped the E.O.E.A. formulate its opinion and reject the supplemental draft of the environmental impact report.

In a ten-page response, Susan Tierney, secretary of the E.O.E.A. said the proposal as it stands does not comply with the state's environmental policy act.

While landfill owner Paul Barry is free to reapply, it is apparent that at least the first round has gone to S.A.F.E.

This is a fine example of self-expression and self-government by an informed citizenry.

The letters to E.O.E.A. were not confined to the problems of the present. Concern was expressed about Cohasset's future water supply and the quality of life in general for the town and its children.

This concerted effort bodes well for Cohasset and is a measure of the strength of social commitment in the town.

While The Mariner hopes that future elections see a higher percentage of eligible voter turnout, we are encouraged by the depth of concern expressed by the citizens of S.A.F.E.

This fine effort tells us indeed that Cohasset cares.

The Mariner welcomes letters to the editor. Please include address and telephone number for verification.

New Cohasset editor named

Mary Ford has been named editor of the Cohasset Mariner, Executive Editor Jane Lane has announced.

Ford joined the Mariner Newspapers as a part-time reporter in February, 1988. She has been a full-time staff reporter for the Hanover and Norwell Mariners since June of 1989.

"Mary Ford is an excellent writer and reporter, a fact that was clearly evident in the work she did in Norwell and Hanover. I'm confident that Mary will be a terrific editor as well. She's fair, she's competent and she's a hard worker. The people of Hingham are getting a great editor for their hometown newspaper," said Lane.

A Scituate native, Mary is a graduate of Scituate High School and received a Bachelor of Education degree from the University of Miami.

She was a teacher in various corners of the world, including Los Angeles, Japan and Minnesota, and together with her husband, Conley, lived in three foreign countries, including England, Japan and France.

Mary worked for two years as a correspondent for the Daily Herald in Arlington Heights, Ill. She also wrote a column on running which appeared each month in the 14 editions of the that newspaper.

Mary and her family, which includes sons Jarat, 15, and James, 13, are now back home in Scituate. Jarat is a freshman at Archbishop Williams. James is a seventh grade student at Gates Intermediate School.

"We love the South Shore and we're happy to be back home," Mary said.

Mary Ford is the new community editor for the Cohasset Mariner.

chamber chatter

by Paula Knowles

Candidates' night is March 17

On the night of March 17, all of us will have a chance to once again begin the annual process of becoming an informed part of our democratic form of government. The operative word in that somewhat rambling sentence is not, as it may seem, "democratic"—although "democratic" and "democracy" are words we all hold sacred. No, the operative word here is INFORMED; and anyone who has read my yearly pleas urging participation in elections, town meetings, and board hearings knows how important both I and the Chamber of Commerce believe an informed electorate to be.

But one look at the nasty dogfight now passing for a presidential primary campaign will convince even the most starry-eyed new voter that the "right" type of information is essential if we are to cast an informed vote on election day. This holds even more importance for our day-to-day life in our town elections than in our national polls.

Why? Because what we will be choosing when we cast our ballots for selectman, school committee, etc. is not just a town official, but, indeed, a way of life.

Sound a little heavy handed, a little overdone, at little too dramatic? Think again, Cohasset. Consider the damage that can be done, fiscally, by a town official who leads us into lawsuit after lawsuit because he or she refuses to see or understand the legal ramifications of decisions made solely on the basis of personal belief or bias, or a vote cast without proper study done on the issue at hand.

Consider the damage done by a board member who has only one agenda—a single issue candidate—who could effectively either block progress or, indeed, negate years of careful and costly forward movement.

Consider the loss to the town when a candidate, qualified and willing to work for the good of the town, is defeated because he or she could not get their views before the public, because he or she was seen as a one issue candidate, and no one listened to their overall philosophy and qualifications. Consider what each of us loses, personally, when we refuse to grab the chance to influence the course of our own future—when we insist on casting a vote that is based on nothing more than whim, fancy, personality, or hearsay.

Consider the erosion to "democracy" that goes on daily on a national basis when we elect officials based on press agents' expertise and dirty tricks exposeés.

Consider the reality of today and the uncertainty of a future decided by voters who do not take the time to ask questions and really listen to the answers...to the content, the meat of the answer, not to how well or how carefully that answer is phrased. Consider the future.

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce invites all of you to join us and participate in our annual Candidates' Night at the South Shore Art Center on March 17—St. Patrick's Day evening—at 7:30 p.m.

Hear the candidates voice their positions and beliefs, ask questions that concern you, and listen to the answers.

Form opinions based on facts and direct knowledge, and bring that knowledge into the voters booth on election day. Join us in the Spirit of St. Patrick! As he is reputed to have rid Ireland of snakes, you can rid Cohasset of the serpentine snare of voter apathy and misinformation.

Candidates' Night...March 17...South Shore Art Center...7:30 for coffee, 8 p.m. for the program. The town is counting on you.

Candidate policy

No candidates are endorsed by the Mariner Newspapers and no preferential treatment is offered any candidate seeking public office.

Candidates' Corner

The Mariner will publish a column called Candidates' Corner for candidates to make statements pertinent to the election. Candidates' Corner will end two weeks before the election.

Candidates' Corner is open to all candidates for all town boards. The rules are:

1. Candidate statements must be brief - not more than one typed page, double-spaced. Statements will be cut by editors if they are too long.

2. Statements must be typed or legibly written and include the candidate's name and telephone number for verification. They should be clearly marked to the attention of Candidates' Corner.

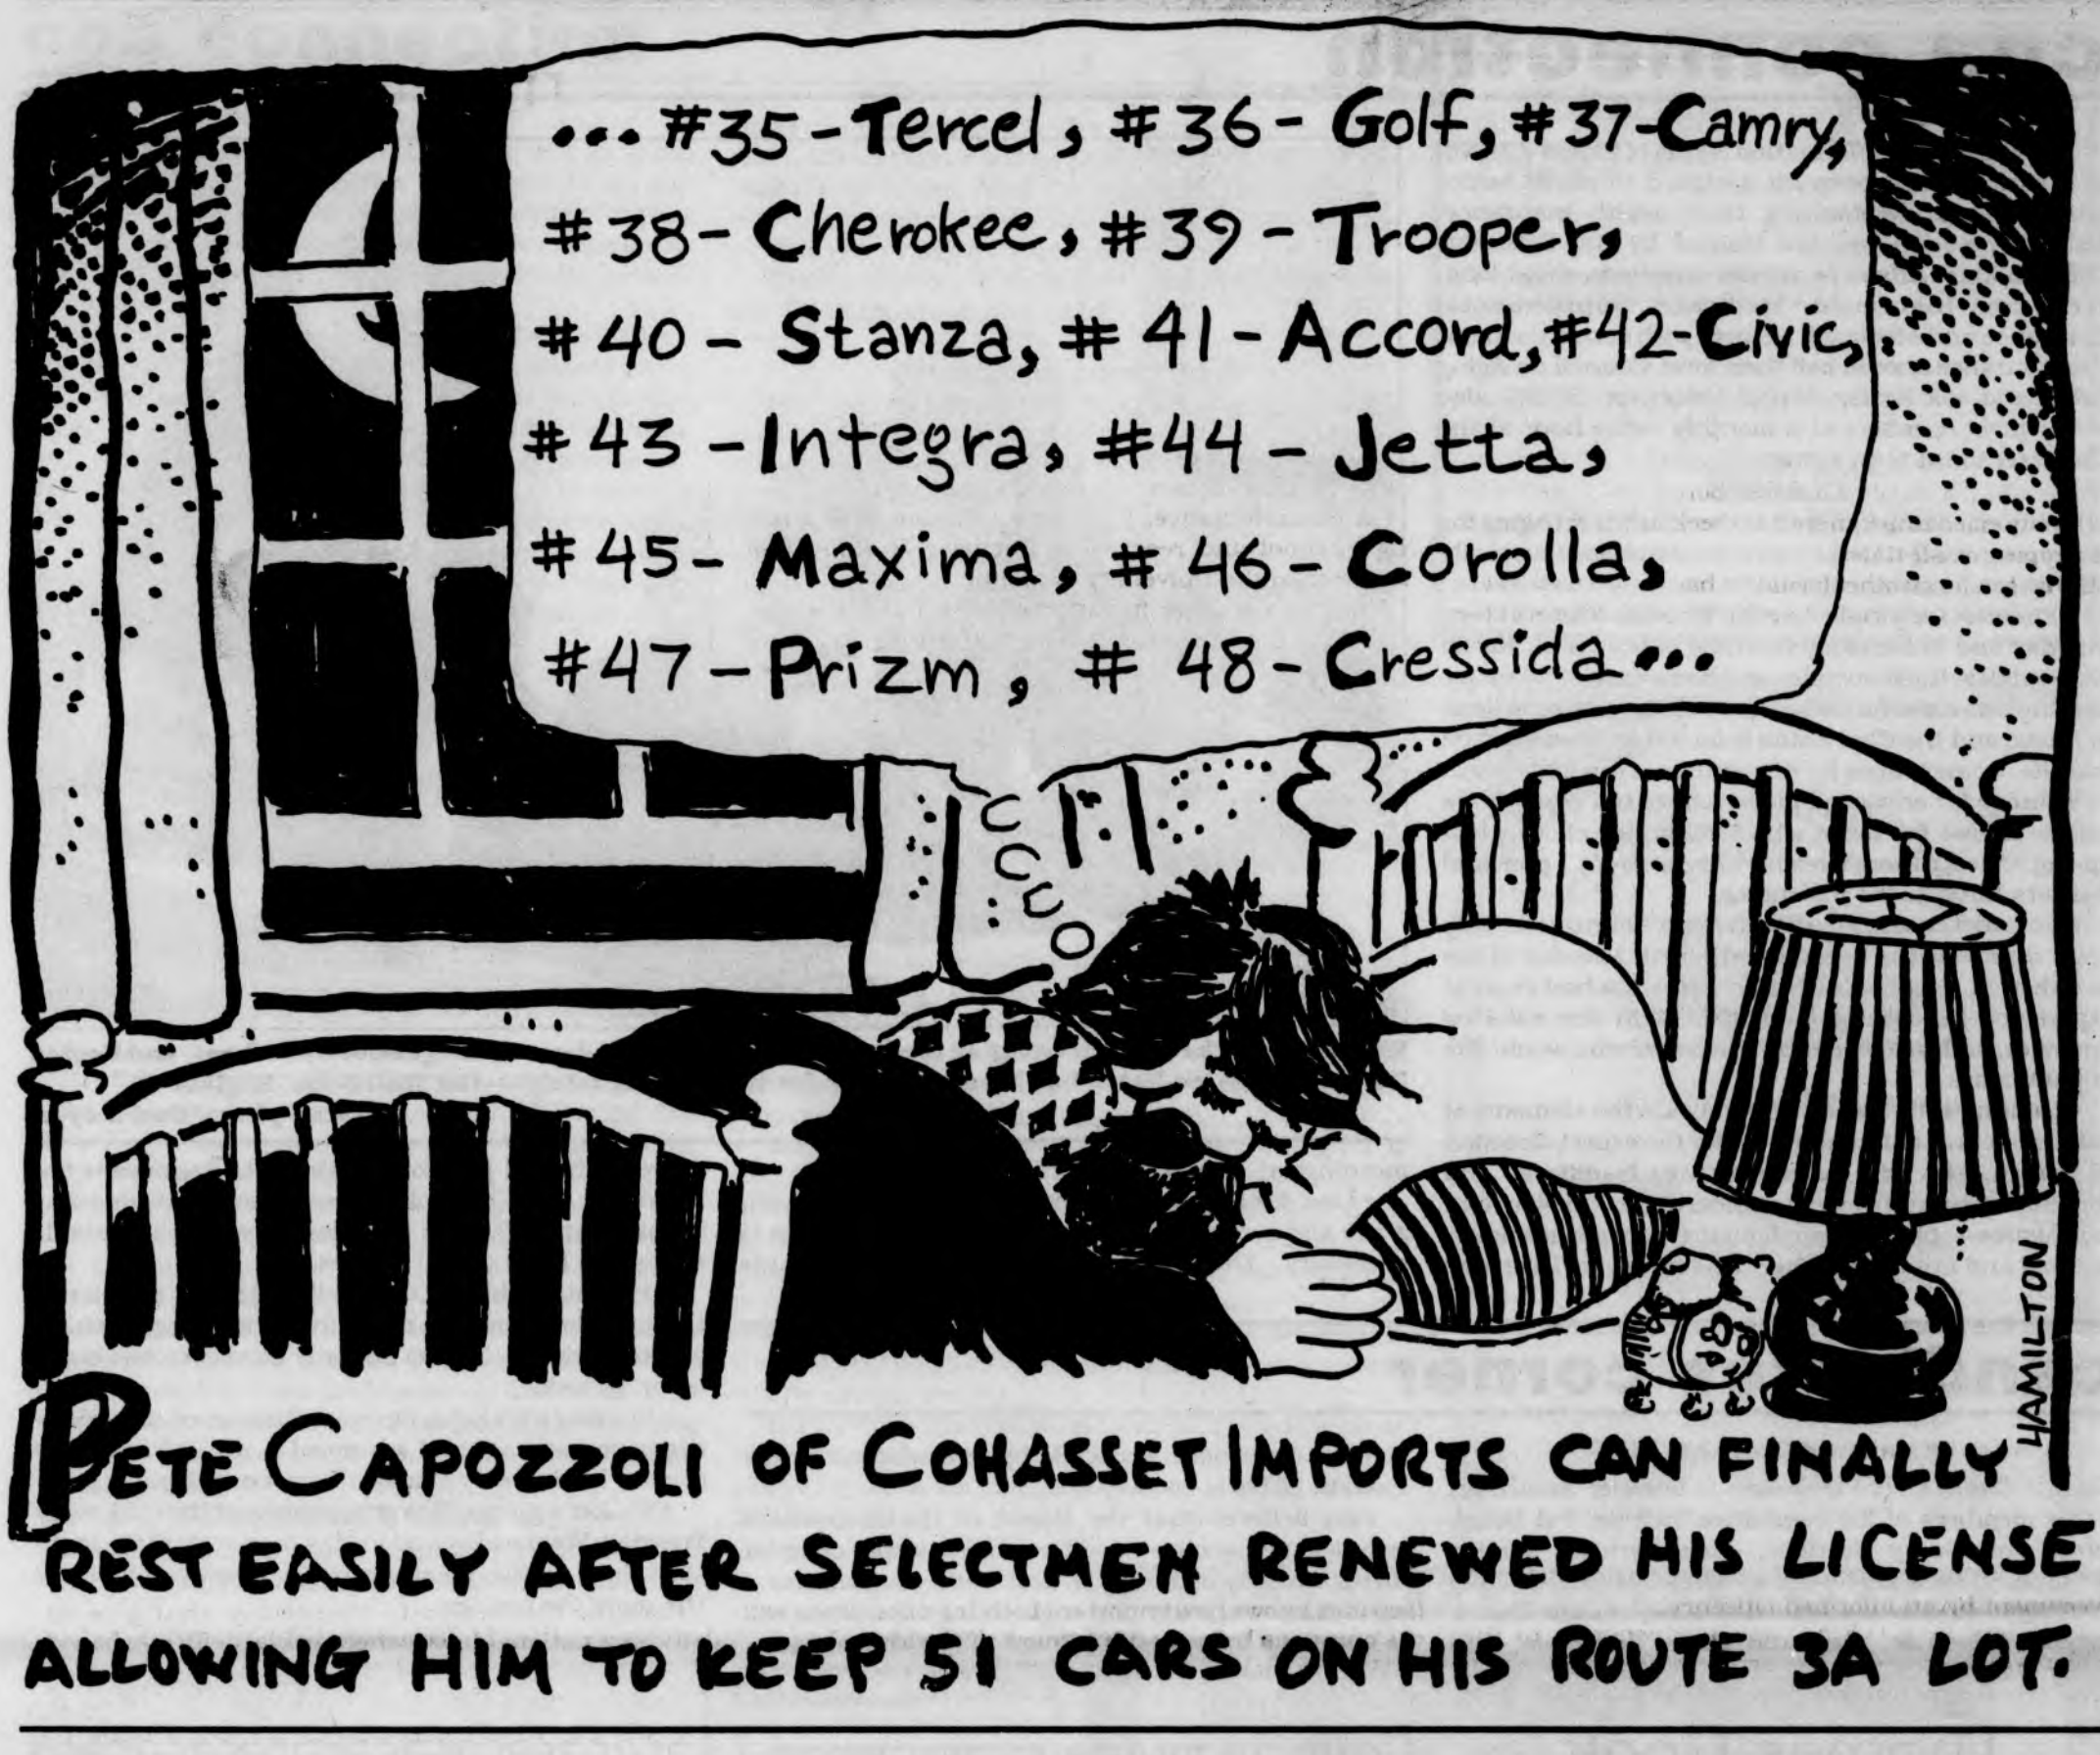
3. Statements must be submitted by the deadline of Monday noon for publication that week.

4. Statements should be used as a forum to address issues, not to attack personalities. The newspaper reserves the right to edit any material deemed libelous or tasteless.

5. Candidates' Corner will be published on a space-available basis. Priority will be given to those candidates in contested races. However, we will run all statements from candidates in a specific contest, or none at all. No more than one statement per candidate will be published each week.

Letters

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates during the campaign.



The Mariner will publish other letters on campaign issues but all politically-oriented letters will be cut off two weeks before the election.

News coverage

Any event throughout the campaign which is deemed to be newsworthy will be handled by the editorial staff. The Mariner will strive to be evenhanded and fair to all candidates in the news coverage it provides prior to the election.

In the week prior to the election, the Mariner will publish Candidate Profiles - brief biographies about the candidates running for major offices, including selectmen and school committee.

These biographies will include a photo of each candidate. If the candidate has a suitable glossy, he or she may submit that for publication. Otherwise candidates should contact the Mariner to arrange to have a photo taken by a member of the staff. That photo will be for the exclusive use of the Mariner.

Michael Sullivan

Michael Sullivan, a member of the board of health, recently announced his candidacy for a seat on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen. Two three-year positions are open on the board, with four candidates running for the openings in the April 11 election.

In making the announcement, Sullivan said, "The major issue confronting Cohasset right now is finances. We must develop methods to make our taxes work more efficiently and effectively, such as exploring the concepts of regionalization, and privatization, and by streamlining the town's infrastructure. However, it is important that we do this in a way that maintains Cohasset's special qualities. I think my business background, understanding of finances and management style is a combination of skills that will benefit the Board."

Sullivan continued, "Because I am currently involved in Cohasset's government structure, I have a first hand knowledge of how it all works. This will enable me to participate immediately in the work of the Board of Selectmen, if I am elected."

Bill Baird, who has worked with Sullivan on the Board of Health for a number of years, said, "Mike's a very effective leader. He's very capable and energetic."

"Mike takes a lot of responsibility, does a lot of extra work, and works hard at fulfilling commitments," Baird continued. "He would be an excellent addition to the Board of Selectmen. However, we will miss Mike's input and energy on the Board of Health."

Sullivan started Search Service Inc., in Hingham several years ago. The firm specializes in executive searches.

A graduate of Bryant College with a degree in Business Administration, Sullivan has been a Cohasset resident for six years. He and his wife, Mary, are the parents of three children, Corey, 8, Emilie, 6, and Daniel, 4.

Anyone interested in learning more about Sullivan may contact his campaign coordinators Russ Reidy, Manager, or Rick Flynn, Treasurer.

John K. McNabb Jr.

John K. McNabb, Jr., Cohasset Selectman candidate, congratulated the 55 residents who commented on the latest environmental impact report for the proposed 900-ton per day, 27.5 acre, "Area V" expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL).

"All Cohasset residents who submitted comments," said McNabb, "should be commended for taking the time and effort to examine this CHL report." The 55 residents who commented were more than three times the 18 who commented on the earlier version of the report – which was also rejected.

"As a co-founder and vice-president of SAFE (Stop Any Further Expansion), I encouraged and helped many residents of Cohasset to comment on the deficiencies of this report," said McNabb.

"These citizen comments were invaluable," said McNabb, "in convincing Secretary Tierney that current problems do exist at Cohasset Heights, and that these problems are 'highly relevant' to the potential for future problems from the proposed expansion."

McNabb also stated that the high level of public interest of – and opposition to – this proposed landfill expansion has brought this project to a standstill and will eventually kill it.

McNabb helped the SAFE effort to convince Secretary Tierney to reject the report by writing a summary of how to comment on the report. This guide was utilized by the many residents who commented.

McNabb also submitted a 72-page comprehensive comment on behalf of SAFE which contained a section-by-section analysis detailing the problems with the CHL report.

Ken Wilcox

Ken Wilcox, a candidate for one of two seats on the Cohasset School Committee, has announced the organization of a committee to support his candidacy.

Wilcox, a ten-year resident of Cohasset, has previously served the town on the Garage Study Committee and on the Capital Budget Committee. Wilcox explained that he is running for the School Committee because he believes his background is uniquely suited to making a strong contribution, particularly in the areas of teaching quality and budget and spending analysis. Wilcox has an M.B.A. from Harvard University and has taught at the grade school, high school and college levels.

"I care about the quality of life in Cohasset, I live here and I have two children, a seven-year-old and a four-year-old, who will be educated here," Wilcox explained. "I want to be sure that the school system is meeting the needs and challenges of today's students and will continue to do so in the foreseeable future. As a taxpayer, I'm concerned about costs. As a parent, I'm concerned about the quality of education being offered in the town."

The Committee to Elect Ken Wilcox is chaired by Serving Health Information Needs of Elders (SHINE) is a state-funded program designed to assist senior citizens in understanding their health insurance. Volunteer counselors are trained by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs to answer questions about long-term-care insurance. Medicare, Supplemental Insurance and Medicaid. Seniors with concerns about the insurance should call their local Council on Aging Office and ask for the SHINE Volunteer. SHINE also hosts guest speakers at a monthly coffee hour at the Cohasset Council on Aging.

• Line dancing. Relax, have fun, learn to move with grace and confidence. Little or no dance experience is necessary. These moves are just simple versatile movements and just lots of fun. Rita Samford is the instructor and this class meets every Wednesday morning at 11:30 a.m. Be sure to wear comfortable shoes and loose casual clothes.

• Bowling with Bill O'Connell. Bill is not a novice in this line. Come and join us Thursday mornings with old and new friends. This is not only good exercise, but it is fun as well.

• Knitting with Edna Finegan. Knitters of all levels — beginners, average and advanced — are welcome. The class is held weekly Friday afternoon at 1 p.m.

• Walker's group. This group meets at the COA every Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday mornings at 9 a.m. to start the day with great company. Won't you join us? The more the merrier.

Thomas Cook

Thomas Cook has announced his candidacy for the Board of Health. He is a civil engineer employed by Stone and Webster Corporation in Boston. He has twenty years of experience in the design of water resources projects, particularly in fish protection measures at dam sites.

As chairman of the Drainage Advisory Committee during the last ten years, Tom has provided input to many town boards on engineering-related issues. He has also served on the Watershed Protection Study Committee which developed the Water Resource District and the Hazardous Materials bylaws adopted by the Town in 1986.

Tom believes that the Board of Health needs a technical perspective to address increasingly complex issues and regulations. "I deal with environmental regulations every day. My engineering experience will be beneficial in evaluating Board of Health issues."

The high-tech message

Last Thursday, March 5, over 75 parents turned out for the PSO sponsored "Technology Fair" at Cohasset High School. The purpose of the event was to show parents the exciting new technologies available to students in the Cohasset school system.

The principals of the three schools—Osgood, Deer Hill and the Junior/Senior High—each introduced a video that explained the various applications of technology in their respective schools and their visions for the future.

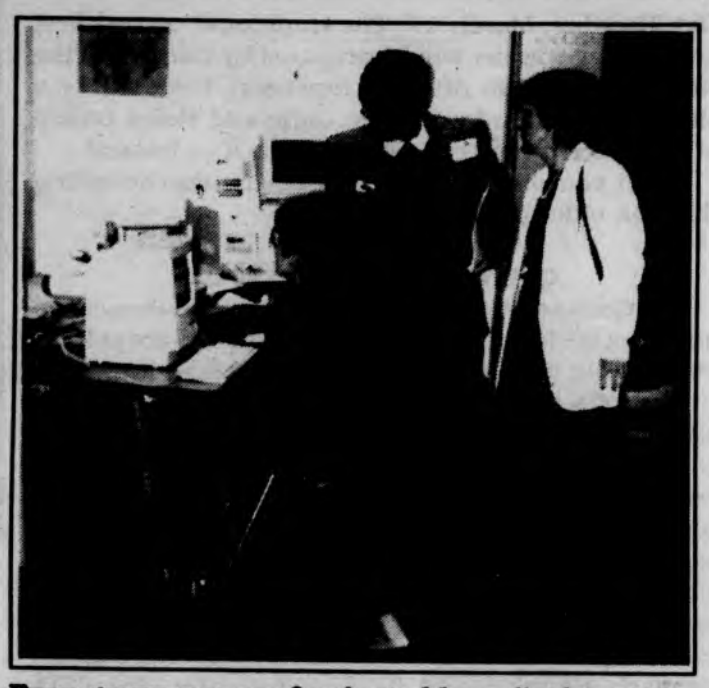
Computer exhibits under the direction of Dr. John Packard, were set up in the cafeteria allowing parents some hands-on experience.

Contributions were made by staff members including Susan McFadd, Colleen Lucas, Colleen Wheeler, Bill Kite, Dennis Walsh, Robin Hodgkins, Valerie Devine, Marge Murphy, Steve Biagini and others to make an interesting and valuable presentation for everyone.

More than a dozen students were on hand to demonstrate the various technologies including computer networking and output, computer graphics, music composition, satellite telecommunications and cable in the classroom.

Teacher Ed Leary displayed his and Mr. Cisneros' skills as certified computer repair technicians, while other teachers were available to discuss tutorial and remedial computer aided instruction and hopes for broadening technology in the schools. Cakes and cookies were provided by Maureen Duffy's home economics class.

Nominees for PSO board



The PSO Nominating Committee has convened to prepare a slate of nominees for the 1992-93 Executive Board.

A list of candidates will be mailed to the general membership in April and voted into office at the Annual Meeting on May 7.

If you would be interested in a board position or if you would like to make a recommendation, please call Helene Thornton, 383-2341 or Donna O'Donnell, 383-6113.

CHS seniors register to vote

March 4 seniors were given the opportunity to register during the annual voter registration assembly at Cohasset High School. This event is sponsored by the Social Studies Department and the PSO. Letitia Jordan, PSO Representative, spoke about the fact that this year's class will have the immediate privilege of voting in a national election as well as the upcoming town meeting and town elections. CHS students are encouraged, through their education, to research and debate issues and to use this knowledge to actively participate in their government.

Even grown-ups are fascinated by a display at the technology fair.

Social Studies Department Chairwoman Patricia Keenan mentioned the beginning of a new phase in the life of the seniors with new rights and responsibilities. Students can make an impact on local and national issues. She challenged them to have their opinions heard; to find out how all the candidates stand on the issues. It is their responsibility to read newspapers, to watch debates, to volunteer and to be informed. It has only been since the Vietnam War that 18-year-olds have had the right to vote.

Richard Henderson, Cohasset's Legal Counsel, outlined some of their legal rights and responsibilities, including the right to own property, to enter into legal contracts, to practice medicine, the right to be sued and to be tried as an adult. There are some responsibilities that go along with these rights such as the obligation of all males between the ages of 18 and 25 to register with the selective service and the responsibility of all citizens to vote. He further explained Cohasset's open Town Meeting where students can participate directly in the legislative process.

State Republican Committeewoman Polly Logan and Democratic Town Committee Member Ron Goodwin urge students to consider the differences between the two parties, particularly in the issues of the role of government in the economy, social welfare, the environment and education. Mrs. Logan was selected to go to El Salvador to observe their elections. She said that even the poorest people walked many miles to vote while only 53 percent of Americans vote. They both urged the students to become involved and to vote.

CHS secretary and town registrar Linda Shultz was present to register any students who currently qualified. Handouts from the elections office in Boston and from the League of Women Voters were distributed. Students may register in the town clerk's office in the town hall anytime. March 20 is the deadline to register for the town meeting April 4, and for the town elections held April 11. October 6 is the deadline to register for the presidential election November 3. Absentee ballots are available in the town clerk's office or by written request. Everyone is encouraged to VOTE.

Early release day

March 19 will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

Junior/Senior High School: 12 p.m.
Deer Hill School: 12:40 p.m.
Joseph Osgood School: 12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schools and food service will be available at the Junior/Senior High School.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff at the elementary schools to schedule parent conferences and the secondary staff to attend an inservice program on media technology.

Later he raced that car at Skowegan, Maine and was leading Ted Horne, the national racing driver champion, when he crashed.

Mr. Silvia owned Silvia's Garage in Cohasset and was constantly developing new parts and techniques for race cars. He was a member of the Eastern Old Timers Racing Club of New Jersey and the Wednesday Morning Breakfast Club of Cohasset. He was an avid supporter of Boy's Town.

Jones, Fiore set wrestling record

By Paula Knowles
Mariner correspondent

Cohasset's wrestlers continued their Cinderella season at Glastonbury Ct. over the weekend.

Nate Fiore wrestled his way into the semi-finals by beating both the Rhode Island state runner-up and the Vermont state champion in tough matches on Friday. Ray Jones also worked his way to the semi's by solidly beating the Vermont State Champ in his last match on Friday, and setting up a return match against Dustin Ashton of Wayland. Ashton beat Jones on a technicality in the Mass. State Championships just one week earlier.

The mood that night at the hotel was one of barely contained excitement, as well as a pinch-me kind of disbelief, according to Coach Sweeney. Coaches from all over Massachusetts stopped the team members and coaches to congratulate them on their tremendous performance, and to wish them luck on Saturday.

And on Saturday, Cohasset was ready to go. Although Fiore finally lost his semi-final match to Mass. Div. II State Champ Dan Legana of Springfield Central, his two matches in the consolation round earned him sixth place in New England.

Jones, on the other hand, won his return match on Saturday 8-4, validating his coaches' belief that he was a far better wrestler than the first match between the two had indicated, and earning Ray the honor of being the first wrestler in Cohasset history to compete in the finals of the New England Championship.

Here Cohasset's great season finally came to an end as Ray lost a tough match to favorite and two-time defending champion Paul Davis of Franklin.

Jones and Fiore have now gone further than any other wrestlers from Cohasset in New England competition, and since they are both only juniors, we can look forward to another great season from them both in 1993. Coach Sweeney can't wait.

CHS wrestlers go to the mat in state finals

Torin Sweeney's senior wrestlers thought that they would be watching their final high school meet when they travelled to the state finals in Wayland. But they were in for a great surprise as they watched juniors Nathan Fiore and Raymond Jones Jr. wrestle their way into the New England Championship in Glastonbury, Ct.

Fiore, wrestling at the 135-pound class, compiled a 3-1 record overall for a second place finish, losing only in the finals to the defending state champion from Foxboro. Jones, competing in the 145-pound class, amassed an awesome 5-1 record on his way to a third-place finish, and a chance to compete in the New Englands along with Fiore.

Coach Torin Sweeney couldn't hide his feelings about his athletes.

"These kids are the cream of the crop," he beamed. "I couldn't be prouder of them than I am right now."

And he didn't try to hide his feelings about the other two wrestlers who competed in Wayland.

"Ryan Freeman who wrestles at 112, wrestled great. In fact, he went farther than any other Cohasset freshman ever has before," said Sweeney.

Steve Harrington, another junior, grabbed fifth place in the tough 140-pound class. He lost to a wrestler from Franklin only to turn the table by beating the same opponent the next day.

"Steve really wrestled well," said Sweeney.

Sweeney also left no doubt that he felt that the boys' success was a reflection of a real team effort.

"This team has done better than any team in recent memory," he said. "They just kept getting better and better with every match."

Rotary race plans

Plans are well underway for the Sixteenth Annual Cohasset Roadrace by the Sea. The event will begin at 1 p.m. Sunday, April 5, at the Cohasset Common. This annual ritual of spring is again sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club and is under the direction of Roy Fitzsimmons and Peter Logan. The number of entrants is limited to the first 800, so runners are encouraged to register early. Applications are available at Good Sport, Curtis Liquors or by sending a SASE to P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025. The $10 entree fee includes shirts with the race logo and local sponsors as well as free refreshments and prizes.

This year there will also be a 10k Walk which will start at Sandy Beach and cover the same route as the race and will begin at 10 a.m. sharp. Participants will receive a shirt and refreshments for the $10 fee. All proceeds from the race and walk benefit the many in town charities the Rotary Club contributes to. In 1991, the Club's 50th year in town, it donated between scholarships and donations over $30,000.

The deadline for pre-registration is March 31. The event attracts runners from throughout New England and was recently rated most scenic by the N.E. Runner magazine.

Calling all walkers

Now is the time to mark your calendars. Sunday, April 26 is the day of the 18th Annual Walk for the Protestant Social Service Bureau to raise funds for its many programs.

The ten kilometer trek begins at the Hingham Congregational Church on Main St. The walk covers a very picturesque portion of Route 228.

The goal for this year is $40,000. Be a walker or be one of the many volunteers who act as Crossing Guards, or drive in the Blister Patrol, or man the check points, or help provide sandwiches and beverages at the end of the walk.

This is not a race. It is an opportunity for a pleasant stroll with some friends.

Dorothy Sparks and Carla Steen are the co-chairmen for this event.

More than 50 South Shore churches are planning to participate in this worthwhile activity. Is your church one of them? If not, and you would like to take part, call the PSSB office at 773-6203.

AARP meets March 26

The next meeting of the South Shore Chapter #1139 of the American Association of Retired Persons will be at 1:30 p.m. Thursday, March 26, at the Sons of Italy Hall, Route 3A, Hingham.

Our speaker will be Mel Simons who will reminisce about the "Golden Days of Radio." Refreshments will be served.

Any member of the National AARP or NRTA may join a chapter and is welcome at this meeting.

Town moderators on cable

Tonight (March 12) Host Wigmore Pierson's guests on Pierson to Person will be area Town Moderators discussing upcoming town meetings, town meeting form of government and a wide range of local political issues.

Panelists scheduled are William Weeks, Cohasset; John Russell, Hull; and Thomas O'Donnell, Hingham.

Separately, only on Channel 3 in Cohasset and Scituate, 9-10 p.m., there will be a debate between new Cohasset Fire Chief John Nadeau and former Cohasset Advisory Committee Chairman, Raymond Kasperowicz on how, if, and when the town should have a volunteer or "call" fire department versus "permanent" department as it is currently.

Viewer telephone questions will be accepted during both live segments on Pierson to Person.

The Pierson to Person television show is broadcast live each Thursday, 8-9 p.m., from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channel 53 in Hanover, Hingham, Hull, and Norwell; on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset and Scituate; and on a tape-delayed basis in Marshfield, Weymouth, and Quincy.

The public is invited to be part of the studio audience each Thursday evening and those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road by 7:30 p.m.

For further information about upcoming guests and additional show information, call the Pierson Show's Executive Producer, Robert Belliveau at 545-0643.

Amateur gardeners meet

The members of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet Tuesday, March 17 at 1 p.m. at the home of Christine Flood.

Isabelle Wilson will assist as co-hostess.

The program will be presented by Leo Androsky.

Newcomer's fashion show

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomer's Club will hold its annual Spring Fashion Show and Luncheon at noon, April 4, at Kimball's by the Sea in Cohasset Harbor.

Fashions will be provided by Gates of North Scituate.

The spring fashion show is the club's main fund-raiser for its scholarship fund which benefits graduating seniors from the Cohasset-Scituate area.

Tickets are $20 and are available by calling Tanya Stenson at 545-6127. Raffle tickets will be available at Stop & Shop in Cohasset and Purity Supreme in Scituate March 14 and 15 and also March 28 and 29.

First prize is a two-night stay at the Sheraton Boston hotel. Other prizes include dinner for two at the Red Lion Inn, and gift certificates to King Jewelers and Buttonwood Books.

Benbow farewell reception

Friends of the Rev. and Mrs. John Benbow, well-known in the Cohasset area during his service as minister of the Second Congregational Church, are invited to join parishioners of the church at a reception in Bates Hall of the church from 3 to 5 p.m. Sunday, March 22. The Benbows are moving to the West Coast where Mr. Benbow has been called to a church in La Jolla, California.

Mr. Benbow was minister of the Second Congregational Church for 13 years from 1973 to 1986 when he left to accept a call to the First Congregational Church in Milton. He will be leaving there in the spring to take up duties at the California church.

While in Cohasset he served as chairman of the drug-and-alcohol education committee, a member of the police chief search committee and in other civic programs.

Mary Benbow is an occupational therapist working with learning-impaired and special-needs children and is currently on leave from the Cohasset School Department.

Although the church honored the Benbows at the time of their move to Milton, parishioners wanted to wish them another farewell on their move to the West Coast, and to invite their many local friends to join in the occasion.

Scouts earn awards

On Sunday, Feb. 9, the Boy Scouts held their annual Blue and Gold Dinner. The Boy Scouts and their families, as well as a long list of guests including Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, gathered to share a meal.

In keeping with the theme of "Scouting around the World," the Cohasset High School Cafeteria, where the event was held, was colorfully decorated with posters of exotic lands, both near and far. Balloons and streamers were everywhere.

Robert Protulis admires his new Wolf Badge that he was awarded at the Blue and Gold Dinner.

After dinner, badges and pins, which the scouts earned by hard work over the past several months, were awarded. In addition, a special award was presented to Scoutmaster Jeff Foresdick for his 20th Anniversary of Scoutmaster for Pack 38. The award was presented to him by none other than his former den mother, Rep. Murray.

Following the awards ceremony, everyone was treated to an exhibition of Tai Chi Chuan by John Loupos and his students of the Wah Lum Academy in Cohasset. They also performed a traditional Chinese Dragon dance in honor of the Chinese New Year, complete with costumes.

Earning awards that day were:

- Den Chief awards to Troop 28 Boy Scout Tony Bramblet from Den 7 and Mark Whitman from Webelos.
- The Cohasset Rotary, which sponsors Pack 38.
- Linda Farrag was presented her 10-year veteran's pin for her assistance and den leadership to Pack 38 by Cubmaster Jeff Forsdick.
- Many scouts earned their Wolf, Bear and Webelo badges.

Abbey to host auction

The 9th Annual Auction to benefit the Monks of Glastonbury Abbey will be held at the Hingham High School Gym off Union Street Saturday, March 28.

Many treasures will be available — original art work by local artists as well as Cambodian temple rubbings, many styles of luxurious furnishings in Teak and Mahogany, antique brass telescope and brass candlesticks, an authentic ship's wheel cocktail table, a hand carved bird, and many types of antiques will be up for the bidding. You can also bid on Celtics, Red Sox and Bruins tickets, gourmet dinners to be prepared and served in your home, a variety of gift certificates donated by local South Shore Merchants and much, much more.

The preview and afternoon auction start at 1 p.m. The evening auction begins at 7 p.m. sharp under the gavel of auctioneer Norm McCullough.

Admission and catalogs are free and refreshments will be available. You may pick up a catalog in advance at the Galstonbury Abbey bookstore.

It's official: override vote is May 16

Cohasset residents can look forward to warmer weather and another override election this spring.

Selectmen set Saturday, May 16 for what has become an annual event in Cohasset.

Advisers are recommending an override of about $424,000. But it's up to selectmen to set the final figure and decide whether to go with a single override question or set up a menu format with multiple questions.

Selectmen Chairman Ned Tebbetts said he hoped that in the weeks following the April 4 town meeting, citizens will get together and discuss "the pro's and con's" of the issue.

The proposed $13.3 million budget for FY'93, which begins July 1, exceeds estimated revenue by $423,948, according to the advisory committee..

In their budget report, advisers assume that local aid will be level funded.

A $400,000 override would add about $139 a year to the property tax bill for a home valued at $300,000.

A home valued at $1 million would see a $463 tax increase.

'Tax or cut' is election focus

By Patty Hayes
Mariner correspondent

The focus of the Chamber of Commerce's annual candidates night Tuesday at he South Shore Art Center, was not surprisingly, solving the town's fiscal crisis.

Candidates for the two open seats on the Board of Selectmen and the two seats on the School Committee were questioned by the audience as to how they plan to provide quality education and other services, under the town's current budget crisis.

School committee candidate Owen McNally, a lifelong Cohasset resident and a teacher at Boston Latin School, said that there is still money to be cut in the school system budget. "It is my experience that there is no end to how a government employee can spend money. We've got to make some savings...see where savings can be made without firing.

"We have to work within the budget we have. I don't

Screams, horn thwart armed, masked man's robbery try

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

A masked man armed with a club tried to rob two Papa Gino's employees at Cushing Plaza early Tuesday morning.

Two female employees at the restaurant were making a night deposit at the Rockland Trust in Cushing Plaza, when the man approached their car, police said.

It's the second incident within two weeks at the Rockland Trust. The bank was robbed at gun point March 6.

Police don't think the incidents at Rockland Trust are related. Both suspects are still at large.

But Det. Brian Cogill said the latest incident at Cushing Plaza may be related to a robbery at Ronnie Shone's General Store on First Parish Road in Scituate, Feb. 5.

In both cases, the suspect was masked and was described by witnesses as about 5 ft. 8 ins. tall with a stocky build. In the Ronnie Shone's robbery the suspect had a pair of pantyhose pulled over his face, Scituate police said.

A few minutes past midnight Tuesday, the suspect started banging on the car occupied by the two Papa Gino's employees with what appeared to be a black, night stick, Cogill said. The women said the man was wearing a dark blue parka and black pants and possibly a ski mask.

The women started screaming and blowing the horn. The suspect fled on foot to the rear of the plaza.

Firefighting is serious business to new chief

mariner visits

While conversing with John Nadeau, one sometimes needs to be reminded that he is a fire chief, and not a business executive.

"We have a service to market and need to provide the service and the marketing," he says.

At 35, Cohasset's new fire chief is among the state's youngest. He represents a new breed of fire chiefs—focused on management and efficiency.

"I want to create an environment that is responsive to customers. We want to achieve fast, friendly, exceptional service at an exceptional value."

Like any successful CEO, he also has a long-range plan for his "company," the Cohasset Fire Department.

"It is a lot more cost effective to prevent a fire than respond to one that has started. I want to increase inspections by 300 percent within the next year."

The fire department currently performs 500 building inspections annually. The department checks underground storage tanks, smoke detectors, and enforces numerous state and town codes.

Under the new plan, the department will perform 2,000 inspections annually, with the increase directed primarily at commercial properties.

Quarterly taxes proposed

The town hopes residents will decide to pay taxes more often — and like it.

Town treasurer Elizabeth B. Ripley has proposed a warrant article to switch the town to a quarterly tax-payment system.

Residents are currently billed for property taxes twice a year.

Under the new system, property taxes would be due on August 1, Nov. 1, Feb. 1, and May 1.

The switch from a two- to four-bill system would save the town more than $9,000 in the first year and $14,300 in the second. Added expenses of additional postage and processing and a one-time software charge would be offset by a $20,000 annual savings in short-term borrowing, Ripley said.

Selectmen endorsed the article at a recent meeting.

Ripley said towns that have implemented the quarterly tax system finds it improves cash flow, saves on temporary borrowing expenses, and is popular with taxpayers, who prefer four smaller bills.

Legal issue is perturbing

Selectmen say they know what they're spending on legal costs.

In explaining town warrant, citizens' Article 35 to the board, Pond Street resident John K. McNabb Jr., questioned whether the town knows just how much is spent on what.

McNabb said that in his view accountability "gets lost" when special counsels — appointed by selectmen at the recommendation of town counsel — report to another board or commission.

"Legal costs are supposed to be in your control," he said.

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke took issue with the implication the board doesn't track legal costs.

"We do not pay bills without sufficient information," she said. "That problem doesn't exist.

"I disagree strongly with your statement that we do not know or hold accountable the people billing us."

The article asks that the town change its by-laws and require the following:

• The town report include the status and costs of all legal cases.

• That assistant (special) town counsels be appointed annually and only upon submittal of an annual report to selectmen.

• That no bill from an assistant/special town counsel be paid until the town accountant receives from selectmen a detailed invoice.

Selectmen did not vote to support the article. They said they needed more time to think about it.

Goedecke said she thought the intent of the article could be achieved without an actual change in the by-law.

McNabb said the authors of the article want to make it clear the issue is not directed at Town Counsel Richard Henderson nor the assistant town counsels who work directly under Henderson.

Bonds approved

Selectmen recently approved the annual renewal of the following bonds for town officials.

• Treasurer — $150,000/premium $525.

• Tax collector — $120,000/premium $680.

• Assistant tax collector — $30,000/premium $178.50.

• Assistant treasurer — $37,500/ premium $105.

Hull talks planned

Selectmen plan to meet soon with their Hull counterparts to "look where some aspects of regionalization may be appropriate," chairman Ned Tebbetts said.

The board was responding to a request from Hull selectmen for a joint meeting. No meeting date was set.

Legal bills approved

Selectmen approved payment of the following bills for services from Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson for the month of February:

• $4,282.50 for general matters.

• $930 for tax foreclosure matters.

• $277.50 for board of assessor matters.

Plaza liquors gets tough

Cohasset Plaza Liquors has issued a new get-tough policy on the carding of minors attempting to buy alcohol.

In a letter to employees, Donald E. Staszko, company president, said that effective immediately all patrons under 35 years old must be carded.

Staszko warned employees that non-compliance could result in dismissal or any penalties imposed by law including $1,000 fine and/or six months imprisonment for serving alcohol to a minor.

STD cases increase

The Cohasset Board of Health has recently received data from the Massachusetts Department of Public Health that eight cases of sexually transmitted diseases (STD) were reported in Cohasset residents during 1991. Residents are reminded that STD are on the increase in Massachusetts and that appropriate behavior modifications are in order.

The above data do not include HIV infection or AIDS.

think we can constantly go to the taxpayers and ask for more money. I will work within the fiscal constraints we have," McNally said.

Board of Selectmen incumbent Diana Kornet said that in order to survive its budget crisis, the town has to decide which services are necessary, which are desirable, and which we are willing to fund."

Kornet said that there are no magical suggestions for increasing revenues in the town, and that if citizens don't want vital services to be cut, taxes will hav to be increased to fund those services..

"I think this country and this town will have to face the fact that we will have to pay more in taxes," she said.

School committee incumbent Ralph Kidder said that even with the decreases in funding, the Cohasset School System is still among the top 10-20 in the Commonwealth and has much to be proud of. As a method of funding the school system, Kidder suggested the 1 percent solution, setting aside one percent of revenue specifically for education, a method which he said would allow the School System to not only survive, but to move forward.

However, Kidder said, "If the override fails, we'll have to cut. There are no other options,."

School committee Candidate Kenneth Wilcox suggested exploring alternative methods of funding the school system, such as regionalization and privatization.

"The state is highly unlikely to feed more money into a town like Cohasset. The town must figure out how to fund its own schools," Wilcox said.

Board of Selectmen candidate Michael Sullivan said that unless an override is won jobs will have to be cut.

"We' ve cut for the last three years. We're down to cutting employees. The Board of Selectmen would have to prioritize and decide what's important to the town.," he said.

Conservation commission chair Merle Brown, also vying for one of the two seats on the Board said that if a proposition 2-1/2 override is not won, "We have to look into ways of cutting back," but said that he doesn't know where the cuts should be made. appen if an override does not happen.

Brown added that it is important that people be informed of the necessity of an override. "We have to get out there and get information to people as to why we need an oveerride," he said

John McNabb, Jr. also a candidate for the Board of Selectmen, said that an override failure would create a very serious situation for the town. "We've cut to the bone in many areas. Maybe whole programs would have to go," he said.

About 60 people attended the forum, which will be re-broadcast on Cohasset Cable on Wednesday, March 25 at 7:30 p.m. in preparation for the April 11 election.

Waterfront property owners: Get ready for 'Chapter 91'

New Waterways Regulations require a state license, permit or "interim approval" for any changes ever made in tideland property below historic high water. Applications are not easy to complete and must be filed by October, 1993.

To find out why and how to comply with the new Regulations, come to a special Gulf Association meeting from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., Wednesday, March 25, at the Unitarian Parish House, Cohasset Common.

Here to explain the new Regulations will be one of the key people processing Chapter 91 applications: John A. Simpson, Jr., environmental analyst, Waterways Regulation Program, Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (D.E.Q.E.).

Simpson will describe the origins of the new Regulations (they enforce legislation passed in 1866), who and what is affected by them (for homeowners, typically, all docks, piers, seawalls, bulkheads and filled lands), the significant differences between a license, permit and "interim approval," and how to go about applying for each.

Chapter 91 is a "sleeper"—not well publicized, yet broadly applicable to waterfront residents. Don't miss this chance to find out what you need to know about it while there's still time to do your homework.

Attendance is free of charge and open to all.

For additional information call John Hartshorne at 383-0317 or Jack Hubbard at 383-0586.

Cohasset's new fire chief takes business seriously need to do more inspections in those areas," he says.

Nadeau, who resides in Hull, also wants to see the fire prevention program "Learn not to Burn" become a staple of every child's education in town.

mariner visits

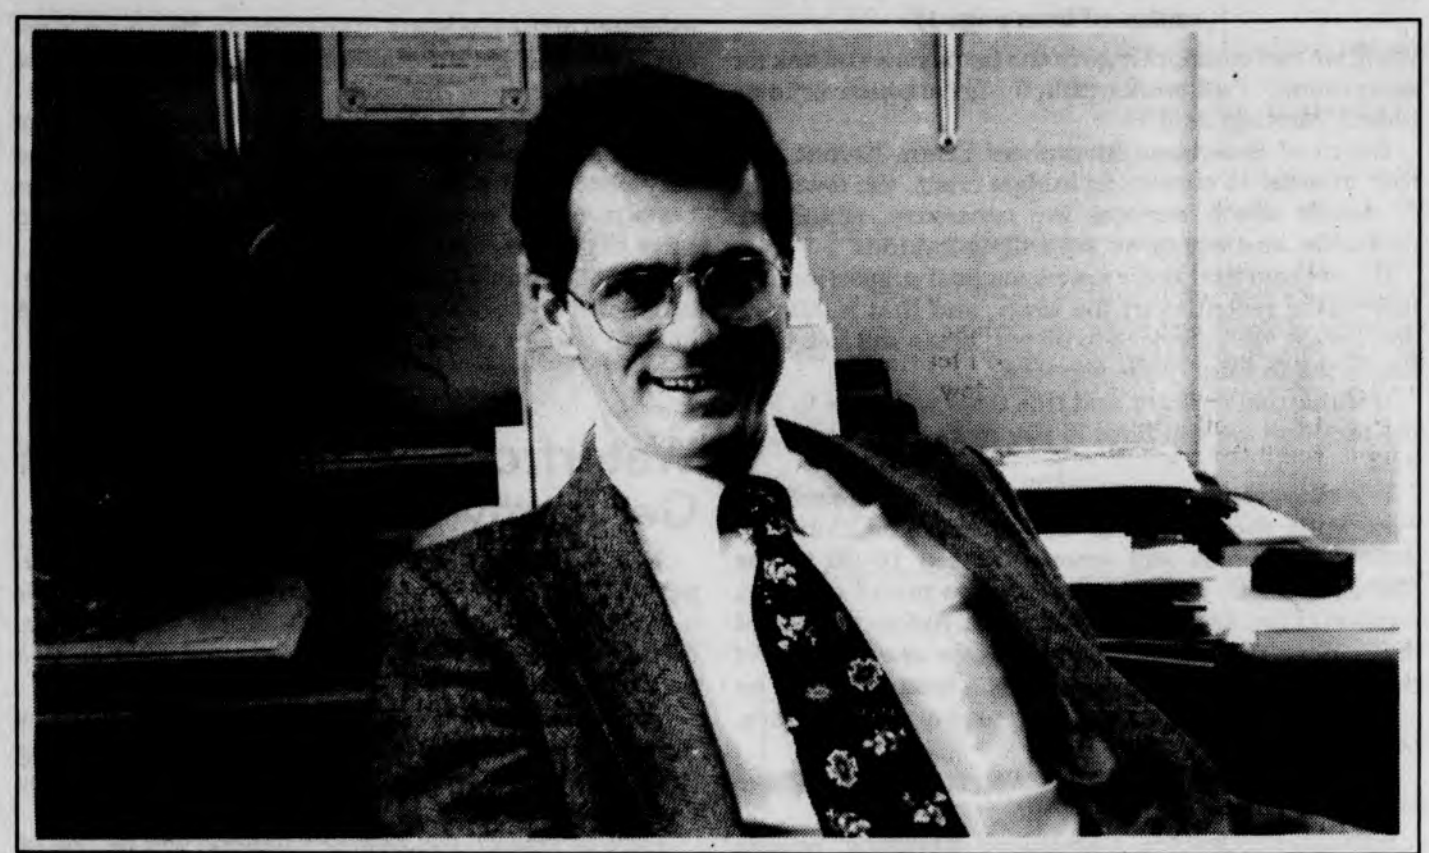
"It is a series of 25 key fire-safety behaviors that are taught. The crux (of the program) is that the school teacher teaches these to children as part of their regular education, not a special class. It is incorporated into their daily teaching plan."

Having assumed the position of fire chief only two months ago, Nadeau said he does not have a start date for the program. However, he added, funding should not be an obstacle.

As part of the fire department's contractual duties, it will hold a "Learn not to Burn" workshop for the teachers and explain the fire safety techniques.

Education is central to Nadeau's firefighting philosophy, and not just for children. With the exception of last year, he has attended fire protection classes since he was 17.

"I consistently went to night school for sixteen years," he says.



His interest in firefighting was sparked by a course he took at a community college, while trying to decide what to do with his life.

"It all started with the course 'Introduction to Fire Protection,' and then went on from there."

A Maine native, Nadeau holds a bachelor's in fire protection and numerous certificates and diplomas on specialized areas of firefighting administration.

He is currently working on his master's in public administration and is an adjunct faculty member at the National Fire Academy in Virginia.

'It's a lot more cost effective to prevent a fire than to respond to one that has already started.'

—Fire Chief John Nadeau on increasing inspections by 300 percent

Nadeau's experience with firefighting, unfortunately, is much more than academic.

"Probably one of the most difficult situations I've ever been involved in was when a 43-year-old despondent male opened a 20-pound cannister of explosive liquid petroleum and let it waft through a multi-family house," he recalls.

Nadeau said the man was angry at his wife and threatened to blow up the house.

"It would have blown up the whole block."

Nadeau was the commanding officer at the scene and evacuated the street. While coordinating the firefighters, the radio he was using failed and he had to shout directions from the steps of the building.

Eventually, the man was apprehended and there was no explosion.

"But it was so tense. If the water heater went on, or even if someone switched a light on, the whole thing would have blown."

Upon Nadeau's recommendation, seven firefighters received medals of valor for their bravery.

Nadeau got his own reward: the man who caused the explosive situation received treatment for mental illness and several months later returned to thank Nadeau for rescuing him.

Armed robbery attempt thwarted . . .

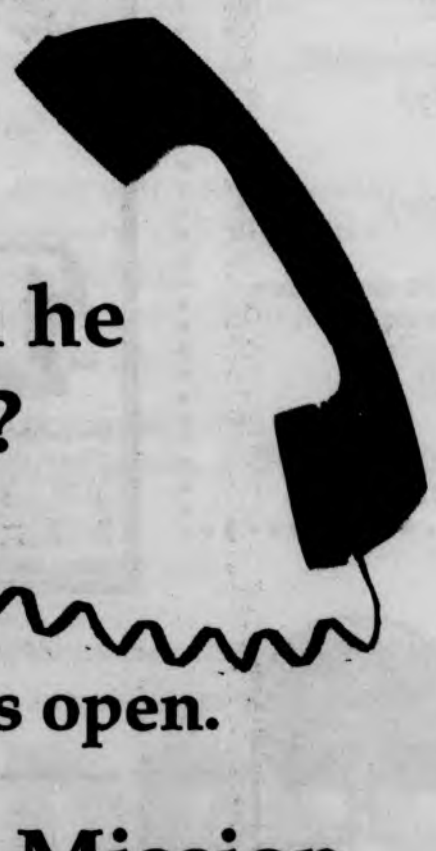
Cogill said no vehicle was seen. Police think the man ran to the wooded area behind the Rockland Trust.



Joyce Cox, a manager at Papa Gino's, said the women followed company policy by going to the bank together. Employees are not allowed to make a night deposit alone, she said. Cox added there would be no change in that policy because of the attempted robbery.

State police are drawing a color composite of the suspect who robbed Rockland Trust, March 6, Cogill said.

That man is described as about 5 ft. 11 ins. tall, blue-eyed, clean-cut, and in his early 20's.

Cogill said if anyone saw anything unusual before or after the attempted robbery March 17 to contact the Cohasset police at 383-1055.

Richard Grassie

Name: Richard Grassie.

Occupation: Patrolman.

Best day of your life: In this occupation, every day when I return safely home to my family.

Most embarrassing moment: Getting a rose last Valentine's Day while I was directing traffic at the crossing of the Joseph Osgood School. There was a line of traffic backed up and when I let this van go by, the driver rolled down the window, handed me a rose and drove off. The children were getting out of school, so all the parents and teachers were out there and they started clapping. I grabbed the plate number and later thanked the woman.

Best vacation: Bermuda, five years ago.

Goal: To do what's expected of me for the remainder of my career.

Favorite season: Summer.

Favorite holiday: Christmas.

Pet peeve: People who think just because we enforce the laws, we aren't human. When you do what we do, you share a family's grief or sadness. In other professions, you might hear one or two sad stories that affect you. We hear hundreds, and we take them home with us.

Favorite book: "History of Harley-Davidson Motorcycles."

Favorite movie: "Lethal Weapon."

Biggest worry: Safety—mine and the residents'.

School board complains about $40K cut

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

School board members Nancy Sandell and Ralph Kidder censured the advisory committee for its mandate that the schools absorb $41,000 of the recently negotiated teachers' pay raise.

"We settled these contracts in an incredibly reasonable manner... and now to have to cut more from our budget makes me extremely distressed," Sandell said Monday.

Last week the teachers' union agreed to a two-year contract which provides for no pay raise this year and a three percent increase next year.

The advisory committee said any negotiated pay raises above two percent must be achieved by reducing the existing school budget.

Superintendent Stephen Hart said in actuality the teachers' pay raise amounts to less than two percent.

"It (the raise) isn't even three percent because they are taking zero this year. It's really a 1.5 percent increase," Hart said.

School board member Ralph Kidder reflected his colleagues sentiments.

"I was extremely disappointed by the advisory committee's decision to ask the school committee to reduce the 1992-93 school department budget by about $40,000."

"The recomended 1992-93 budget represents a per pupil cost of about $5,100 — or about $400 less than the minimum level of $5,500 per pupil recomended by the current reform proposals at the state level..." he added.

Using a Boston Magazine study of schools across the state, Kidder said Cohasset ranks 170th to 180th in the state for resources spent on education.

"This budget simply should not be cut. But the school committee has no choice if we are to avoid a pitched battle at town meeting which could damage our ability to convince voters of the need to pass an override," he said.

The advisory committee and the school committee both hope that the voters support a $423,948 override.

Selectmen set the override election date for May 16.

The school committee needs the funds to balance its proposed $5.8 million budget.

Kidder was also critical of what he believes to be the changing role of the advisory committee.

"It strikes me that the advisory committee is starting to act as a policy-making body and not an advisory committee. People should be concerned about that."

In order to accommodate the $41,000 portion of the total $128,000 pay raise, the school committee discussed cutting the maintenance and technology assistants' positions from the proposed FY '93 budget.

Other areas which might be targeted for cuts include the special education program, the writing lab and building maintenance at the high school.

Chairman George Ford said the committee would review all options before deciding where the money is cut.

•In other news, the school committee praised the town of Hull on its innovative Saturday morning class schedule.

"When something interesting happens with our neighbor's schools, we should commend them and ask if there is a real need for that here," Ford said.

There are currently no proposals to adopt a Saturday class schedule in Cohasset, he added.

The committee also praised the winners of the Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards.

Marisol Berry and Katie Barret won gold medals, while Julia Workman received an honorable mention.

Coalition accepts waste plan as starting point

By Mary Calandrella
Mariner staff

Seven towns last week voted to form a planning committee to study regional disposal solutions.

Representatives from Weymouth, Scituate, Hingham, Duxbury, Marshfield, Rockland and Cohasset voted for formation.

Hanover abstained from voting until the proposal is brought before the town's selectmen.

Norwell and Hull representatives did not attend the March 11 meeting at Norwell Town Hall.

The regional planning committee follows last year's town meeting approvals to form local three-member disposal study committees.

The vote does not call for a financial commitment from the member towns.

Any decision to form a district must be approved by the town meetings of the individual towns.

Members also unanimously accepted the regional solid waste management plan developed by Tellus Institute as a starting point for discussions about the region.

The plan, which was developed for the South Shore Coalition and Metropolitan Area Planning Council, was was paid for by a grant from the state Department of Environmental Protection.

As it stands now, the plan calls for:

• Backyard composting programs in the 10 coalition communities and public education campaigns aimed at residents, businesses and government agencies and encouraging changes in consumption.

• Establishment of three permanent household hazardous waste collection facilities.

• Construct a 120-ton-a-day regional materials recovery facility (MRF) to receive and process all comingled recyclable materials collected from each of the communities.

• Leaves and yardwaste collected and composted at local composting sites in the coalition communities which already have such sites.

• Construct a municipal solid waste composting facility to handle material that remains after recycling and composting, except residues from the MRF and leaf composting facilities. Metals, additional glass and other inorganic, non-compostable materials will be removed here.

• The remaining material (21 percent) would be landfilled. No unprocessed material would be placed in a landfill.

Pelletier, who is also Marshfield's environmental engineer, has overseen creation of a similar district, with 18 members, in New Hampshire.

The planning committee can start address siting, eminent domain, voting rights, financing and bonding, he said.

Ken Pelletier, Marshfield's environmental engineer, recommended, as the next step, the regional planning committee appoint three subcommittees of five or six members:

• An agreement committee to look at already existing regional disposal district agreements and "start the procedure of cutting and pasting" to put together a proposed new district agreement.

• A budgetary committee to look at budgetary issues and develop a first year budget.

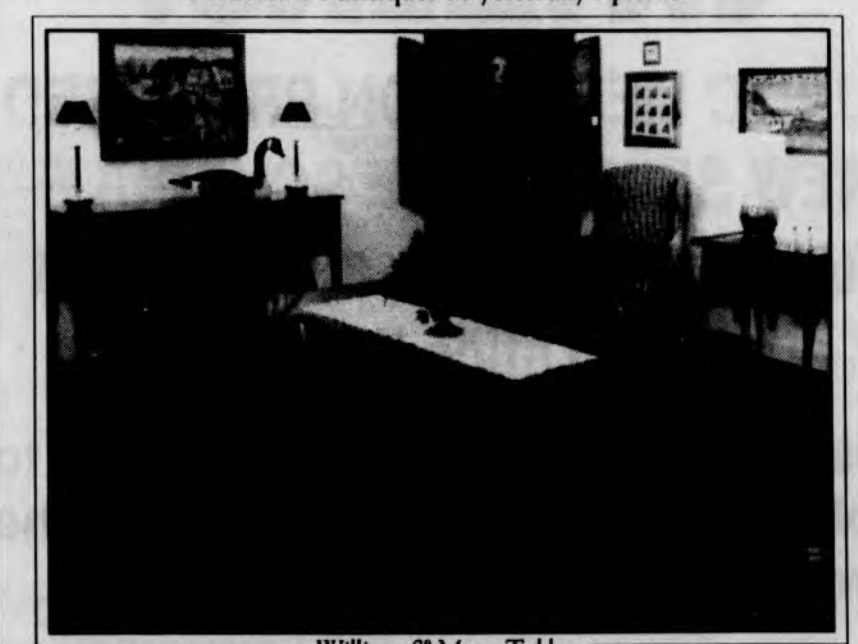
• An education committee to prepare the public to participate in whatever programs may be adopted.

• A procurement committee to "use the population of the 10 towns and the waste they produce to basically bargain with people." Some districts began joint purchasing before their districts were formed.

• A household hazardous waste committee. Members have repeatedly referred to the costs involved with household hazardous waste collection, Pelletier said.

"This is do-able right after the district gets together," he said.

Members will elect officers and establish committees at the next meeting of the regional refuse disposal planning committee will be held at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 1 at Norwell Town Hall.



Mario Bruzzone and Ryan Hubley share a book at the Deer Hill School library.

❑ A salute to Ensign Patrick J. O'Connor is in order this week! Ensign O'Connor has graduated from the Navy Supply Corps School in Athens, Georgia, and has reported to the USS Manitowoc at Little Creek, Virginia. Pat is a 1987 graduate of Cohasset High School (where he was known as the famous "Patty-O") and a 1991 graduate of Villanova University.

❑ Have you heard the latest on the Cohasset High School Ski Team? They went to the States...Pat Suhrbier, Doug Schultz, Jason DuMoulin, Peter Collins, Bob Stansell, Mike Equi for the boys, and Alissa Sexton and Bonnie Krueger for the girls. Credit must go to Mr. Stansell, Mrs Suhrbier, and Jack Dane for making the whole thing possible. The team (boys) finished 13th in the State Championships in Alpine Skiing at Berkshire East. Good job, guys, happy to report that you had a great season too.

❑ Our daughter Kim and her husband John just returned from San Diego, California, where they had the pleasure of visiting with Walt and Nanci Sweeney. They report that they are doing great, they are living on their 50-foot houseboat and loving it. Walt is in the silk-screening business with Lance Allworth, and Nanci is Nanci...always busy, happy, and loving Walt. They wish to be remembered to all of their friends in Cohasset. We all hope they plan a visit soon.

❑ Who here hasn't seen Bob Magner with a smile on his face? Have you noticed that it is broader than ever? It is, and with such a double reason...Bob and Jean's daughter, Chrissy, along with son-in-law Gary, gave birth to twins last week...if you have seen Bob and Jean with their grandson Sean, you know how wonderfully fond of grandchildren they already are...well, welcome Brian and Brendan to the clan!! Yes, "little Chrissy" had twins, which makes three sons under two. Oh, WOW! Bob Magner Jr., is there with them, and a super uncle he is, so those boys are in for the best up-bringing that anyone will ever meet. Congratulations go to all of you, enjoy those babies!

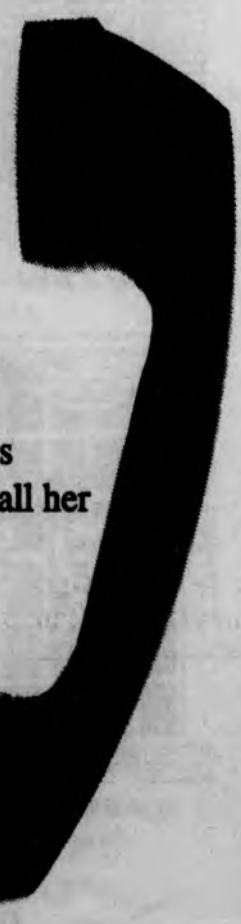
❑ Suzanne Kecskemety, of our fair town, was recently named to the Dean's list at Nichols College for the fall semester. Suzanne is a junior majoring in public administration and is the daughter of Jack and Susan Kecskemety of 7 Cushing Road, Cohasset. She is a graduate of Cohasset High School.

❑ Real happy news this week. Joan Shockman is really coming home and feeling ever-so-much better. For those of us that know and love Joan, she has had a long siege with a mean virus, but she is on the mend and due home next week, and we cannot wait! Hurry, Joan, you are loved, you are missed "around town," and we want you to feel super.

❑ The Little Harbor Bookstore has a great announcement to make – they have expanded! The carpenters, floor-sanders and painters have come and gone, the new bookshelves are installed and more books, toys, etc. are arriving every day. Stop by and check. If they don't have what you want they can order it. They are located across from the Cohasset Hardware Store.

❑ South Shore Hospital Cardiologist, Director of its Cardiac Care Unit and Cohasset resident Andrew Merliss, M.D., is using American technology to save the lives of young mothers and fathers across the globe. Dr. Merliss' most recent medical "good will" mission was to Cordova, Argentina, where he led a medical crew of five physicians, nurses, technologists and support staff on a crusade to install pace makers, conduct valvulo-plasty-heart valve repair surgery and train Argentinean physicians on various cardiology procedures for Project Pacer International. Project Pacer, a Needham-based, non-profit organization which was founded to bring medical technology and educational services to under-developed countries, transports physicians across the globe. During Dr. Merliss' four years with Project Pacer, he has traveled to India, Bolivia, Ecuador and Argentina. Most of the projects' 15 physicians, nurses and support staff are from the Boston area. All members pay for their own air fare and lodging.

Merliss, a South Shore Hospital cardiologist since 1981, says the project benefits both patient and doctor. He feels the trips help him balance the international medical scale.



"The medical situation in these third-world countries is so terrible that only the very wealthy can afford medical care. Its gratifying to know the technologies and services which the American population takes for granted, are providing immeasurable benefits where they are desperately needed."

Dr. Merliss is planning his next medical excursion to India.

Hello, Cohasset

I've discovered Cohasset.

It's not that I didn't know how quaint the town center is; or how picturesque the harbor and how truly New England the Town Common are.

And there are Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue with their spectacular vistas and homes that could make a Hollywood producer envious.

But in my very busy life, I've been racing through Cohasset along Route 3A stopping only to drop off my dry cleaning and buy a hot cup of coffee.

In short, even though I live next door in Scituate, I've been missing your lovely village.

So as your new community editor for the Cohasset Mariner, it's been my pleasure to 'rediscover' Cohasset over the past two weeks.

I've already been charmed by the friendliness of your residents.

Together with staff reporter, Dori Dwyer, and photographers John Stobierski and Alan Chapman, we promise to give you our very best. We are ably assisted by Around Town writer, Sallyann Chatterton, cartoonist Jim Hamilton, and our new sports' correspondent, Paula Knowles.

So whether it's news, feature stories, or photography, the Mariner plans to have Cohasset covered.

But the most important part of the Cohasset Mariner is you. All those tidbits about your churches, groups, organizations, programs, and clubs provide a valuable service to the community. We also welcome announcements about weddings and engagements.

If you have editorial copy, you may leave it at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy or Cohasset News in Cohasset village. For you convenience, items can also be sent to P.O. Box 71, Cohasset 02025.

The drop spots and mail box are checked three times a week. And while it never hurts to get your items in early, we are changing our deadline to noon Tuesday. We think that noon Monday is just a little too early for the paper, which is published on Thursday. It will give those of you who have busy weekends time to gather your thoughts and get your news in.

I hope you will feel free to call me at 837-3500 with questions. If I am unavailable, please leave a message with our receptionist and I will get back to you.

We also welcome ideas for photo opportunities. However, we share our photographers with the other Mariner papers so the sooner you let us know, the better.

Remember, no local event or issue is too small not to be of significance.

If you care about it, we will too.

Ripley Rd. celebrates birthdays

To the Editor:

This March is a very special month here at Ripley Road Nursing Home. Three residents celebrate birthdays along with our administrator Mrs. Thelma Harrold.

Ruth Green formerly of Hull will be 102 at the end of the month. She is marvelled at by all with her spunky personality and her sharp wit. She thoroughly enjoys life and those around her.

Margaret (Maggie) Keith our "Scottish lass," will be 92 and Dorothy Ripley will be 87.

Mrs. Thelma Harrold turned 80, March 10. She was surprised by family and friends with a celebration at PJ's Country House as well as being presented with a citation from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts' House of Representatives by Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray.

The citation congratulated Mrs. Harrold for her birthday as well as her dedicated and caring service to the elderly at the Ripley Road Nursing Home during her thirty-one years there. Mrs. Harrold is a fine example to us all.

She is very involved and active within the community as well as being a fair and supportive administrator here at Ripley Road.

Other events to look forward to this month are March 20 a group of residents and I will be off to enjoy an afternoon lunch at Kimball's by the Sea, and on March 19 Mrs. Helen Watson will be joining us to celebrate our March birthdays.

Denise L. Murphy,
Activity Director
Ripley Rd. Nursing Home

Regionalized services make sense

letters

To the Editor:

My fellow Cohasset taxpayers, do you realize that there are approximately 1350 persons (23 percent of our adult population) that are either retired or over 62 years of age and living on fixed incomes, 220 people are collecting unemployment, and 44 percent of us have not received a pay raise or in most cases have taken a pay cut in the last few years to keep our jobs? But our elected and appointed boards see only what they want to see (their own agenda) and with all of their wisdom and knowledge they have not gotten the message, we (the 70 percent) are hurting.

We are told that if we don't spend more here or there our property values will go down; but at the rate that we are going who will be able to afford to live here and pay the taxes.

What should we expect from Cohasset Town Government?

Regionalized services that can be done (not next year or the year after - NOW).

Re-open all union contracts without the use of lawyers; let's share the burden; when times were good we increased benefits; now that times are bad, we should talk. Don't negotiate any contract longer than one year during these hard times and if necessary make the hard decisions to roll back salaries and/or benefit packages. It is far better to make cuts in this manner than lose dedicated and hard working employees.

Use existing reports that have been completed in the past to help make changes (don't appoint more study committees). Make changes NOW! We do not want to hear the excuses: it is too much trouble, it is not our job, it is not in our contract, it is easier said than done.

We want our elected officials to be "doers," people who are not afraid to negotiate union contracts, regionalize our services and to make other creative decisions and clean up the inefficiencies in the system.

Charity should begin in Cohasset

chamber chatter

By Paula Knowles

Candidates' night is over, the election (April 11) and Town Meeting (April 4) are still a few weeks away, and the Easter Bunny hasn't even looked at this year's route yet. So this week, I think, we will digress just a bit from the usual.

Not long ago I listed some of the donations made by the Chamber of Commerce. You will find similar lists voted on by most groups in town – Rotary, the Police Association, the PSO, and, to a much larger extent, the South Shore Music Circus.

Add to this the number of businesses that support so many groups and fund-raising efforts in town. The high school year book and the Rotary phone book are filled with paid acknowledgements or ads that are taken yearly by businesses not as advertising, but simply as a donation to a cause.

The Stop & Shop not only gives many non-profit groups space to sell baked goods or raffle tickets, but also donates hundreds, if not thousands, of dollars every year to Cohasset groups asking for food or gift certificates for charitable events or fundraisers.

Sea and Cheese and French Memories routinely donate baked goods to area shelters and food banks. And where would all of our fund-raising auctions be without our banks, restaurants and realtors with their savings bonds and gift certificates?

But businesses can't do it all. Since Prop. 2-1/2, a lot of government and school maintenance projects have been rejected or shoved aside. And necessary upgrades of machinery or technology have been postponed indefinitely – to wait until "the political climate" is better.

Well, the political climate is not going to get better. People still want the changes they were voting for when 2-1/2 was voted in.

And they are willing to wait far longer than many politicians bargained on to get those changes started. I applaud the resolve and dedication being shown by the voters. But it is time to temper that resolve with a little reality.

One couple in town did just that a few weeks ago when they donated the money for a new computer to the fire department. With the swish of the pen, they gave that department both the tools to keep track of their budget, scheduling and clerical work, and also took away any excuse for not doing those tasks efficiently.

We have town offices that are still lacking simple PC units for day-to-day record keeping. Town buildings need roofs, paint, siding, windows, etc. The high school needs a locker room, the small gym renovated, junior high basketball teams, more computers and computer teachers and training.

We have two teachers trained to do maintenance and repair on Apple computers – wouldn't it make sense to donate your out-of-date, unused, or "injured" units to the schools? Tax write-off for you; another work station for them.

If you were thinking about leaving an endowment to your college alma mater, why not change that plan just a tiny bit. If you endowed the high school or school system instead, you might be doing far more to ensure a better education for a greater number of students.

Worried about the future of the arts in today's society? How about the sciences, languages, plain old "readin', writin' and 'rithmatic"? You can donate to or endow specific areas of study in lieu of giving a non-specific gift.

The Harbormaster, Town Clerk, Recreation Department, Tree and Park – wherever your interest lies, there is a tax deductible gift waiting to be received.

Consider it. Charity, as they say, begins at home. And home, to most of us, is Cohasset.

candidates' corner

Merle Brown

Merle Brown has announced his candidacy for one of the two selectman seats to be filled in the April 11 town election.

Brown points to a long history of town service as a background for his first run for elective office. He has served on the conservation committee for the last 11 years and currently is its chairman. Brown is also a long-time member of the recycling committee and was a member of the map study committee.

He has served in many capacities in the town's Boy Scout program, as scoutmaster, Explorer advisor and committee chairman.

Brown believes that living within the municipal budget is the biggest problem facing the town. "Although many officials believe that Proposition 2-1/2 has put a stranglehold on cities and towns, I believe it gives them the opportunity to stop waste and run more efficiently," Brown said.

He thinks that overrides may be necessary, but it is up to the proponents to prove their case to the taxpayer.

"The people of the town must be made aware of proposed cuts and their impact on the level of services. After all, we can't blame the voters for turning down an override if they are not properly informed," he said.

To that end, he will push for complete communication among all boards, committees and town employees. He would suggest an annual or biannual meeting among boards and department heads, each of whom would contribute a topic for discussion.

Brown wants boards and committees to be more accountable to citizens and would like to see a bylaw requiring that all minutes of all public meetings be approved and filed within one month.

Merle Brown

Brown is a lifelong resident of Cohasset. He and his wife, Joan, have lived at 546 Beechwood St. for 29 years. His daughter, Marcy, and son, Jeffrey, are graduates of Cohasset High School.

Brown graduated from Cohasset High School and has a degree in mechanical engineering from Northeastern University.

Ralph Kidder

Ralph Kidder, a member of the Cohasset School Committee, has announced his candidacy for re-election.

In making the announcement, Kidder said, "The committee has achieved a number of significant accomplishments during the past three years, including the setting and review of its own annual goals, the institution of management by objectives throughout the school system, increased R&D efforts in curriculum and teaching effectiveness, studies of regionalization, transportation and the kindergarten entry age, participation in the establishment of a Local Education Fund to seek alternative resources for the schools and participation in the Drug and Alcohol Committee's efforts to increase awareness of substance abuse."

"Most importantly in these difficult economic times," Kidder continued, "we have provided the town with an efficient and effective school system. With per-pupil expenditures that rank Cohasset about 170th to 180th in the state, our students, teachers and administrators have consistently achieved outcomes that rank Cohasset in the top 10 to 20 school systems in the Commonwealth."

Kidder holds an undergraduate degree from Lehigh University, a masters degree in education from Duquesne University, an MBA from Boston University and is currently enrolled in the doctoral program at B.U.'s School of Management.

Having served as a teacher and administrator for over 15 years, he is currently Director of Finance for the School of Law at Boston University. Kidder and his wife, Linda Keller, are the parents of three children, Elisabeth, 12, Sarah, 9 and Ian, 7.

Election policy

No candidates are endorsed by the Mariner Newspapers and no preferential treatment is offered any candidate seeking public office.

Candidates' Corner

The Mariner will publish a column called Candidates' Corner for candidates to make statements pertinent to the election. Candidates' Corner will end two weeks before the election.

Candidates' Corner is open to all candidates for all town boards. The rules are:

1. Candidate statements must be brief - not more than one typed page, double-spaced. Statements will be cut by editors if they are too long.

2. Statements must be typed or legibly written and include the candidate's name and telephone number for verification. They should be clearly marked to the attention of Candidates' Corner.

3. Statements must be submitted by the deadline of Monday noon for publication that week.

4. Statements should be used as a forum to address issues, not to attack personalities. The newspaper reserves the right to edit any material deemed libelous or tasteless.

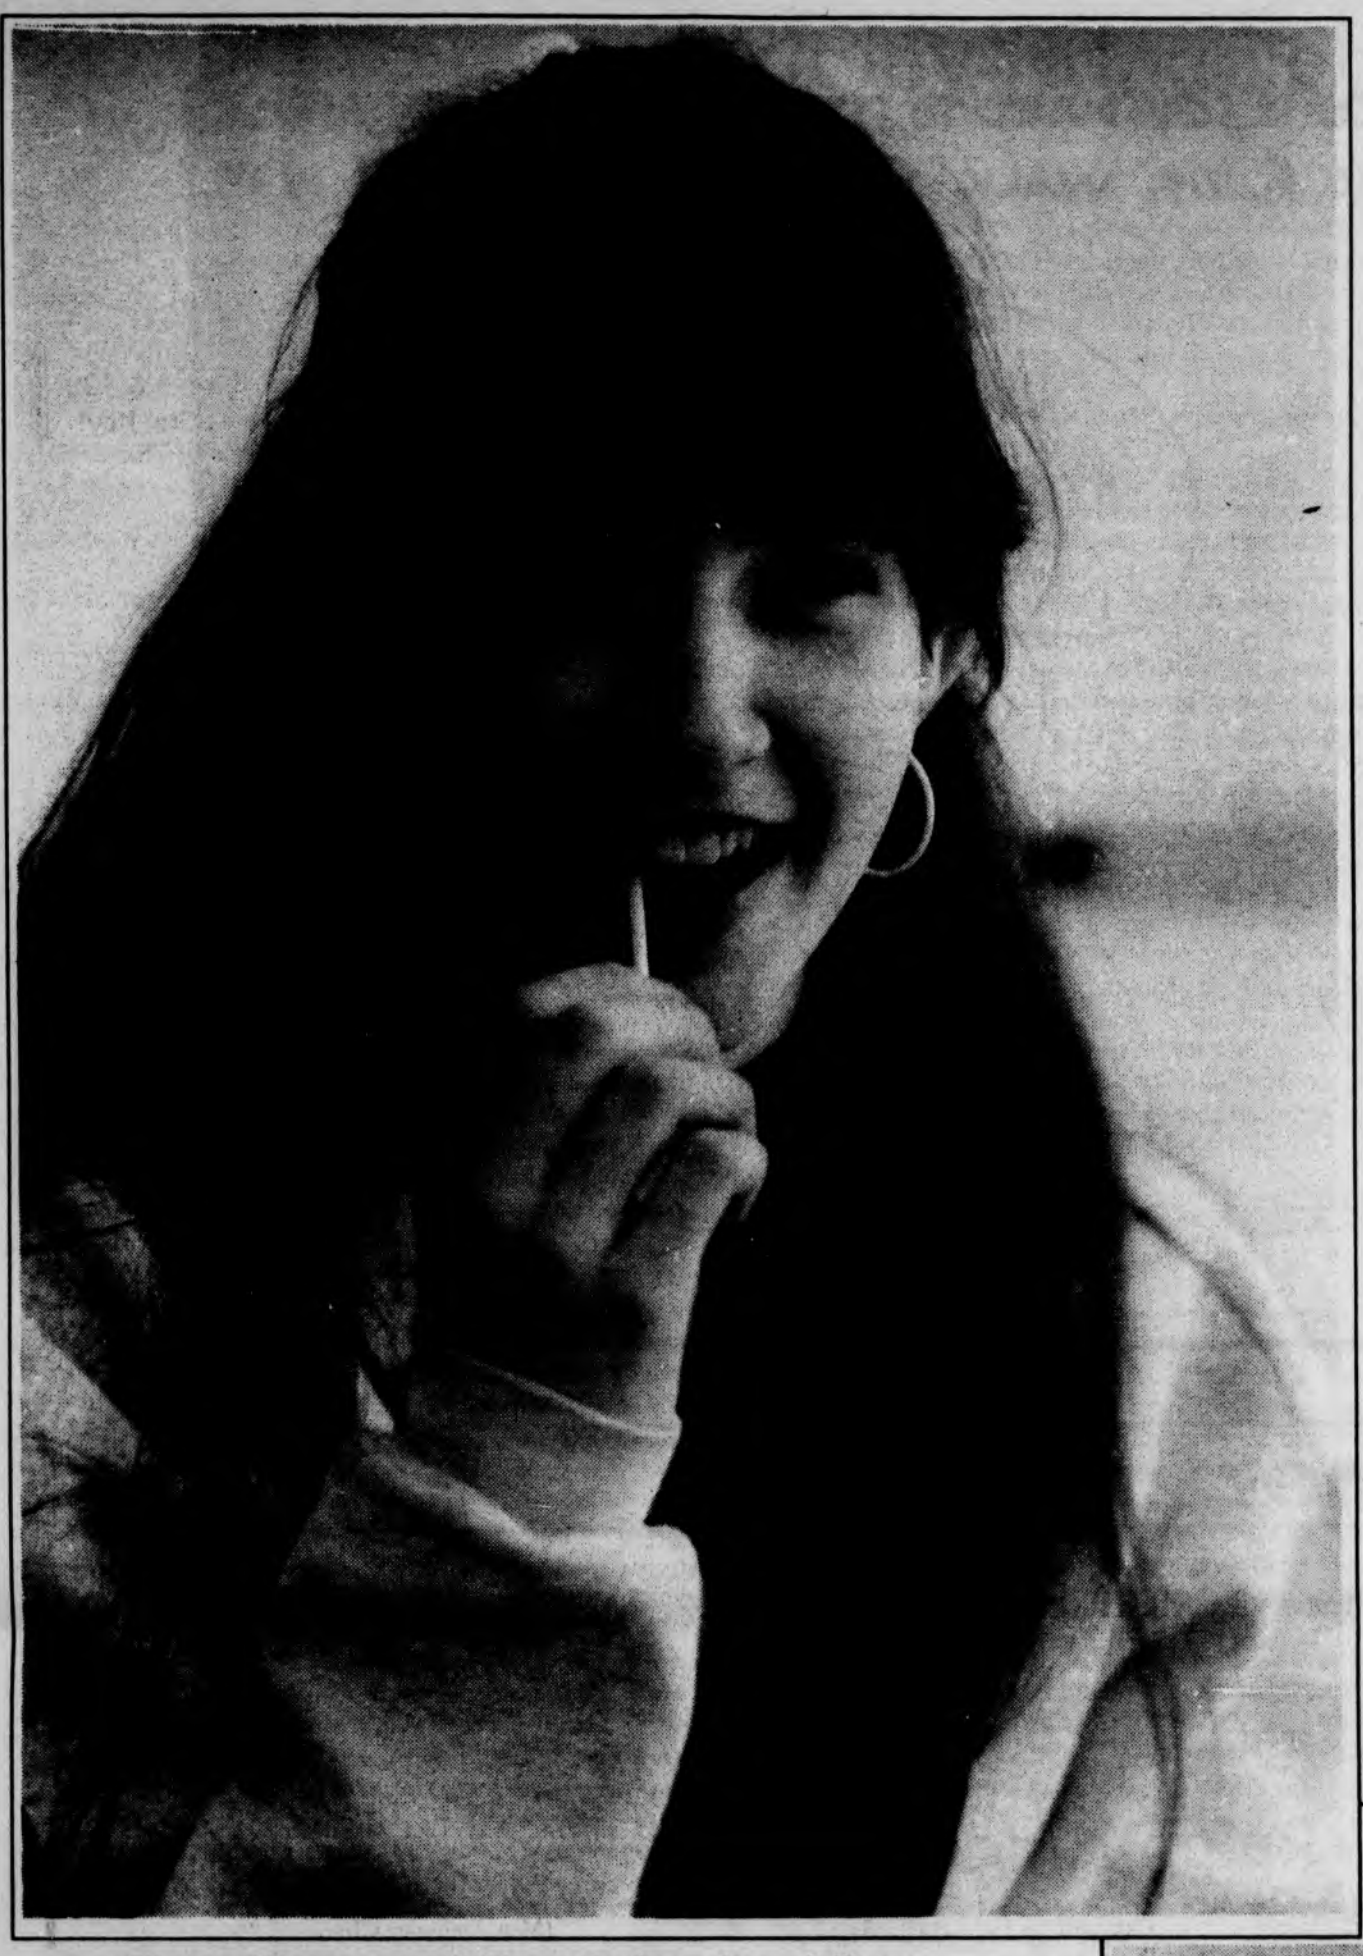
5. Candidates' Corner will be published on a space-available basis. Priority will be given to those candidates in contested races. However, we will run all statements from candidates in a specific contest, or none at all. No more than one statement per candidate will be published each week.

Letters

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates during the campaign.

The Mariner will publish other letters on campaign issues but all politically-oriented letters will be cut off two weeks before the election.

News coverage



Any event throughout the campaign which is deemed to be newsworthy will be handled by the editorial staff. The Mariner will strive to be evenhanded and fair to all candidates in the news coverage it provides prior to the election.

In the week prior to the election, the Mariner will publish Candidate Profiles - brief biographies about the candidates running for major offices, including selectmen and school committee.

These biographies will include a photo of each candidate. If the candidate has a suitable glossy, he or she may submit that for publication. Otherwise candidates should contact the Mariner to arrange to have a photo taken by a member of the staff. That photo will be for the exclusive use of the Mariner.

Candidates are also encouraged to advertise their campaign in this newspaper. For more information about our advertising rates, please contact Judy Almeida at 1-800-649-6661 or 837-3500 .

Hamlet is a woman in new production

On March 21 and 22, Hamlet will utter "To be or not to be?" and those familiar words we read in high school or heard Mel Gibson utter on the screen, but there will be a basic difference: they will be delivered by a female. The audience at Cohasset High School will be the first to see a full-scale production of Terrence Ortwein's "And Flights of Angels," an adaptation of Shakespeare's Hamlet.

Ortwein's work attempts to make "Hamlet" more accessible to a broad audience without sacrificing the heart and soul of the play. His preparation of the "new" script began last spring when he worked with students at Choate Rosemary Hall in Wallingford, Ct., to revise Shakespeare's play. After much discussion, some scenes were cut or merged, and lines were deleted. Shakespeare's original vocabulary was left untouched. In July, theatre students in Choate's summer theatre program worked with Ortwein and Ron Emmons, director of Cohasset's drama program, to further revamp the play, bringing it down to half of its original length.

"And Flights of Angels," the title of the revised play, comes from the words of Horatio, Hamlet's only loyal friend, who says after the prince's death, "And flights of angels sing thee to thy rest." Ortwein's adaptation of the play begins at the end of Shakespeare's work. Hamlet, before his death, urges Horatio, who is contemplating following his friend into death, to live to tell his story. It is Horatio then who stage manages a retelling of Hamlet's dilemma as it is rehearsed by a group of actors.

There are differences in this production of "And Flights of Angels," however. The most noticeable of these is the inclusion of males in the cast. The roles of the dying Hamlet and of Horatio are played by two males; however the acting company that rehearses the retelling of Hamlet's story is made up exclusively of females. Even Horatio, himself, is played by a female while the male who played him in the first scene stays on stage to cue actors' entrances, remind them of their lines, point out stage positions and move scenery pieces. If this all sounds terribly confusing, be assured that reports from this summer indicate quite the opposite to be true; students at Choate, who either had not read "Hamlet" or had had difficulty with the original play, found the adaptation easier to understand.

Appearing in the cast will be Jason Hunter as the dying Hamlet; John Kisiel, the original Horatio; Ali Welz, the King; Caroline deLima, the Queen; Erin McAllister, the second Hamlet; Rebecca Kirk, Laertes; Carole Smith, Polonius; Alison Ritz, Ophelia; Katie O'Sullivan, the second Horatio; Meredith Hansen, the Ghost; Erin Lennon, Guildenstern; Caitlin Connolly, Rosencrantz; Amy Silvia, Player Director; Cecilia Candia, Player Prologue; Mary Ellen Rayment, Player Queen; Jill Day, Courtier; Tracy Hyde, Player King; Jemilah Afshar, Player Villain; Keri Richards Souffrain, Priest; Elizabeth Devaney, Gravedigger; and Holly Russell, Osric.

Terrence Ortwein, the author of "And Flights of Angels," is director of the Paul Mellon Arts Center at Choate Rosemary Hall. A graduate of Dartmouth College, he has had one of his plays selected for performance at the Eugene O'Neill Theatre. He is also the author of "Act Three, Scene Five," a one-act play that has been produced in over 40 states.

Performances of the play will be held Saturday and Sunday, March 21 and 22, in the Cohasset High School Auditorium with tickets selling for $4 in advance and $5 at the door. Performance will begin at 8 p.m. As a special event, the adaptor of the work will attend the Saturday evening performance and participate in a question and answer session after the final curtain.

Teen Depot penny drive set

The Teen Depot, the new teen drop-in center located at 9 Depot Ct., is organizing a "Dump Your Pennies On Us" fund-raising drive scheduled for the weekend of April 4-5.

Centered around "Dump Sites" located at the town landfill and the Stop & Shop, the fund raiser will focus on collecting the jars and dishes of pennies and loose change that most households have in their kitchens and bedrooms.

"We're not asking for checks or raffle money," said one of the teen organizers. "We just want the pennies that most people just put aside and forget anyway."

The Bank of Boston is providing the group with a money sorting machine to make handling the change easier and more efficient, and the Police Department has offered the station as a "counting house."

Home pick-up can also be arranged in advance by calling the Teen Depot at 383-1177.

Cohasset High rowers compete in snow row

A team of five Cohasset High School rowers and five men combined for a successful race in the Feb. 22 Snow Row in Hull. Competing in one of the Hull Life Saving Museum's French Gigs, the mixed team finished the 3.75 mile course in second place overall out of a field of 29 boats, and second in the 'coxed boats' category out of a total of six.

Chris Bartow, Mike Equi, John Kisiel, Adam McNamara and Doug Schultz teamed up with CHS Alternative School Director Jack Buckley, Mike McNabb, and Hull rowers Jim Valencourt, coxswain, Matt Tobin and Don Ritz. They finished the triangular course in 43:30 minutes.

This was the 12th running of the Snow Row, traditionally the first race of the open ocean rowing competitive season.

The high school rowing team triumphed in the Head of the Weir race in November, and again in the Chelsea Creek "Icebreaker" race in December in the "John Warren II," a 26-foot Monomy surf boat refurbished last year by the Alternative School. The boat is now in dry-dock at the school and will be sanded, painted and repaired as needed by the students before going back in the water for spring training and racing.

A fund-raising appeal is underway for the high school rowing program for marine supplies, safety equipment and a small deficit from last year's start-up. A 'Friends of Cohasset Rowing' group is assisting in this effort. Those wishing to support the rowing program may send a check, payable to "HLSM/Cohasset Rowing," to the Hull Life Saving Museum, Box 221, Hull, MA 02045.

Lacrosse season starts March 31

The Cohasset High School varsity lacrosse team begins its second season with an ambitious schedule that includes Eastern Massachusetts powers Brookline and Falmouth.

The Skippers, who began practice Monday, March 16, open their regular season March 31 at Salem High School. Preseason scrimmages with North Reading, Austin Prep and the Concord-Carlisle junior varsity are set for March 24 and March 26 respectively.

"We've lost three-year starters in the goal, on defense and at attack," notes head coach Ken Ekberg, who counts 18 returning players who saw action in 1991.

"Our defense will be young, so we'll need more scoring from the midfield."

Sophomore attackman Charlie Endris (15 goals, six assists in 1991) will lead the offense. Endris, who has started for the Skippers since seventh grade, will be helped by a veteran midfielder, Doug Ellinger (10 goals, three assists).

Will Adams (nine goals, two assists); Chip Anderson (two goals); Brooks Doten (one goal, one assist); Adam McNamara, Mark Mercurio, Eric Drysdale, and Ben Chittick all saw considerable action last year.

Sophomore Brandon DeVoe will take over the goal from graduated East. Mass. all-star Travis Coley, and will likely be backed by senior Eric Waal, who makes the switch from attack. Juniors Max Nivaud and Doug Schultz, and sophomores David Leahy and Sean Milligan will share starting duties.

March 24, at Austin Prep (scrimmage); March 26, Concord-Carlisle junior varsity (s); March 31, at Salem; April 3, Masconomet; April 10 at Boston College High School; April 14 at Wellesley; April 20 at Brookline; April 22, Boston College; April 24 at Masconomet; April 30 at Falmouth; May 2 at Waltham; May 8, Salem; May 12, Wellesley; May 15, Waltham; May 18, Cape Cod Academy (Varsity B game); May 21, Duxbury (Varsity B).

CHS ski team completes best season ever

The 1992 Cohasset High School ski team has just completed its best season in its nine-year history.

The men's team finished second in the small school division of the Massachusetts Bay East Ski League and qualified to send a five-man team to the state high school ski championships at Berkshire East Ski Area March 4.

Dover-Sherborn again dominated the division placing well ahead of Cohasset

The five-member squad was comprised of Pat Suhrbier, Doug Schultz, Jason Domoulin, Peter Collins, and Bobby Stansell.

This was the first year that the Cohasset men qualified as a team, although Cohasset has been represented in previous years by individuals. This is the third year that Pat Suhrbier has represented Cohasset in the state championships. Individuals placing in the top ten in their division qualify for the state ski championships.

Cohasset is represented by both a men's and women's team in the Massachusetts Bay East Ski League which holds races for ten area high schools at the Blue Hills Ski Area. These races are in the slalom format. In the state championships races are held in both slalom and giant slalom.

The women's team had two members qualify for the state championships; freshman Alissa Sexton and sophomore Bonnie Krueger. Sexton and Krueger teamed up in the last league race of the season to give the Cohasset women a second-place in division for their best performance in two years. Sexton finished fifth overall with a third in division for a personal best. Krueger skied consistently in every meet assuring herself of a trip to the states.

Pat Suhrbier consistently placed in the top ten all season. His best performance came in the season's second race with a fourth overall. Significant point totals were turned in by both Doug Schultz and Jason Domoulin. The Cohasset men demonstrated depth with other scoring performances by Pete Collins, Mike Equi, Bobby Stansell and Sam Goedecke.

Eric Waal was the captain of the men's team. He was unable to race because of a training injury.

The Cohasset High School ski team is coached by Jack Dane. Skiers interested in joining the team for 1993 should contact him or one of the captains.

Awards dinner wraps up year for wrestlers

By Paula Knowles
Mariner correspondent

Coaches, parents, school officials and team members all turned out Thursday night at the First Parish Church to honor members of the 1992/93 Cohasset High School Wrestling Team.

After enjoying a pot luck dinner provided by the team's parent boosters, everyone sat back to enjoy the evening as Coach Torin Sweeney led them back along the trail of victory laid down by this award-winning team.

Sweeney praised the efforts of his entire team, and continually stated just how proud he was of every individual. Senior plaques were awarded to tri-captains Jed Terry, Carlo Lagrottieria and Jason Thayer, and High School Principal Meg Gallegher presented awards to league All-Stars Ray Jones, Nate Fiore and Steve Harrington.

After Coaches Sweeney and Rick Rourke thanked the team for their tremendous effort in bringing Cohasset its best season yet, the team took their turn by acknowledging the dedication and talent of their coaches, and by presenting assistant principal Jack DiLorenzo with a pair of wrestling shoes as special thanks for the help he gave the team throughout the season.

Special notice was given to Ray Jones and Nate Fiore for their unbelievable season finishes at the New England Championships, and to Ryan Freeman who went further in state competition than any other Cohasset freshman before him. Special awards were presented to the following:

- Most Valuable Player: Ray Jones
- Rookie of the Year: Andy Church
- Coaches Award: Dan Baird
- Peter Culte Award for Dedication: Nathan Fiore
- Most Improved: Brandon DeVoe
- Best J.V.: Mike Lennon; Max Nivaud
- Team Points: Steve Harrington
- Most Pins: Jed Terry
- Take Down: Ryan Freeman
- Fastest Pin (11 seconds): Ben Chittick

Also receiving letters or certificates were: Carlo Lagrottieria, Jason Thayer, Robin Ordelhiede, Sascha Ordelhiede, Chris Stevens, Brian Duffy, Nathan Caldwell, Brian Sasso, Brett Leahy, Todd Harrington, Grant Emde and Kevin O'Donnell.

CDC to perform

"The Women" is a satire about the Park Avenue ladies of wealth and leisure of the 1930's, written by someone who knew them firsthand—Clare Booth Luce. The play boasts 43 characters, all women, and richly expresses just about every aspect of femininity one can imagine—much of it very unflattering. The dialogue is barbed, catty, and downright feline.

Cohasset Drama Club will mount its production of "The Women" on March 27, 28 and 29 and April 3 and 4 at the Cohasset Town Hall. For this production, the group is constructing a revolving stage to facilitate quick set changes (the play has 13 scenes!). Director Sherry Campbell says the show will be stylized, art deco, glamorous, funny and sexy. The cast consists of 25 actresses from all over the South Shore area—all now sharpening their claws to be in top form for the play's opening! Tickets available from the Cohasset Community Centre, phone 383-0088.

Newcomer's fashion show

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomer's Club will hold its annual Spring Fashion Show and Luncheon at noon, April 4, at Kimball's by the Sea in Cohasset Harbor.

Fashions will be provided by Gates of North Scituate.

The spring fashion show is the club's main fund-raiser for its scholarship fund which benefits graduating seniors from the Cohasset-Scituate area.

Tickets are $20 and are available by calling Tanya Stenson at 545-6127. Raffle tickets will be available at Stop & Shop in Cohasset and Purity Supreme in Scituate March 28 and 29.

First prize is a two-night stay at the Sheraton Boston hotel. Other prizes include dinner for two at the Red Lion Inn, and gift certificates to King Jewelers and Buttonwood Books.

Book signing set

Former Cohasset resident, Jeff Giles, will be signing and reading from his book Back In The Blue House, Saturday, March 21, from 3 to 5 p.m. at Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset.

Back In The Blue House takes us inside the family of Jeff Giles. Set mostly in Cohasset, this light-hearted, but reflective narrative follows the Giles family through 25 years.

Mr. Giles grew up in Cohasset and was graduated from Brown University. He writes the "Night Life" column for the New Yorker, and is a regular contributor to Rolling Stone, Entertainment Weekly, Interview, US, New York Woman, Mademoiselle and other publications. He lives outside of New York City.

For further information, please call Buttonwood Books and Toys at 383-BOOK.

Furniture revitalization

The recreation department will accept telephone registrations for a furniture restoration-refinishing-revitalization to be taught by Kenneth Sargent of Cohasset Country Workshop. Call the recreation office at 383-6791 to register.

Sessions are five weeks and meet on Wednesday or Saturday mornings from 9 to 11 a.m. The fee for this ten-hour program is $53 per person, and classes are restricted in size to allow for individual attention.

Participants should select a piece of furniture for class work. Participants will not only learn the arts involved with restoration and refinishing, but will also have a completed piece of furniture by the end of the session.

Author on cable

On Thursday, March 19, host Wigmore Pierson's guest, in the first segment on Pierson to Person, will be Marshfield author Patricia Mandell who has written a book called Massachusetts: Off the Beaten Path, about interesting places and restaurants to visit.

The second segment guest will be John P. Manning and Richard J. DeAgazio who will be discussing the state of the economy, the commercial and affordable housing markets from their perspectives as partners in Boston Capital Partners, Inc.

The Pierson to Person television show is broadcast live each Thursday, 8-9 p.m., from the North Scituate studio of Continental Cablevision. The show airs on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset and Scituate.

The public is invited to be part of the studio audience each Thursday evening and those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road by 7:30 p.m. For information call 545-0643.

Harbor policy may help move mooring list

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

'It doesn't make much sense to cancel someone's mooring and let them sit there for four years.'
— Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson on reassigning cancelled moorings.

With nearly 300 on the waiting list, assigning moorings can be a big headache.

But a proposed amendment to the town's harbor regulations should "help keep the tempers down," Harbormaster Irving E. Gadow, Jr. said.

Selectmen are considering a new policy which would allow the harbormaster to reassign those moorings which have been cancelled due to non-payment or non-use, or for any other legitimate reason, Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson explained.

When a mooring is cancelled, the mooring holder has a right to appeal to the Department of Environmental Protection, Henderson said.

But in the past, when a mooring was cancelled — the town allowed the mooring holder to keep the mooring through the appeals process — which can take years.

The new policy — which is permitted under state law — would allow the harbormaster to reassign the mooring conditionally — pending the outcome of the appeal.

"It doesn't make much sense to cancel someone's mooring and let them sit there for four years," Henderson told selectmen.

No liability is involved because the new mooring holder would know the conditions.

School 'grandpa' shares games, fun

Dr. Wayne DeWald proves that you don't need Nintendo to hold a youngster's attention these days.

The septuagenarian is a volunteer teacher at the Osgood School and introduces games the computer-generation have rarely, if ever, been exposed to.

They are the same games DeWald played as a child.

"We play cribbage. You learn about math and have fun too," first-grader Ryan Johnson gushed.

Classmate Vanessa Hardin preferred a card game DeWald recently taught.

"I like the 'adding cards.' I like the math."

DeWald is gratified to know he is accomplishing the goals he had in mind when he decided to teach the games to Faith Maloney's first-grade class.

"I didn't have Nintendo as a child. We had to invent games," he said.

"I want to show the children a few things we learned,

Parish petitions town twice in 300 years

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

In the early 1700's, residents of 'Conohasset,' as it was called, tired of the long walk or horseback ride to the First Parish of Hingham.

So they petitioned the town of Hingham to build their own church.

Much history has passed in the more than 250 years since. Cohasset broke off from its neighbor. And in 1824, Massachusetts "disestablished" the church — commonly known as the separation of church and state.

The meeting house of the First Parish in Cohasset stayed with the congregation and the Common became the property of the town.

Now, the people of First Parish will come before the town again.

In an article in the town warrant, parishioners are asking for an easement for the purpose of constructing a septic system under the common.

Plans are to construct a small robbing room with a lavatory in a nook in the church tower where the minister and organist could avail themselves.

Although it wouldn't be open to the public, the pastor wouldn't close the lavatory to those in need.

Have you seen Casey?

Casey, a Keeshond, which looks like a small, compact Huskie, was hit by a car during Monday's snowstorm and hasn't returned home.

Casey is salt-and-pepper in color and has a fox-like, curled pluming white tail.

He was hit on Green St. near where the corner of Jerusalem Rd. meets N. Main St. He ran across N. Main and could be hiding in a barn or under a porch or bushes.

If you have seen Casey, please call Regina Schulz at 383-0598.

Bakery open Sundays

Selectmen granted a request from Bread Shop and Bakery, 25 S. Main Street, to be open Sundays, contingent on approval from the sewer commission.

Citizen monitoring sought

In an effort to combat the problem of closing beaches and shellfish beds because of contamination, a workshop to discuss citizen water quality monitoring programs and how they can help restore and protect South Shore coastal rivers is planned.

The meeting is starts at 7 p.m., tonight (March 26) at Norwell Town Hall, off Route 123.

"It is hoped that a partnership of citizens monitoring the rivers and working with local, state, and federal agencies can solve some local pollution problems, many of which occur as a result of non-point source pollution from failing septic systems, storm water runoff and inappropriate drainage hookups," said Bob Fulz, South Shore coordinator, Mass. Coastal Zone Management.

Tonight's meeting, which is sponsored by the Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management, is a call for volunteers and an effort to bring local, state, and federal agencies together. Opportunities for funding will also be discussed.

For more information, call Fulz at 659-4692.

Taxi service to start

Selectmen approved issuing a license to Joseph L. Bird of Coastal Cabs to provide taxi service to Cohasset.

The taxi service will operate from 6 a.m. to midnight seven days a week, Bird said.

A lifelong Scituate resident, Bird said "Cohasset is not a stranger to me."

Bird said he would be doing all the driving until he can save enough for another cab.

Fees are $1.75 for the first mile, and $1.25 per additional mile.

A trip from Cohasset to Logan Airport would run about $40, he said.

Depot gets license

Selectmen issued an entertainment license to the Teen Depot for pool and ping pong tables and a small stereo with a cassette player, pending the center's obtaining a sewer permit.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon said because it was a "change of use" a sewer permit is required.

"I didn't know we'd need a sewer permit for ping pong," Beth Christoffel of the Teen Depot, said.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle said that was par for the course.

"In this town, you need everything, believe me," Laugelle said.

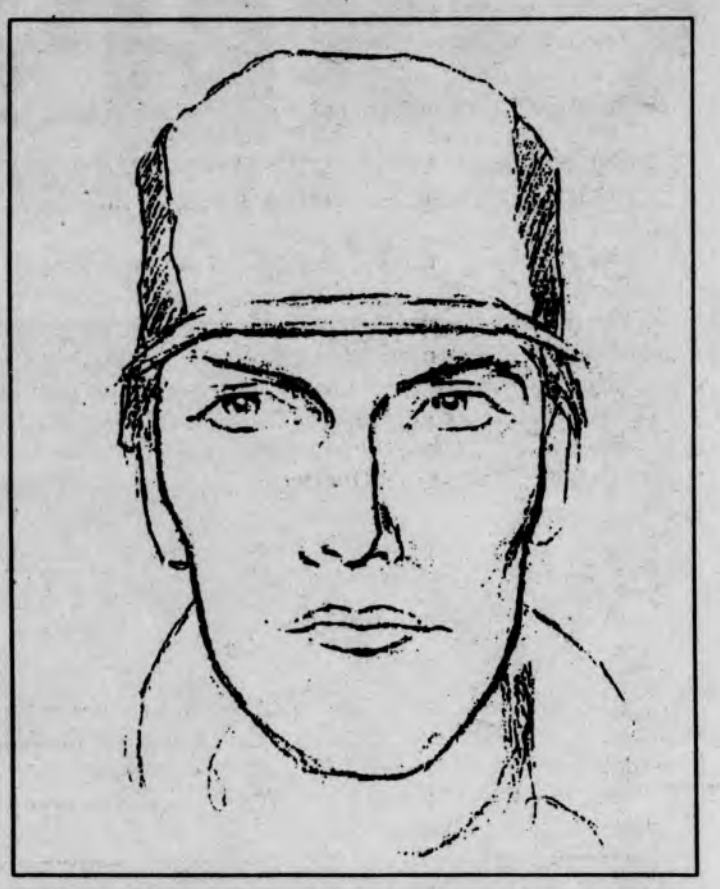
The board voted to waive the fees for sewer and board-of-health permits for the Teen Depot.

Dates to remember

Important upcoming dates:

- Town meeting, Saturday, April 4, at Cohasset High School
- Town election, Saturday, April 11, at town hall.

Tax payment deadlines



The second-half Fiscal 1992 Real Estate and Personal Property tax bills have been mailed, the due date for these bills is May 1. The Treasurer-Collector's office will be open Wednesday, April 29 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Thursday, April 30 from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Friday, May 1 from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Postmark dates will not be accepted. Payment must be received in the Collector's office by 1 p.m. May 1. No Exceptions!

Elizabeth Ripley, treasurer-collector, said, "A number of bills have been returned to our office because of improper mailing addresses. Any property owner who has not received a tax bill should contact the Collector's office at the Town Hall, 383-9900, ext. 113. Failure to receive a tax bill does not waive payment of the tax and does not excuse the homeowner from interest charges on payments received after the due date.

"The first commitment of Motor Vehicle bills for 1992 was mailed on Feb. 12. These bills are due and payable upon receipt, payable without penalty by March 13. If you received a bill and the vehicle listed on that bill has been sold, stolen, traded, declared a total loss or registered out of state, you must contact the Board of Assessors at 383-9900, ext. 124 and inquire about an abatement.

"The 1992 mooring bills have also been mailed and are due no later than 4:30 p.m. April 1. Failure to pay the mooring fee will result in the loss of mooring privileges."

Payments may be mailed to the Treasurer-Collector's Office, P.O. Box 296, Cohasset, 02025 or paid in person at the Town Hall. Our office is located on the second floor of the new addition. Any early payments will be appreciated. By mailing these bills earlier than usual we hope to avoid the costly procedure of borrowing in anticipation of tax revenue. Once again the Senior Center sent volunteers to help our office prepare all of these bills for early mailing. Their help is greatly appreciated, Ripley said.

Police released a new composite of the man who robbed the Rockland Trust Company in Cushing Plaza, March 6. He's described as a white male in his early 20's; height 5 ft. 11 ins., weight 165 lbs. Police said he has brown hair and blue eyes and is clean cut. Please contact the Cohasset Police Dept. at 383-1212 if you have any information on this robbery.

Old Cohasset ice skating rink up for grabs

The town may acquire the old Cohasset skating rink as a public works garage.

The board plans to appoint a committee to look into the feasibility of converting the 27,000-square foot building into a town garage.

Town executive secretary, Greg Doyon, said the metal building is in "pretty good shape" and would be "useful in solving the needs of the public works department."

The building and 2.8 acres are assessed at $1.8 million.

The land abuts the town cemetery which is in need of expansion, Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle said.

Laugelle said he envisioned the front of the building as a public works garage and the rear as a fire station.

"We could kill three birds with one stone," he said.

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said the board was aware of the Old Colony Railroad project and the wetlands and "had taken that into account."

Selectman Diana D. Kornet said the board wanted to get the issue "to the fore." The board hopes more people with expertise will volunteer for the public works committee, she said.

So far Terry Atherton of Clay Spring Road; John Riley of Haystack Lane; and Bruce Edmonds of Pond St. have said they are interested in serving on the committee.

Selectmen Chairman Ned Tebbetts said Mary Jane McArthur said she would be interested in serving on a subcommittee or group that would just look at the skating rink.

Tebbetts said the would talk with McArthur "before we appoint her to a committee that she doesn't want to be appointed to."

Goedecke said while the board is forming a committee, the purchase-and-sale agreement might be signed by another party.

Laugelle said he hoped the committee would report quickly on the suitability of the building.

"We should really move fast on this," he said.

Harbor policy may move moorings

"(The new mooring holder) may lose it in three or four years. But (in the meantime) we can make use of space which belongs to us not to them," Henderson said.

Henderson said if a mooring holder does not comply when asked to leave, then the town can obtain a restraining order. Under the new policy, Henderson said the town could have a boat out of the harbor within a month.

Mooring fees are due by April 1, Gadow said. Those on waiting list must also notify the harbormaster via letter or in person if they still want a mooring.

The harbormaster's office, 92 Border St., is open, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday

There are currently 245 names on the waiting list for pleasure boat moorings and 46 for commercial boats.

Cohasset Harbor has a total of 302 moorings in service; 40 of which are for commercial vessels.

Registry is automated

"Automated Testing" replaced the time consuming written examination.

One of the biggest advantages of the new walk-in Automated Testing is that Registry clerks can process applicants more quickly because the system automatically grades the test, and displays the grade on the system. It used to be written examinations took an hour or more. Now with Automated Testing it takes less than 15 minutes to take the test.

The Automated Testing offers applicants 10 questions selected from a data base of over 100 questions. Applicants must answer seven out of 10 questions correctly to pass. Some of the questions include colorful graphics. What's more, testing is available in Spanish with additional foreign language exams scheduled in the future. Also available, verbal examinations in English and Spanish.

Walk-in Automated Licensing will eliminate 250,000 Registry visits per year for the residents of the Commonwealth, Registrar Jerald A. Grazzo said.

Automated License Testing is available at all Registry branch offices and also at the Registry of Motor Vehicles headquarters at 100 Nashua Street, Boston.

School 'grandpa' has much to teach . . .

that they will also like AND find profitable."

DeWald said in addition to the mind-stretching games like cribbage and adding cards, he teaches games that improve a child's hand and eye coordination, like Cat's Cradle, which is played with string.

"He also taught us a game with a rubber band," Johnny Dwyer said.

Jenna Thompson makes a cat's cradle to Dr. D's delight. (Staff photos/Alan Chapman)

Dwyer and his classmates said they have never heard of the games DeWald teaches them.

"Now I teach them to some people on my block," seven-year-old David Ingber said.

Maloney said her 19 first-graders look forward to DeWald's teaching sessions.

Ingber reflected that sentiment.

"On Tuesday's we are jumping for joy," he said.

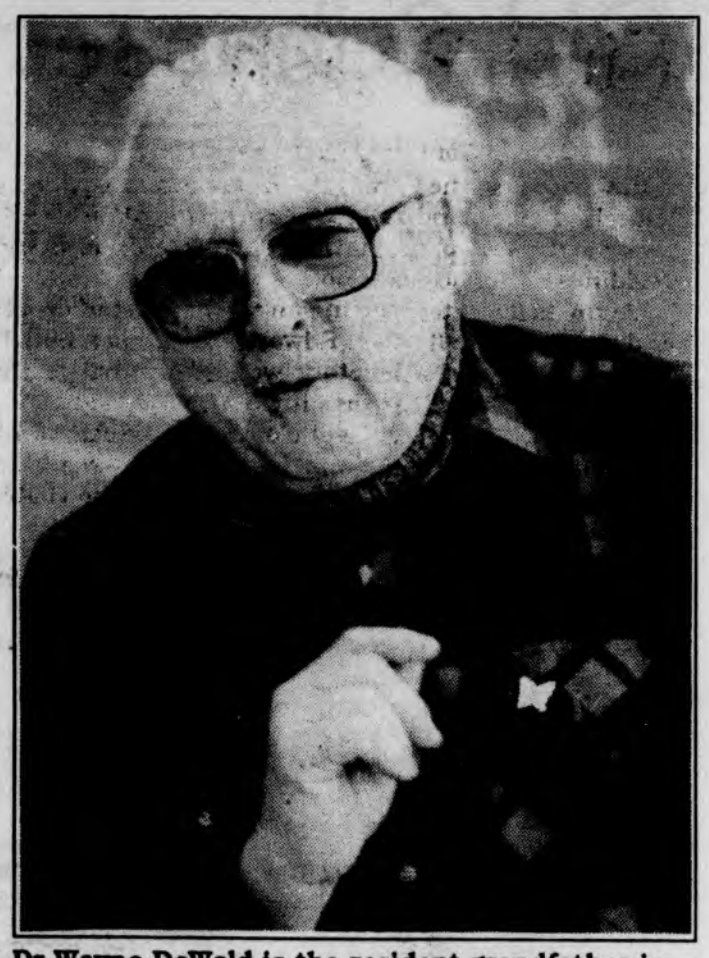
Every Tuesday from 9 a.m. to 12:15 p.m., DeWald visits Maloney's first graders and teaches them games in groups of four.

"And the children get very excited when it gets to be their turn," Maloney added.

"In this computer-age we need games for children that involve the mind and dexterity.

"Someone like him can bring it to the class," she said.

Teaching is second-nature to DeWald, who said he has educated a number of residents during his career as a physician.



"He has a dignity about him which the children detect and stand in awe of," Maloney noted.

"I think it's wonderful that a man, a grandfather, has the time to give to children and give from a perspective of such a wealth of experience."

DeWald doesn't limit his volunteer efforts to the children at the Osgood School. He also makes books come alive for the blind by reading texts aloud onto cassette tapes.

Principal of the Osgood School Linda Whitney said she hopes the "senior connection" with the school continues.

"Many of these kids don't have grandparents close by. They need to see someone with a spectrum of experience."

Dr.Wayne DeWald is the resident grandfather in Mrs. Maloney's class at the Osgood School.

Whitney said DeWald is the first and only person to respond to her plea for seniors to come to the primary grades and interact with the young children.

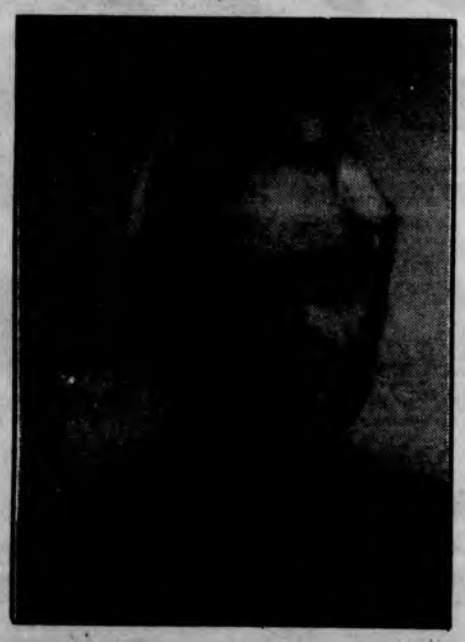
"It's open and I've invited and continue to invite seniors to donate their time," she said.

Whitney said she solicited DeWald's help when she attended the "Men's Breakfast Club," a weekly social gathering for retirees.

Whitney said she initially was looking for someone to read to the children, but is gratified DeWald has expanded on her request.

"He is the first person to respond and he has brought a lot of his own interests and hobbies.

"It is working very well. The children enjoy seeing him and he enjoys seeing them," she said.



Maloney said DeWald's affection for the children is evident. Recently, when she introduced DeWald as "our friend" to someone visiting her class, he corrected her.

"He said 'I'm the grandfather.'"

Whitney said DeWald's presence doesn't only affect the children.

While DeWald teaches a group of four, the class teacher can focus on a smaller group.

First Parish . . .

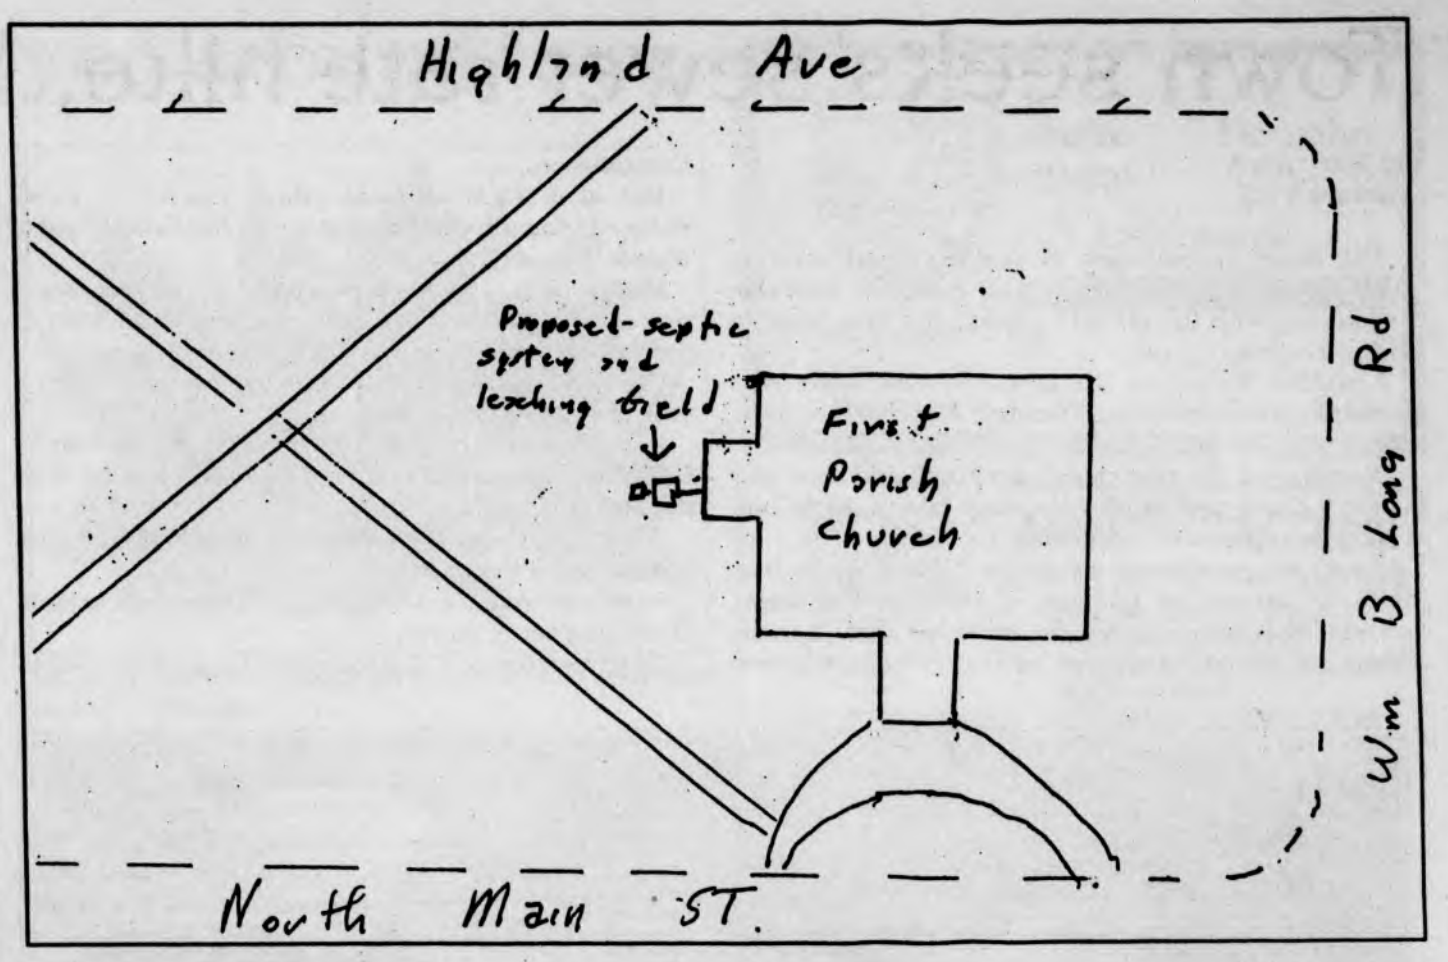
Bathrooms in the Parish House are available during church services. And although the congregation is well-aware of the set up, people from out of town who attend weddings or services are not.



"At times it's extremely inconvenient for staff people and visitors as well," Rev. Edward T. Atkinson noted.

The addition of a lavatory would not change the outside or inside of the meeting house, he said.

The installation of the septic system — which would be the minimum size required by the town — would be at no cost to the taxpayers and would have no visible impact on the Common.

The First Parish Church, Cohasset.

This isn't the first time the church tried to add some modern conveniences.

Installing central heating was once a hot topic.

"People thought everyone would go to sleep and that it's the work of the devil," Atkinson said.

Atkinson wasn't sure when central heating was added. But stoves were installed for the first tme in 1822 and carpets in 1842, according to The First Parish and its Meeting House, a historical sketch of the church.

Although its location keeps the Meeting House from expanding — Rev. Atkinson wouldn't have it any other way.

The Common used to be the common pasture where livestock roamed and the militia drilled. The pond was a sink hole that's now been locked in concrete.

"It wasn't a pristine, pretty place," Atkinson explained.

But over the years, zoning laws and the establishment of a historic district have enhanced and preserved the town center.

"It's not what it was — it's what it has become.

"We're so lucky," Atkinson said.

Town seeks sewer rate hike, legal funds

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The sewer commission is seeking town meeting approval for a rate increase and funds to continue negotiating with the state to expand the town's waste water treatment plant.

A public meeting on the proposed new sewer rate schedule is set for 8 p.m., Tuesday, March 31, at town hall.

If approved, the new rates, which will add about $6 a year to those with minimum usage (about 90 gallons a day), would go into effect July 1.

Under a "gentlemen's agreement" the town subsidizes 50 percent of the cost of running the sewer system, with users paying the other 50 percent, said Edwin M. Guild, chairman of the Cohasset Sewer Commission.

But after a rate increase three years ago, users reduced consumption, forcing the 50/50 balance out of whack, he said.

Under the new rates, a user's bill would increase 5 percent for the first 90 gallons a day, and 16-1/2 percent on everything over that, Guild explained.

The "average" user's bill would go up from $200 a year to $225 or $230, he said.

A large estaurant which currently pays $5,000 to $6,000 a year would see its bill increase from $800 to $1,000, Guild said.

There are about 180 homes and establishments hooked up to the system.

Selectmen voted 4-1 to support the warrant artilcle increasing sewer rates.

Selectman Rocco F. Laugelle said he was opposed to the rate hike. He noted the increase was "a big boost" on rates for businesses.

"I realize each time we raise rates we try to make the user pay rather than tack it onto taxpayers, but I don't think you should continually hit 185," Laugelle said.

LEGAL FUNDS NEEDED

The sewer commission will also ask town meeting voters to set aside about $10,000 to pay legal expenses to continue to negotiate with the state to expand, refurbish and modernize the town's existing plant.

Problems between the town's sewer plant and the state date back to 1975 when the treatment plant was cited for violations of its permit, Guild explained.

In 1988 the town approved a debt exclusion override of $2.2 million to hook up to Hull's waste water treatment plant.

At that time the state was going to kick in the balance. And since Hull's plant was over-designed and underused, it appeared to be the best solution to the town's sewer problem at that time.

But state funds dried up.

And because the amount of funding the state would provide today is much less, the cost to Cohasset to hook up to Hull now could range from $4 to $6 million.

And Guild said the town plant, which is run by a private contractor — if modernized and expanded — could cover the town's "most important" needs at much less cost to taxpayers. He explained sewer service is only economically feasible to the town's densely populated areas.

The $2.2 million debt exclusion, which was approved but never borrowed, would cover the cost of improvements and expansion, Guild said.

He said the expansion of the plant would be "in the current footprint" avoiding wetlands.

"I do believe the sewer commission and special town counsel are making progress (with negotiations)," Guild told selectmen.

"And the alternatives would be so costly. I feel we must continue to negotiate so long as there's a reasonable prospect of resolving (this)," he said.

Selectmen unanimously supported the warrant article covering legal fees to find a solution to the town's waste water management problems.

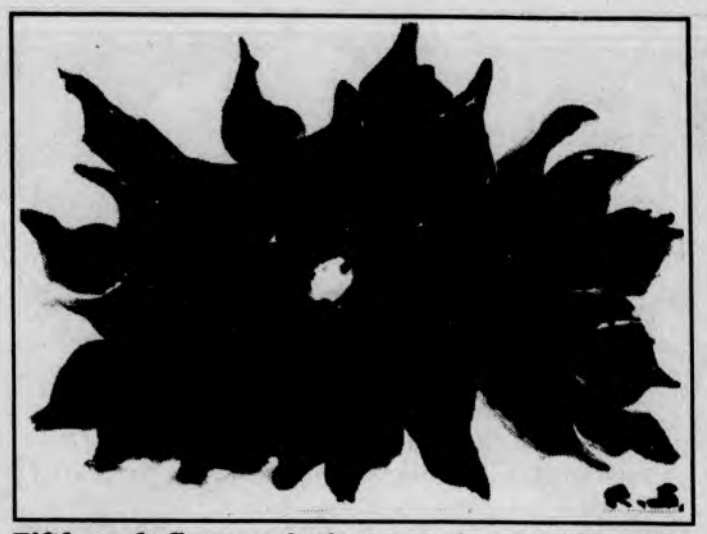
Student art displayed around town



The colorful student art work displayed in the windows of the French Memories Bakery and the Pilgrim Cooperative Bank and in the children's room of the Paul Pratt Library are the results of the last art lesson taught by recently retired Deer Hill art teacher, Jean O'Malley.

The 5th grade flower paintings were inspired by artist Georgia O'Keeffe, whose work was first introduced to the students by the Artist of the Month volunteers and a film shown by Deer Hill librarian, Mrs. Murphy.

In art class, the children chose a flower illustration from custodian Mr. Barrow's seed catalog. After studying the structure and shapes of the particular flower chosen, and drawing several sketches and studies, the children were encouraged to exaggerate the shapes and freely paint with full arm movement on large paper with watercolor and tempera.

They finished them realistically or imaginatively with detail, patter, or texture and complimentary backgrounds with wonderful results.

The sixth grade tempera paintings are the result of a lesson on color and composition. The theme was "A Place - Real or Imaginary." This subject was chosen to provide a wide choice of simple and geometric shapes, allowing the students to focus on the proposed activity, without the added burden of drawing complex shapes.

Fifth grade flower paintings were inspired by artist, Georgia O'Keefe.

Each student was allowed to mix as many colors and values as desired, and were encouraged to mix a variety of shades of each color. Colors were chosen to create a mood or feeling in their paintings as well as to balance their compositions.

Every painting was exciting and unique, demonstrating an endless variety of styles and degrees of detail, movement of line and color combinations. They show an obvious joy of creation, and they are certainly a joy to behold.

In art class, the children chose a flower illustration from custodian Mr. Barrow's seed catalog.

around town

❑ Had a nice chat with Linda Snowdale this week, and she asks all of you to set aside April 1 on your calendars. That is the week that the Beechwood Congregational Church will hold its annual election supper, with roast beef being the menu feature. All candidates and elected officials are invited to be there and will be introduced to the community at that time.

Tickets for the April 1 event are $6.99 for adults, $3.99 for children. A wonderful old-fashioned event that will take you to the past, as well as giving you a yummy supper. Don't miss this one!

❑ Matthew Lombardy has been chosen for the Peer Support Team at St. Anselm College in Manchester, N.H. Five students are selected from each class, freshman through senior, to work with the Christian Ministry Department counseling students and aiding community organizations in Manchester. Congratulations, Matt.

More news on the Lombardy family, this time about Brooke. Brooke received a Certificate of Achievement for last term's grades at St. Jerome School in Weymouth, and is busy polishing a part in the school play, "Oliver," set for April 10 and 11. Good work, Brooke!

❑ Erin Sutherland, captain of the CHS gymnastics team, has just completed her senior year on the gymnastics team. She had a most successful year finishing fifth in the South Shore League at the All-league meet held recently at Carver High School. Erin was voted most enthusiastic gymnast by the other members of the team. Erin received the Coaches' Award for the Most Consistent Gymnast, Most Spirited Gymnast and the Beam Queen award for the one gymnast who stayed on the Balance Beam most consistently.

Erin teaches gymnastics at the Cohasset Community Center under the direction of her coach, Ruthann Sargent. Erin will be attending the University of Massachusetts at Amherst in September.

❑ Carl and Patricia Sestito of 51 Hill Street have a grand reason to celebrate – the birth of their baby girl, born on March 10 at South Shore Hospital. Congratulations go to you folks, love that baby girl!

❑ Hats off to Felicia Bartow, the daughter of Karin and Stephen Bartow of 48 Sohier St, who was named to the dean's list at Macalester College for academic achievement during the fall semester of the 1981-1982 school year. Felicia is a graduate of CHS, and a junior at Macalester, located in St. Paul, Minn.

❑ Barbara Lagrotteria makes the news again, this time as a student at Wheaton, where she was named to the dean's list. Barbara, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Lagrotteria, is a member of the class of 1995 and we applaud her for her efforts.

❑ Hats off to Kristin Green who made the dean's list for the fall semester at Babson College. Kristin is the daughter of Dorothy A. Flaherty.

❑ Mary Ellen Neagle took home the award for being tops in listings for 1991 in the Cohasset office of Jack Conway & Co., Inc. The presentation was made by company president Dick Cahill during the recent "5th Annual Conway Country Convention," held recently at the Sheraton-Tara in Braintree.

Neagle, manager of the Cohasset office, has consistently been among the leaders in listings and sales for Jack Conway and Company, Inc., the largest independent real estate company in Mass.

CHS actors shine in female Hamlet

By Patty Hayes
Mariner correspondent

It was Hamlet, only better.

The Cohasset Drama Workshop gave an outstanding performance of And Flights of Angels, an adaptation of Shakespeare's Hamlet, March 21 and 22 at Cohasset High School.

The play is billed as "an all-female acting company's rehearsal of Shakespeare's Hamlet retold and directed by Horatio."

The play begins and ends with the final scene of Shakespeare's play. The King, the Queen, and Laertes have all been killed and Hamlet is dying. Horatio is considering following Hamlet into the grave, but Hamlet tells him, "Go forth and draw thy breath in pain ...to tell my story."

And Flights of Angels, the title of the revised play, comes from the words of Horatio, "And Flights of Angels sing thee to thy rest."

Horatio obeys Hamlet's command, and as the other actors in Shakespeare's final scene leave the stage, Shakespeare's Horatio calls up a new group of players, all female, who enact Hamlet's tale.

Shakespeare's Horatio—script in hand—remains on stage throughout the performance, directing, moving props, and even reminding the actresses of their lines.

The actresses, too, all hold scripts in their hands, "but not because they couldn't learn their lines," according to director Ron Emmons, who also directs Cohasset's drama program.

"But because we thought we could do more with the words with the words in front of us," he said.

The actresses' performances are so outstanding that the scripts become invisible. Each actress, perhaps because she didn't have to remember what she was saying, was able to concentrate on how she was saying it.

The workshop lets Shakespeare's words speak for themselves. The costumes and lighting were simple, the scenery almost nonexistent.

The excellence of the script is enhanced by superb acting. Erin McAllister's energetic and emotional portrayal of Hamlet is moving; she proved that anything a man can do a woman can do better.

Dressed simply in black, with her long hair pulled back, she was neither male nor female, she was Hamlet. Perhaps one of her best scenes is when Hamlet is trying to convince Polonius (Carole Smith) of his insanity: the banter between them, which flows naturally, is funny and convincing.

However, McAllister can't take all the credit for the success of the production. She was surrounded by talent. Carole Smith, playing Polonius, is silly, just as Shakespeare intended him to be. She spoke slowly, using inflections and body language to highlight the wonderful irony in almost all of Polonius' words which is so often missed by readers and audiences.

Laertes (Rebecca Kirk), and Ophelia (Alison Ritz) were also exceptional. Both played the dynamic brother and sister very well, adapting to the changes that occur in each character as a result of their father's murder.

Kirk, along with McAllister, was excellent in the final death scene. Their duel was lifelike and chilling.

Ritz did a wonderful job portraying Ophelia's sudden insanity and possible suicide after her father's death. But, not only can she act, Ritz can sing, too. Prior to her death, Ophelia does nothing but pick flowers and sing, another excellent scene, credit for which should be given to the director as well as the actors.

Jason Hunter played Shakespeare's Hamlet; John Kisiel, Shakespeare's Horatio; Ali Welz, the King; Caroline deLima, the Queen, Katie O'Sullivan, Horatio's Horatio, Meri Hansen, the Ghost; Erin Lennon, Guildenstern; Caitlin Connolly, Rosencrantz; Amy Silvia, Player (director); Cecilia Candia, Player (Prologue); Jill Day, Courtier; Tracy Hyde, Player (King); Jemilah Afshar, Player (Lucianus); Keri Souffrain, Priest; Elizabeth Deveney, Gravedigger; and Holly Russell Osric.

Congratulations are also in order to the crew: Technical Director Jason Hunter, Stage Manager Corrina Minnar and Art Director Cecilia Candia, for a job well done.

"It's been a long time getting this show going," Emmons said. And the performance was well worth the time and effort put in by the entire cast and crew.

Overriding season

Proposition 2-1/2, which passed in 1980 put Cohasset and all other towns in the Commonwealth on a fixed income.

No matter how much prices rise — for anything from textbooks to electricity to health or liability insurance costs — the town can only raise the property tax levy by 2-1/2 percent a year.

Also figured into the annual levy is new growth. New growth is new construction during the prior calendar year.

It includes dwelling units that increase 50 percent or more in value or commercial units that increase $100,000 or more in value.

For example if a homeowner adds an apartment — which increases his or her home by 50 percent in value — the addition would be considered new growth.

What Cohasset is facing again this year are the limits of Prop. 2-1/2, which restrict the amount the tax levy can rise in a given year, and reduced new growth due to a flagging economy.

Top that off with decreased local receipts like excise taxes and dwindling revenue sharing from the state — and you've got a budgetary nightmare.

Under Prop. 2-1/2, there are ways for a community to increase its tax levy.

An override, which allows communities to assess taxes in excess of the 2-1/2 percent restriction plus new growth, can appear on the ballot. This type of override is a permanent tax increase.

Another way for communities to raise funds for certain purposes above the levy limit is a debt exclusion for expenditures like a fire truck. Exclusions do not become part of the base upon which the levy limit is calculated for future years.

The debt exclusion, which raises funds for debt service costs (although voted once), could be a different amount each year until it goes away at the end of the term of debt.

Funds raised through a capital outlay expenditure exclusion for a capital project (like a new roof) increase the levy limit only for the year in which the project is undertaken.

Selectmen are grappling with how to present the ballot question for this year's override election, May 16.

Selectman Jane O. Goedecke said she started out believing the purpose of Prop. 2-1/2 was "to give voters a choice."

"Obviously the way the ballot looks helps them exercise that choice," she said.

The board plans to discuss the format for the override question at their April 13 board meeting.

Interested residents should plan to attend to give their elected officials the dialog they seek.

Remember overrides — whether they pass or fail — are a positive exercise of the purest form of democracy.

We believe the intent of Prop. 2-1/2 was to put control into your hands. Along with that control goes the responsibility to make sure that your vote is an informed one.

Nowhere are elected officials more accountable or tax dollars better spent then right here in your own back yard.

chamber chatter

by Paula Knowles

I have been sitting here – in the middle of a spring snow storm –trying to tie up all the loose ends before leaving on a brief, but much anticipated, vacation. Some things never change in a "going away" routine. Newspapers, mail, deliveries, phone calls, business details, notify the neighbors, relatives, anyone who would worry if they called and the phone wasn't busy.

Clean the refrigerator, water the plants, set the thermostat, settle the cat, the cars, the daughter. Do all of next week's things today. That's where I started to run into REAL problems. I hadn't realized how much I had already put off! How about you? Use this check list and see if you've forgotten anything coming up soon – sooner than you expected.

The Garden: If you are a vegetable fanatic like I am, and plant three tons of produce in a 5x15 ft. plot, then you also probably get your greatest joy watching the little buggers sprout on your window sill. Well, it's time!! If you go to Cohasset Greenhouse, Cohasset hardware, or even Woolworth's for your seeds – your day has come. Plant your tomatoes, squash, cukes, peppers, etc. now, turn them daily in the sun, talk and sing to them religiously and you'll be ready to plant come warmer weather. If you usually buy plants or seedlings, check with Bob Davenport now to make sure your plants will be here when you want them. And if you are a flower or shrub person, order now for the spring.

The Yard: Now is the time to get a hold of lawn, tree and garden services. You'll need fertilizer, mulch, maybe a tree or two taken down. Creative Landscape and Tree Co. will take care of you. Just give them a call. If you want to plan the layout yourself, get in touch with Cohasset Greenhouse/Sestito Florist, They'll give you advice and order anything you need. And if you are looking for a lawn care and all around handy-man service, call Curt Ludlow. He starts up again around the end of April, and until then you can leave a message at August West in Hingham.

The Boat: Yes, I said "THE BOAT." I know that it is only the end of March, but do you really think you are going to have time to get ready if you start in May? Oh no you won't. Have you called Steve Ward at Cohasset Gas & Diesel yet to make sure those engines are OK? Don't look at me like that. Even an auxiliary engine needs to be checked out. Getting becalmed a mile out with no engine is not exactly the most fun in the world...remember? And check with Tina at Cohasset Hardware about that cooler you never got around to buying last year. And a new lock and chain, and a deck chair or two....

Don't forget the insurance. Goodale Co., Don Harrold, Lamb Ins., Lehr & Barnes, and Peterson, Mahoney & Wright can all steer you to the right coverages for your boat – be it Whaler or yawl. And don't forget the trailer. Check out the light connections and apply for the trailer plate. Don't wait until the last minute again. Do it now.

The Wardrobe: Before spring is officially here, bring out the summer clothes and see what needs to be done. Bring them to Dwyers, Dependable, Cohasset Plaza or Aveni now, before the rush. Check the hems and seams, and call Patti Morse at Alt 24 for any work that needs to be done.

If you have a wedding coming up, Patti specializes in wedding dress restoration and refitting. Talk to her before you go anywhere else. And for the boy who is growing too fast to fit – check out the Children's Exchange or the Consignment shop for that Easter jacket. He'll have outgrown it the day after, anyway!!

The Spring Cold: Suffer. I'll think of you when I'm baking my cough away in sunny Paradise! Next year maybe we'll all get away.

Library staffers look for support

letters

To the Editor:

Much attention has been focused on contracts currently being negotiated by the police, fire and teacher's unions with the Town of Cohasset.

How many people are aware of another union, the Cohasset Library Association (C.L.A.S.S.), formed in July, 1990, and still negotiating its first contract?

This group consists of six employees; we are represented by our own attorney. Due to the slow and limited response of town representatives to our unit, C.L.A.S.S. has filed for arbitration by a state mediator, so that unaddressed issues can be resolved.

Library employees work irregular hours in order to best serve the varying needs of children and adult patrons. We last had a cost of living increase in July 1990 of 3 percent. Compare this to the other unions in town which have consistently received higher raises. At this point we are merely trying to catch up with what is fair when compared to the other town unions.

Pay increases for the schools have been included in the regular budget. C.L.A.S.S. increases would require an override. We are a small group and we are often overlooked as a profession. We hope that the people of Cohasset appreciate our services and will support us.

Sincerely,
C.L.A.S.S.

Public should know where taxes go

To the Editor:

At the Candidate's Night sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, I asked Ralph Kidder, a member of the School Committee as a candidate for re-election, about the quality of education.

In my statement, I referred to past years when I had been told that there were around 55 teachers in our system and now we are told that there are 93 teachers in the system. I also stated that we had six administrators.

Kidder charged me with throwing out a "Red Herring" and that these statements were heard every year. He also stated that my numbers were not correct. If the numbers are not correct then I apologize to Kidder for putting fourth my question.

However, the source of my numbers is the superintendent of schools. These numbers had been given out at public hearings on the annual budgets at the high school in years past. At those meetings I asked how many teachers were in our system, since the student population was in decline, and I was told that we had around 55 teachers, at that time.

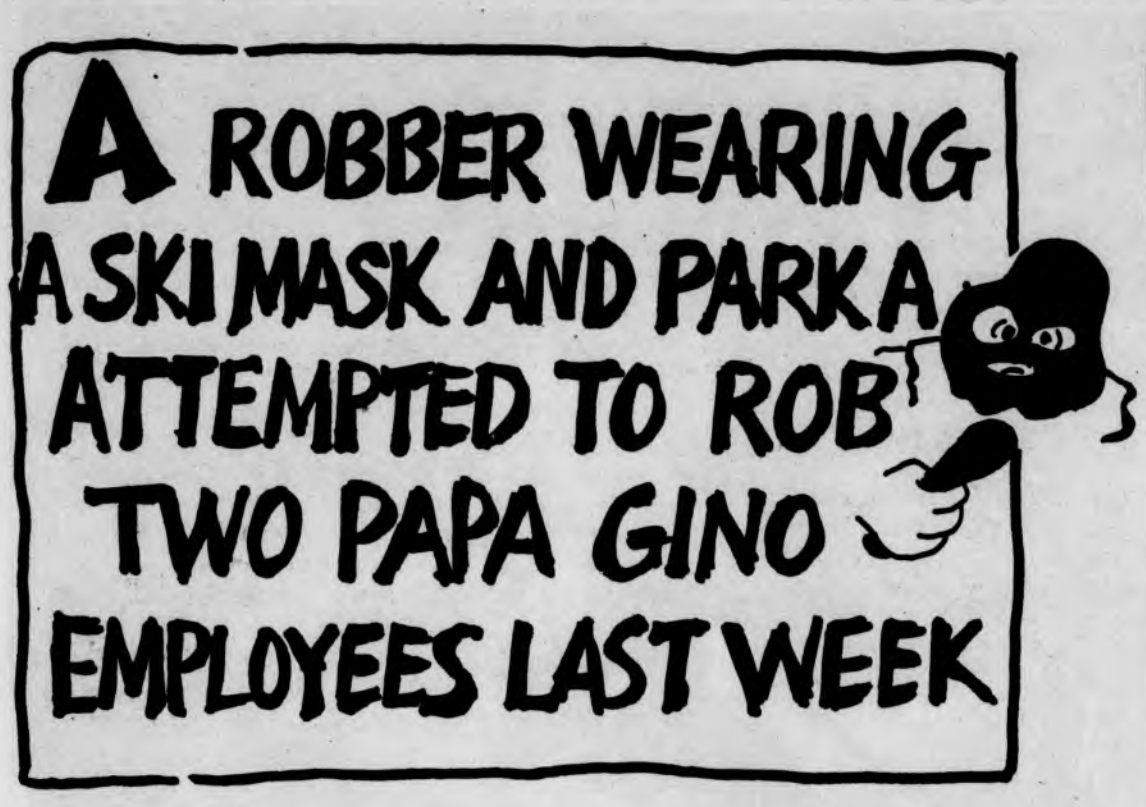
Now if these numbers are incorrect then the superintendent of schools was giving out incorrect information to the public. If it is not incorrect then why do we have 93 teachers?

To correct this for the future I would strongly recommend that each year, in the Annual Town Report, the school report contain the exact number of teachers in the system, listed by grade, and the total number of students in the system also listed by grade. Kidder claims that since 1980 the number of teachers has been declining in our system. I think that he should fully explain that statement.

I also question the need for six administrators. I know that in other South Shore towns that administrators have as many as 400-to-500 children to oversee or more than 800 with an assistant to oversee. Our system only has 1,100 plus students, we could have one high school administrator, one head of the guidance department, one principal to oversee the Deer Hill and the Osgood Schools and one superintendent (if we so choose).

One of the members of the P.S.O. stated that supplies were not being maintained at adequate levels for our children in the schools. If that statement is true, maybe we would be able to adequately supply our teachers if we had fewer administrators.

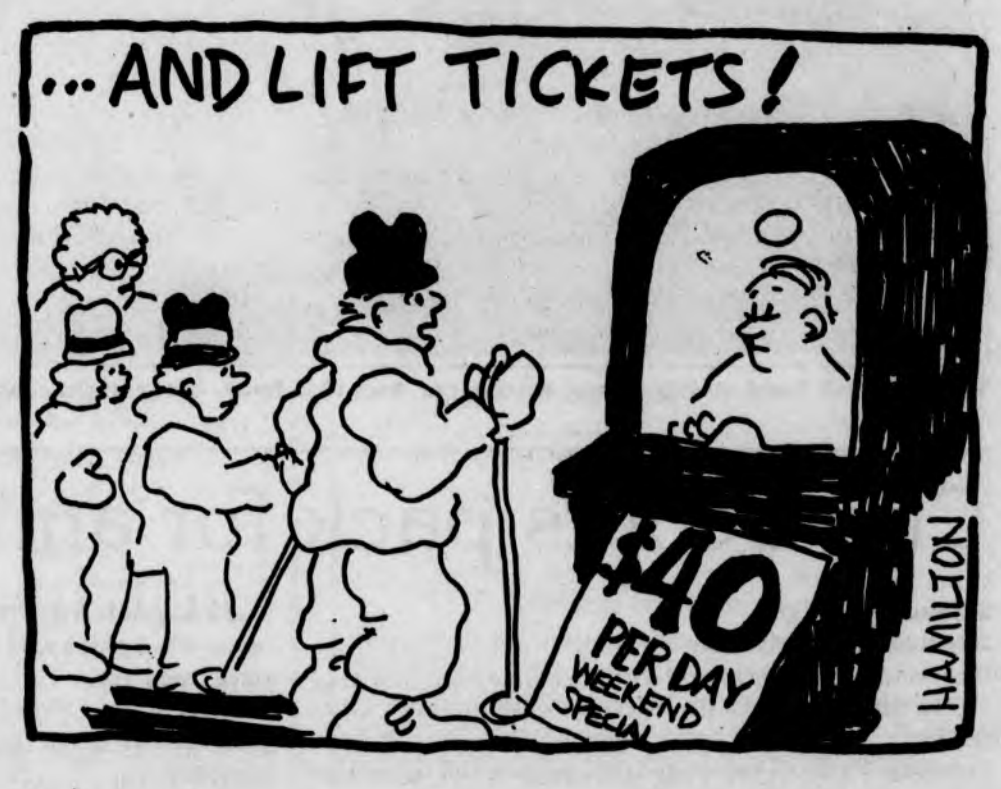
I also asked Kidder how we could maintain a quality level of education if the override fails. He stated that they would definitely have to consider "staff" reductions. Why not consider administrator reductions?



Maybe we will know exactly what we need for teachers if we are told why we have 93 teachers in our system.

Another area of concern that is not expressed as a part of the school budget, is the cost of the employee benefits package, including pension costs. This cost should be broken down in the Annual Report, by the town accountant, for each department.

I feel that it is only fair that the public know what is going on with their tax dollars. We must maintain quality education and we must ensure that our tax dollars are being spent effectively to achieve that end.



We must also have full and complete communications between our government departments and the tax payers about contract negotiations and program costs in our government. All such contracts should be on file at the library for the scrutiny of the public.

Merle Brown

Merle Brown, candidate for selectman, is a proponent for increased communication between all the boards. Brown, who has served on the Conservation Commission for the last 11 years, expressed that there is a tremendous need for boards to be more receptive to each other's views and those of the citizens of the town. "I believe that we must be active, open listeners, not selective in what we hear, able to make informed, timely decisions with respect and regard for all parties involved in each situation."

Brown is a lifelong resident and has a long history of experience serving Cohasset in addition to the conservation commission. He has been on the recycling committee since its inception and has also served on the map study committee.

Arthur Lehr, who has worked with Brown for many years through the scouting program in Cohasset, stated that "Merle Brown has given countless hours of service to Cohasset youth firmly believing in the development of young people and their responsibility to their community, home and school."

Lehr also stated that he is a member with Brown on the Recycling Committee and has worked together for years developing the Recycling Center at the Transfer Station.

"Merle has exemplified himself in his dedication of service to the town and would be a valuable addition to the Board of Selectmen."

Ralph Kidder

School Committee member Ralph Kidder was asked at a recent campaign appearance what goals he hoped to accomplish if reelected.

Kidder commented, "While fiscal realities will continue to dominate the agenda for our schools, we must also be building for the future. First, we must determine the appropriate uses of technology in the curriculum.

"As a member of the Cohasset Technology Committee, I have been involved with efforts to define the role of computers, satellite communications and the like as we rapidly approach the twenty-first century.

"Second, we must continue to seek alternative sources of revenue. I am hopeful that the new Local Education Foundation will be successful in providing increased annual funds and serious endowment money from both individuals and partnerships with business.

"Finally, we must begin to explore the notion of increasing the time our children spend on learning, by lengthening the school day or the school year."

When asked to comment on two persistent issues regarding the schools, Kidder responded, "With respect to the question about too many administrators in the schools, Cohasset ranks below many comparable districts in the number of administrators per pupil and in administrative costs. We have six administrators, with no assistant superintendents and no business manager."

On the question of regionalization, he noted, "much has already been done to regionalize particular services, such as professional development, and the MCET satellite affords new opportunities. I also favor establishment of the Cohasset/Hingham task force to explore all of our options."

John K. McNabb

John K. McNabb, Jr., candidate for Cohasset Selectman, today called for management improvements at town hall to improve the delivery of town services and protect the value of property tax dollars paid to the town.

"More leadership is needed from the board of selectmen," McNabb said. "More planning by the Selectmen is needed to anticipate problems instead of merely reacting to crisis.

"The selectmen should institute a system of program planning for Town departments," said McNabb. "They should establish goals and objectives to town departments; set program plans; and annually evaluate the quality of service provided by town departments.

"Better budget planning is needed," said McNabb. "The Selectmen need to do more to improve the management of town government and to ensure a more efficient use of town resources and fair treatment of town employees.

"More openness and accountability is needed," said McNabb. "The Open Meeting Law and Public Records Law must be stringently observed, to protect the peoples' right to know what their governmental officials are doing.

"Appointments could be made in a more open manner," said McNabb. "All open appointive positions on town boards should be posted in town hall, and all applicants should be fairly considered.

"I want to make the difference in town government," said McNabb. "I am proud of the success I have had last year with S.A.F.E. in stopping the sludge and in stalling the proposed "Area V" expansion of the Cohasset Heights Landfill, and plan to use my skills and experience in town government to benefit all residents of Cohasset."

On the town budget: "If the proposed $400,000 + override does not pass," said McNabb, "we will all have to make some fundamental choices about which essential town services we will then have no choice but to cut. The question then is what services do we want the town to provide?"

On public safety: "We should all support the efforts of our fire and police forces to protect our lives and property," said McNabb. "Both the fire and police have been cut to the bone, and need more resources – not less. A new ambulance is needed."

On the schools: "As someone who has benefitted from the Cohasset Public School system and who served as a non-voting student member of the School Committee 1972-73," said McNabb, "I have an abiding concern for the quality of our local school system. Quality education is an invaluable asset for Cohasset, and depends on sufficient funds to support quality teachers, small class sizes and good textbooks, among other assets."

On Senior Citizens: "The town should support continued funding for the Council on Aging and Senior Center, and should explore any and all additional ways to help our seniors," said McNabb. "Senior citizens deserve the attention and support of the town."

On non-tax revenue: "The selectmen should aggressively seek other sources of revenue," said McNabb, "including grants from private and public sources to supplement and/or supplant property taxes to make tax revenue go further."

On expanding the tax base: "We must review all zoning by-laws to better encourage responsible business development and to support our local small businesses," said McNabb, "With the Chamber of Commerce, the town should bring beneficial businesses into town and to promote Cohasset as a good place to visit and to do business."

Cub Scouts pack for annual Pinewood Derby

By Andy Krueger
Special to the Mariner

The air was filled with high excitement March 18 as 68 Tiger, Wolf, Bear, and Webelos Cub Scouts from Cohasset Pack 38 converged on the Deer Hill School for their annual model car race tournament, The Pinewood Derby.

The Pinewood Derby is the national Cub Scout event for March, and is designed to promote the scouting goals of sportsmanship, craftsmanship, and family fun. Each Cub, along with his adult partner, crafts a wooden model race car to exacting weight and size specifications from a standard kit, with the shape, style, color, and decorations left to the vivid imaginations of the individual racers. The results are varied and universally impressive, as the boys vie to see who has the fastest model racer to roll down the racetrack.

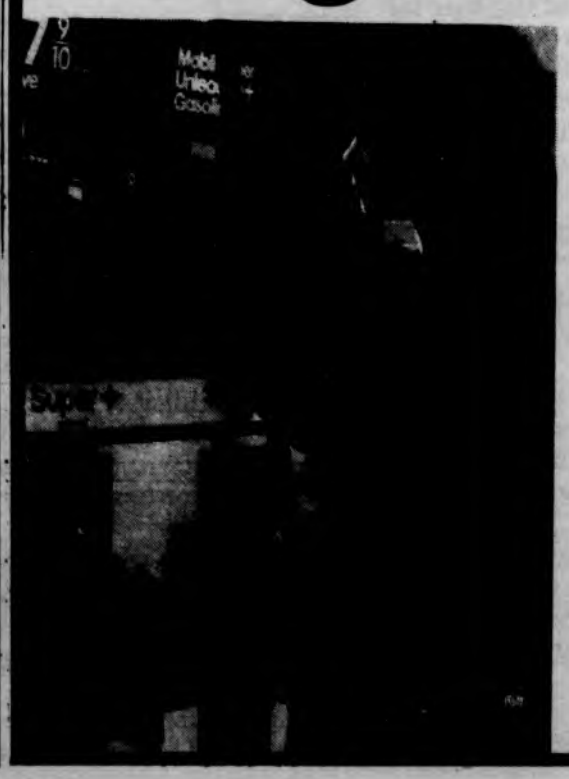
First grade Tiger Cubs are invited to compete and show what skills and enthusiasm they will bring to the pack next year. The winners in the Tiger division are Evan Pestone, Brian Litchfield, and David Ingber. Next year these guys most certainly will be district competitors.

Wolf, Bear, and Webelos Cubs competed for the all important first three places in each division which enable them to move on to the district-level competition next month. The winners, who will participate in the Cranberry Harbors District Finals on April 18, are (first, second, third places):

• Wolf (second grade) — Patrick Carbone, David Krueger, Alex Etkind.

• Bear (third grade) — Geoff McWilliams, Andy Dennis, Tim Grassi.

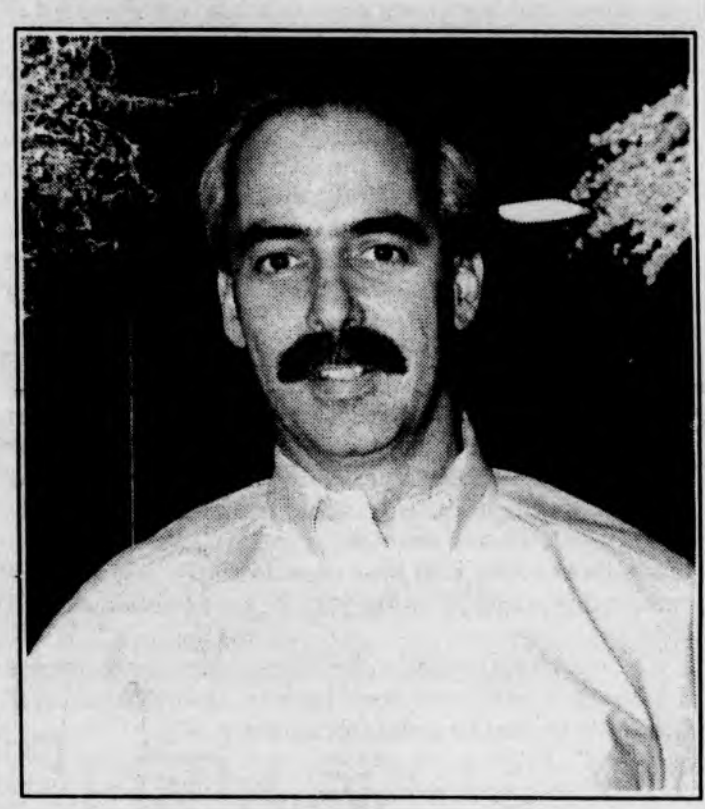
• Webelos 1 (fourth grade) — Joseph Carbone, Mario Bruzzone.



• Webelos 2 (fifth grade) — Kevin Devito, Justin Maitland, Chris Olney.

Finally, the best of each division competed against each other for the Pack 38 Championship. First and two second place ties for the "Best of the Pack" go to Kevin DeVito, Patrick Carbone and Joseph Carbone.

Special thanks for their invaluable assistance in running the Derby go to Merle Brown, District Committeeman; Jeff Forsdick, Pack 38 Cubmaster; Linda Farrag, Pack 38 Committee Chairperson; Tony Carbone and Alan DeVito, Webelos Leaders; Bob Dennis, Bear Leader; Jane Long, Tiger Coach; and Andy Krueger, Pack 38 Committeeman.



The official judges and timekeepers were furnished by Boy Scout Troop 28 of Cohasset. Many thanks to Buck Hubbell, Frank Abadie, Tony Bramblett, Chad Whitman, and Mark Whitman for their hard work keeping all of the results straight.

Best day of your life: Mid-October last year, when I felt we had developed a local Cohasset following.

Most embarrassing moment: Realizing too late that a special cake a customer asked us to serve at a surprise party was an ice cream cake. We put it on a counter in the kitchen until it was time to serve dessert. When I came to get it, it was a pool of cream. We quickly got another cake to serve.

Goal: To complete the renovations to the restaurant and bar, and build an outdoor patio, by summer.

Favorite season: Spring and Summer, there's a lot of activity at the Inn.

Best vacation: Hawaii in August of 1976.

Favorite holiday: Tie between St. Patty's Day and Superbowl Sunday.

Pet peeve: A dissatisfied customer who leaves the restaurant without affording me the opportunity to correct the situation.

Diana Kornet

Diana Davis Kornet is seeking a second term as selectman. In the past three years she has gained valuable insight about the structure and functioning of town government.

"It is time to review which positions are elected and which are appointed," Kornet claims. "The scope and responsibilities of certain jobs have changed drastically from years ago when our present system was organized, and it may no longer be appropriate for these positions to be elected."

Kornet cited the town treasurer-collector position.

"We are very fortunate to have a well-qualified person in Betty Ripley," she said. "But anyone could run for that office, and the board has no say over qualifications for the job."

Aside from changing the mechanics of the system, Kornet's primary concern is providing the services town residents have come to expect without increasing taxes unreasonably. She wants the townspeople to decide which services are essential, and which "extras" they deem valuable enough to fund with public money.

According to Kornet, "There are several areas where needs might be met more economically by the private sector."

At present, the selectmen are expected to provide leadership for the entire town, but there are many areas of public spending over which they have no control. Kornet proposes a consolidation of budget responsibility, which would increase the board's effectiveness as it tries to cut costs.

A resident of the town for 16 years, Kornet served on the school committee for 10 years before she was elected a selectman in 1989.

Kornet graduated from Connecticut College. She and her husband, John, live at 29 Nichols Road. Their four children range in age from 11 to 23.

Michael Sullivan

Candidate for Selectman Michael Sullivan feels there is a need for increased communication between Cohasset town officials and state government if he is elected.

"Members of the board of selectmen need to take a more active interest in state level affairs. We need to keep abreast of proposed changes, determine how they could affect Cohasset and react to them while they are in the formative stages. So much of what we deal with on a day to day basis in Cohasset comes down to us as directives and laws from state officials. Involvement or reaction after the fact is too late," he said.

It is also the board's job to communicate this information to Cohasset residents and tell them how they can influence the outcome, he said. "For instance, when people knew what the situation was, as well as who and how to contact at the state level regarding the proposed expansion of Cohasset Heights Landfill, the result was dramatic. The letters and calls to Secretary of Environmental Affairs Susan Tierney definitely impacted the state's decision."

"I'm not sure how to effectively communicate the issues to the voters. There are a lot of thoughts going through my mind, possibly a bulletin board at town hall; a town government column in the local press; broadcasts on cable TV or flyers when there is a need to raise awareness quickly. Other towns have effectively used newsletters to share this type of news, but I know that this is costly and time consuming — and neither commodity is in great supply right now in Cohasset," he said.

Sullivan feels that effective communication between the board of selectmen, local boards, state officials and residents is vital to Cohasset's future.

Ken Wilcox

School Committee candidate Ken Wilcox says that "the quality of education provided children in Cohasset is the responsibility of all residents, not just parents."

"I am a taxpayer and a parent so I have a vested interest in seeing that the schools are run effectively and efficiently, and that the tax rate doesn't get out of hand. I will use my ten-years experience as an educator to see that the teaching staff and programs are meeting the needs of our students, and equipping them to succeed in an increasingly competitive world. I will use my ten years as a businessman evaluating the profitability potential of companies to scrutinize the school organization, budget, and expenses."

Wilcox explained that when there is a shortfall in the budget, the school committee and the town have the following options: make judicious cuts in the budget; seek to obtain public funds from the state or federal government; explore methods of obtaining private funds; present selective overrides to the town electorate; seek opportunities for regionalization; and increase volunteerism.

"It is the responsibility of the school committee to assume a leadership role in helping the community to understand where the school system is now and where it needs to go to maintain education standards that are acceptable to the town," Wilcox said. "The School Committee can and must provide guidance to the town; however, only the voters can decide what options are best for Cohasset."

Rotary race plans

Plans are well underway for the Sixteenth Annual Cohasset Roadrace by the Sea. The event will begin at 1 p.m. Sunday, April 5, at the Cohasset Common. This annual ritual of spring is again sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club and is under the direction of Roy Fitzsimmons and Peter Logan. Brian Pompeo

Pompeo is standout

Brian Pompeo, a first-year student at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, was a member of the 1991-92 men's ice hockey team that finished with a 10-12-1 record.

Pompeo, who graduated from Belmont Hill, was a forward in his first season with the White Mules. In his first year he was the team's third leading scorer with eight goals and sixteen assists while appearing in all 23 games.

Pompeo is the son of Mr. Arthur Pompeo Jr. of Cohasset.

Bluefish record set

Cohasset resident Bernard J. Hamill, 74 Forest Ave., was recently awarded a world record for a bluefish caught on a flyrod last summer in local waters.

The award, presented by the International Game Fish Association, is for the heaviest fish of a species in an approved line-class category, and that the catch was made in accordance with international angling regulations.

Hamill's bluefish weighed 15 lb. 4 oz. and was caught Aug. 27, 1991 in Boston Harbor.

Register for softball

Registration for the Cohasset Girls' Softball League is currently underway for the 1992 season. Registration forms are available at the Deer Hill School and the Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School offices. Forms must be turned in by March 31.

The Girls' Softball League has again expanded and now is comprised of two divisions: Division I – grades 4, 5 and 6; Division II – grades 7, 8 and 9.

The goal for both Divisions is to first have fun, provide softball instruction and to encourage good sportsmanship and the team concept.

The season will be eight weeks long beginning in May and ending the last week of June. Games will be played once a week or on occasion twice a week at either the high school fields, Barnes Field or Beechwood Ball Park. Game time will be 6 p.m.

Girls interested in having fun and learning the game of softball should pick up a registration form and turn it in by March 31 at either the Deer Hill School or the Cohasset Jr./Sr. high school offices.

For more information about the league, please call Mrs. Smith at 383-2510 or Mrs. Collins at 383-0760.

Spring sports off to a chilly start

By Paula Knowles
Mariner correspondent

Tryouts and practices for most spring sports got underway on Monday, March 16, but Mother Nature had a few surprises up her sleeves. Winter returned with a vengeance that day, with temperatures plummeting so low that ice began forming on Cohasset harbor by noon, making ski gloves more practical than baseball gloves.

The next two days weren't any better, and some practices were called off. The spring snow storm on Thursday set things back even further. But Friday saw most teams working out again, even if it was indoors.

The baseball and softball teams held all but two first-week practices in the gym, splitting the space down the middle. The coaches agreed that it was not the most auspicious way to start the season, but there was no alternative.

And they weren't alone in the situation. Every team in the league had to contend with the same weather conditions.

For Mike Gill, varsity softball coach, it meant putting off drawing up a formal team list until next week. Having lost his whole starting outfield as well as the starting pitcher to graduation, he really needs more time to look the kids over.

"Allison Ludlow (shortstop) is still sidelined with a knee injury, second baseman Danielle Shaughnessy hurt her back in a car accident, and our first baseman moved to Pembroke at the end of last season," said Gill.

That leaves just two returning starters, senior third baseman Heather Bass and third-year starting catcher, junior Jenn Knowles.

First-year JV coach Ron Ford is in a similar position. With so many spots to fill at the varsity level, most of the experienced JV players will move up. This leaves him the job of fielding a mainly seventh- and eighth-grade team against opponents heavy with experienced upperclassmen.

"I've just barely recovered from basketball where we had to fight the same battle," Ford said. "But we did it successfully in the winter, and we'll work hard to be just as successful this spring."

Osgood kids explore Russian culture

Second graders in Patrice Baker's and Rose Collins' classes finished up their unit on the 'Commonwealth of Independent States' with a play and Russian tea at the Osgood School last week.

Mrs. Baker's class performed "The Firebird" which was written by the class and was based on a Russian folk tale by the same name.

Mrs. Collins' class hosted a Russian tea after the performances.

The event was the culmination of the classes' study of the folk art, crafts, language, maps, and literature of Russia.

Parents helped paint the scenery and coach the performers for the play, which was presented to various classes.

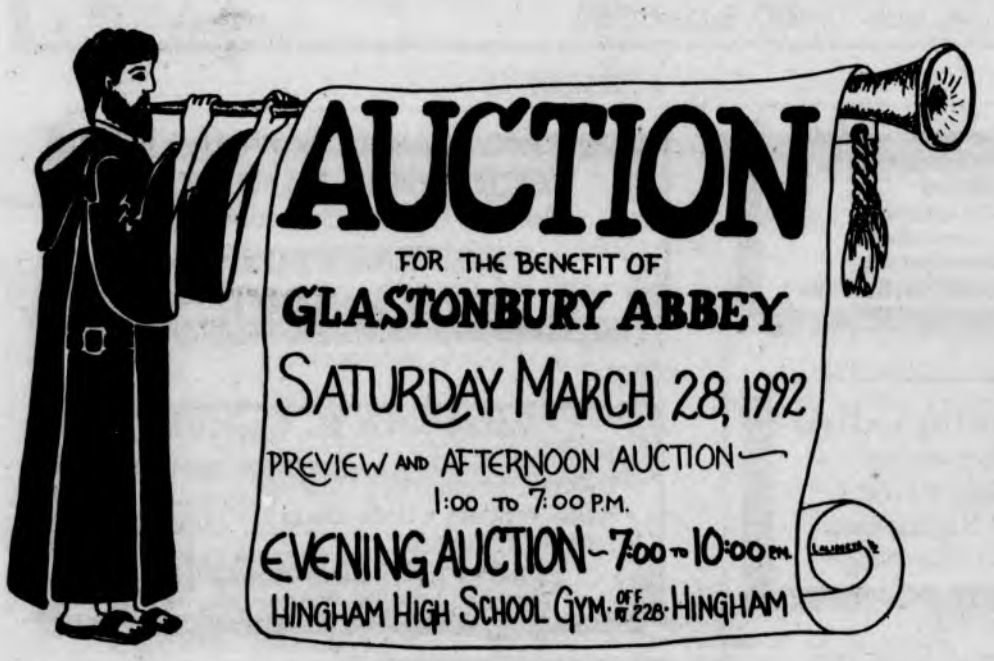
State to return unclaimed money

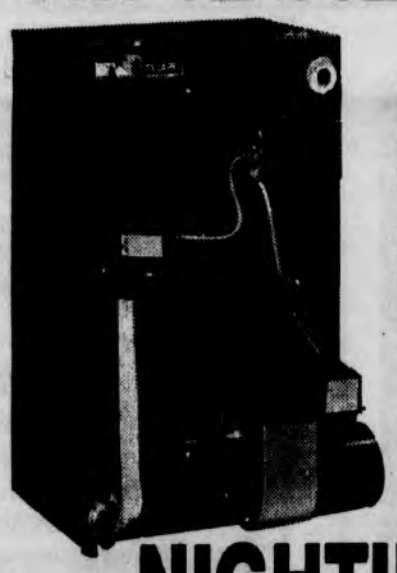
State Treasurer Joe Malone recently released the names of over 31,000 individuals and businesses that are due more than $50 million from abandoned accounts.

Under the State's Unclaimed Money Law, bank accounts, insurance proceeds, payroll checks, stock certificates and the like that have been inactive for at least five years are deemed abandoned. All such accounts must be reported to the Treasury, which then attempts to notify the rightful owners or legal heirs.



The Treasurer noted one important aspect of the Unclaimed Money Law which requires that until claimed, all funds are kept in the State's General Fund where they are invested for the benefit of all residents and taxpayers here in Massachusetts.

The following Cohasset residents or businesses may be due funds from abandoned accounts:



Balerna, Alfred J.; Basmajian, Michael B.; Bassett, L.C.; Beechwood, Improvement as; Bornstein, Ruth; Bowser, Mary L.; Car Connections Inc.; Chase, Edward; Chase, Francis M. or Barbara A.; Ditmar, Janet; England, Frank W. &; Hyde, Barbara Tr. and Tracy; Kulturides, Penos C.; Lanata, Nancy; Lincoln, Danforth B. and Eleanor L.; Mattakeesett, Chapter Demolay, Order; O'Brien, Timothy; Parker, Donald and Andrea; Reardon, Jean R.; Reis, Mollie L.; Rhilinger, Edward A.; Richardson, E.I; Saftler, Penny G. and Eric; Salvador, Isabele R.; Sceery, Robert M. and Helen; Sheerin, Paul M. and Karen; Silvia, Ruth and Joseph; Smith, Jean M.; Smith, Sumner Jr.; Wiggins, Ernest G.; Willwerth, Lawrence A.; Wright, Albert H.

The oil boiler it pays to buy.

The Weil-McLain 68 high-efficiency oil boiler can pay for itself in a few short years with the money it saves by using less oil. The 68 operates at over 84% efficiency, compared to only 60% efficiency for an old, inefficient oil boiler. That means the 68 uses far less oil to produce the same amount of heat. And the 68 oil boiler will provide uniform comfort, wall to wall, floor to ceiling, regardless of outside temperature.

All are invited to come and enjoy a sampling of home cooked pies from Cohasset kitchens, and to view a continuous showing of videos from the society's "Living History" programs, a series of television shows relating to Cohasset's own history.

Admission to the Pie Sociable will be $3, payable at the door.

Tracing Roots

Tracing one's family roots can be a fascinating subject, and the historical society will hold a day-long seminar devoted to the subject of family genealogy Saturday, June 5, at Trueblood Hall, the Unitarian Parish House, 23 North Main Street.

The program will be headed by William H. Schoeffler, Director of Education for the New England Historical Genealogical Society. Participants will learn how to get started in genealogy, what sources are available for genealogical research in New England and elsewhere, and what to look for in deeds and probate records. For instance, Mr. Schoeffler will describe techniques applicable to genealogical research in all geographical areas.

The seminar will have two hour-long lectures in the morning and one in the afternoon, with luncheon break.

Admission for society members will be $25, for non-members $30 of which $5 will be applicable to first-year membership in the society for those wishing to join.

Admission to the seminar will be limited; and will be confirmed by receipt of the reservation fee, sent to the Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset 02025.

The ladies take the stage

By Lynn Eisenhauer
Special to the Mariner

Seventy hopeful women auditioned for the Cohasset Drama Club's spring production, "The Women," written by Claire Booth Luce. Congratulations to the chosen cast members from the towns of Cohasset, Scituate, Quincy, Weymouth, Randolph, Hull and Hanover.

Rehearsals for this fast-moving, conniving, comedy-drama fun show have been in full swing since the beginning of February and now it's "show time."

Club president and producer, vivacious, Gayl Varallo, generates enthusiasm and the club's community spirit and talent explodes. Burk Ketcham designed an intricate revolving set which accommodates eleven scene changes. Paula Cianciarulo, designer and seamstress, has volunteered her expertise and knowledge of fashions of the 1930s to help with the over 100 costume changes in the show.

Sherry Campbell selected a cast of veterans and new-comers. Under her professional direction, the mix has blended well and the result is a performance worth seeing.

The women starring in "The Women" are: Betty Miessner, Julia Szulerowski, Peggy Corrigan, Darcy Pratt, Sara Garland, Christina Kiriakos, Dee Dee Nicynski, Norma Assad, Carol Laing, Karen Cavallo, Crissy Wade, Roberta Raffa, Rhonda Read, Lisa Cronin-Smith, Doris Pizzotti, Dorothy Keville, Colette Holmes, Rhonda Holmes, Stephanie Pedigo, Kristen Johnson, Elizabeth Warren, Tracy Lee Riddell, Gina Vanaria, Risa Korey and Irene Egan Bright.

Performances are at the Cohasset Town Hall March 27, 28, April 3 and 4 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, March 29 at 7 p.m. Sunday's performance is to benefit the Cohasset Community Center. Tickets are $8, available at the Cohasset Community Center, or call 383-0088 or 383-2366 for more information.

All-Brahms concert

A prominent pianist on the South Shore, Lydia Madrick is one of those rare talents who can skip from Andrew Lloyd Webber to Beethoven without missing a beat. As a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music, she brings considerable classical training to her work as accompanist for the Hingham-based Unicorn Singers and Broad Cove Chorale, and she's been known to play a mean kazoo at the combined group's annual concerts.

Cohasset Drama Club actresses strike a pose in 'The Women' on stage this weekend and next at town hall.

Between gigs as a soloist, chamber player, and arranger for the North River Trio, Madrick also finds time to perform with several musical theater companies and various local churches.

She counts among her many musical thrills the Monday evening rehearsal when she played the run-through with the Brockton Symphony Orchestra of Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto, which would be performed ultimately by the well-known pianist, Ursula Oppens.

In real life, Madrick works full time as Assistant Office Manager at Brandon Woods, a proposed retirement community, and spends her remaining waking hours teaching piano in her Norwell home.

She is appearing at Brandon Woods Saturday, April 4, at 8 p.m. and again, at First Parish Church in Norwell Sunday, April 5 at 3 p.m. with the Unicorn Singers as accompanist and soloist in an all-Brahms concert.

She lives in Norwell with her husband, Allen, children, Amy and Andrew, and legions of devoted pets, all of whom are delighted that another audience can now share in the lush Brahms Rhapsody and duet version of the dazzling Hungarian Dances (played with Dawn MacGarvey of Duxbury) that they've been enjoying for the past few months.

Tickets for both performances are $8 in advance and $10 at the door ($6 and $8 for students and seniors) and can be purchased at Noble's Camera (Hingham Square) and Dwyer's Cleaners (Norwell Center).

Candidates on cable

On Thursday, March 26, Patriot Ledger correspondent Molly Hochkeppel will join Pierson to Person host Wigmore Pierson in a three hour special Cohasset candidates' night edition, 8-11 p.m., on Continental Cablevision Channel 3 in Cohasset and Scituate.

Selectmen candidates will respond to questions from Hochkeppel and Pierson 8-9 p.m. The candidates are incumbent Diana Kornet and three challengers: John McNabb, Michael Sullivan and Merle Brown.

Candidates for Cohasset School Committee will debate 9-10 p.m. and are Ralph Kidder, Owen L. O'Malley and Kenneth Wilcox.

Board of Health candidates Robert Davenport and Thomas Cook will debate 10-10:30 p.m.

The final half hour will feature the viewers' calls and opinions on the candidates along with political commentary from the co-hosts Hochkeppel and Pierson.

The public is invited to be part of the studio audience and those planning to attend should be at the studio on Gannett Road by 7:30 p.m.

For further information about upcoming guests and additional show information, contact the Pierson Show's Executive Producer, Robert Belliveau, at 545-0643.

Introducing a CD for optimists that even pessimists will love.

5.43% Effective Annual Yield | 5.30% Annual Rate

THE WIN/WIN CD.

The rate goes up as the economy improves but never goes lower than your opening rate. Do you see a great CD rate today or a CD rate that will be even higher in the future? Either way you win. Bank of Boston's Win/Win CD is the only CD that starts out with a good rate and adjusts itself every three months to stay ahead of select U.S. Treasury bills.* Yet it never goes lower than your opening rate. And unlike mutual funds this two-year CD is FDIC insured. But this offer won't be around forever. So whether your glass is half empty or half full, the Win/Win CD is a smart investment now. And the best is yet to come.

BANK OF BOSTON

Put our strength to work for you.

Member FDIC.

Initial offering rate subject to change at any time. After a CD is opened, the interest rate may change on May 7, 1992 and on the fifth business day of every third month afterwards, but will never be less than the initial rate.
*Rate adjustments will be determined by adding a "margin" of one-half of one percentage point to an "index" equal to the average rate for the weekly auction of short-term (13 week) U.S. government bills sold at a discount from face value. Interest is compounded monthly if you maintain certain accounts and have a combined banking statement, otherwise quarterly. Offer applies to personal, commercial and IRA CDs of $1,000 or more. Maximum $100,000 deposit for commercial CDs. Annual yield assumes that principal and interest remain on deposit for at least one year at initial rate. Offer may be withdrawn at any time. Substantial penalty for early withdrawal. Member FDIC.

Come on down! Town Meeting is Saturday

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Does $13 million get your attention?

Town officials hope so.

The town needs at least 100 Cohasset folks to turn out for the annual Town Meeting, starting at 10 a.m., Saturday (April 4), in the Cohasset High School auditorium.

Articles for the regular town meeting and special town meeting (which will take place during Saturday's regular town meeting) total 52.

Selectmen Chairman Ned Tebbetts says financial articles usually attract the most debate.

The town's advisory committee is recommending an operating budget of $13.3 million in Article 3. That's $305,696 or a 2.3 percent increase over last year's budget.

The advisory committee report is printed on pages 3 and 4 of the town warrant. Copies are available at town hall.

If town meeting doesn't wind up by about 5 p.m., Saturday. The meeting will be recessed until 7:30 p.m., Monday (April 6), Town Moderator William Weeks explained.

"It (town meeting) may very well go beyond Monday evening," he said.

Weeks, who is in his eleventh year as moderator, said the articles that stir discussion can be surprising.

"In years gone by, the budget article has often not had as much debate as a number of seemingly less important articles," he said.

A quorum of 100 is required before town meeting can get underway.

But if the number should fall below 100 during the course of the day, the meeting doesn't have to be stopped.

"I as moderator am in charge of the meeting. If somebody raises the question of a quorum, that's their right. Then if a quorum count showed less than 100 in the hall, we'd have to stop until we got 100.

"But that's not happened in my experience as town moderator," he added.

The moderator also decides when to break town

Moderator: the show can go on — live television

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Whether or not to televise Town Meeting live became an issue last week when the town moderator considered asking Channel 3 to delay the transmission.

And the prospect of being caught in the middle — between the town as licensing authority and public's right to live broadcasts — was unsettling to officials at Continental Cablevision.

Cohasset Town Moderator William Weeks said in his view televising the Town Meeting live may detract from attendance.

"My only purpose in raising the issue is to maximize turnout at Town Meeting which is the best opportunity for all Cohasset citizens to participate," he said.

Although live coverage is not necessarily the norm in other towns, it's become a tradition in Cohasset.

The town's resident talk-show host, Wigmore Pierson, has hosted the Continental Cablevision gavel-to-gavel live coverage for the past 4-1/2 years.

While Pierson is relieved that live coverage can continue, he feels asking for delayed transmission is not only inappropriate but a violation of First Amendment rights.

"I'm extremely outraged especially when I feel the rest of the country is sending a message to open up the process," Pierson said.

Pierson disputes that fact that live coverage keeps people home from Town Meeting which needs a quorum of 100.

"There isn't one scintilla of evidence to support that," he said. "Once or twice the Town Meeting's been short a quorum and I brought Bill Weeks (to the camera) to say come on down and without any exception, 20-to-50 people came in."

Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson said that while by statute the Town Meeting must allow equal access to all media — there is no case law, that he could find, regarding live broadcasts.

"The Town Moderator has broad power that has not been judicially tested," Henderson noted.

Wendy Forman, area program director for Continental Cablevision, said Continental views itself as a "communications tool."

'We work like a library. We don't dictate what books can or cannot be read.'

Allison Ludlow is Cohasset's own comeback kid

By Paula Knowles
Mariner correspondent

Allison Ludlow was Cohasset's junior version of Bo Jackson. Even as a grade schooler, the coaches were watching – barely able to wait until she could play at the high school level.

She could hit and field a baseball, pass and catch a football, dribble and shoot a basketball better than most kids twice her age.

When soccer came to Cohasset when she was nine or ten, she took to the sport as if born to play. So it came as no surprise to anyone that by the eighth grade she was a varsity player on three high school teams. She seemed to live, sleep and breath sports.

And she practiced hard. All year long. One sport after another, sometimes with two overlapping. As she got older, she began to take more time for school work, became active in her church youth group, and worked part time in her parents' business, August West.

But the majority of her free time was still devoted to sports. And when you talk to Allison, "Sports" begins with a capital S.

At school, she settled in, always willing to help Athletic Director Clark Chatterton with phones or uniforms or setting up the gym for games. By her freshman year, her schedule and agenda were pretty well set.

That was the year that Cohasset's girls' soccer team came within just one game of the playoffs; but the future seemed bright for both the team and midfielder Allison Ludlow.

"Next year" was on everyone's mind. She continued to play soccer on weekends for an Intercounty league team, even as she played basketball and softball during the week at CHS.

But in late May, 1990, Allison's athletic future was put on indefinite hold..

While playing soccer for the Intercounty league, she was slide tackled and felt – and heard – her knee pop. That pain and "pop" was the anterior cruciate ligament giving way and tearing, and would lead to major surgery in September.

That summer, for the first time in her memory, she played no sports. No practice, no pick up games. Just months of rest.

"That seemed like the worst time of my life," she recalled recently.

In the fall, instead of practicing with the soccer team,

Cohasset's week

Harassment is topic

Selectman Martha Gjesteby proposed guidelines for a sexual harassment policy at Monday night's meeting.

Gjesteby said town counsel is reviewing the language in the guidelines.

"It's not just for staff, but for anyone who comes in contact with the staff," she said.

Gjesteby also proposed the board adopt a civil rights policy. She said she would produce the guidelines for town counsel to review.

The board said they would vote on adopting both policies once town counsel has reviewed the language contained in the guidelines.

Liquor change upsetting

Selectmen are angered over a new state statute requiring all petitioners for liquor licenses to purchase the alcohol from a wholesaler.

The Alcohol Beverages Control Commission (ABCC) changed the statute last week, according to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon. Prior to the change, petitioners could purchase beverages from any licensed vendor.

Because Cohasset does not have a wholesale liquor distributor, the selectmen do not want to force residents to purchase liquor out-of- town.

Selectmen will contact the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA) to unearth the rationale for changing the statute.

Plastics have second life

Plastics at the dump are recycled, Sharon Becker of the Solid Waste Study committee told selectmen Monday night.

Becker's response was prompted by selectman Jane Goedecke's question about where the separated plastics go.

"I've heard the opinion from two people that plastic containers aren't being recycled" and end up in an incineration plant, Goedecke said.

"That is really not true," Becker said.

She added said the company that recycles the plastics will no longer accept plastic jugs which held detergent because they ruined the grinding machine.

"People were not rinsing out the containers and the detergent ruined the machine," Becker said.

She said those containers should continue to be brought to the dump because the committee is collecting them in anticipation of finding a company to recycle them.

Kirkendall appointed

Karen Kirkendall is a new member to the Cohasset Common Historic District Commission.

Selectman Diana Kornet nominated Kirkendall at Monday's selectmen's meeting to fill a vacancy.

Boating basics course

A boating safety course sponsored by the Massachusetts Environmental Police which is offered to the public at no charge, consists of six, two-hour classes.

People of all ages are encouraged to attend, particularly the young. Successful completion of such an approved boating safety course by persons under 16 years of age who wish to operate a motorboat (over 25 H.P.) without adult supervision is now required by state regulation.

The course meets from 6:30 to 9 p.m. April 8-23, at Wompatuck State Park (visitors center), Union St., Hingham.

The Division's primary purpose is to foster safe attitudes by developing an increased awareness of safe boating practices, legal responsibilities and general marine knowledge.

The following topics will be addressed: watercraft, accident prevention, legal requirements, safety equipment, safe boating operating, rules of the nautical road, and aids to navigation.

A test will be administered during the final meeting and upon successful completion of the course a safety certificate will be awarded to students. Materials include a free manual and other literature, as well as various audio-visual aids.

Railroad report ready

The MBTA Old Colony Railroad Rehabilitation Project Final Environmental Impact Statement/Report (FEIS/FEIR) is now available for review at the State Transportation Library, 10 Park Plaza, Boston; and at the municipal clerks' offices and libraries of all communities in the Old Colony study area.

An MBTA public informational meeting will be conducted to discuss the project, April 29, at 7:30 p.m. at Braintree Town Hall.

If you have questions, please call: Jane Chmielinski, Project Manager-Environmental, MBTA at 722-3152 or Pam Wolfe, Public Involvement Coordinator, Sverdrub Corporation at 482-7880. A set of FEIS/FEIR Volumes I-IV may be purchased for $25.

ALS to the rescue

Selectmen signed an agreement with South Shore Hospital Monday night to add advanced life-support (ALS) service to the town's emergency response repertoire.

The service will provide two full-time paramedics and a medically-customized four-wheel vehicle to Cohasset and 11 other South Shore communities. ALS service will supplement the town's existing emergency response system, which is provided by the fire department.

The ALS paramedics will respond only to life-threatening emergency calls, and meet the fire department at the scene or en route to the hospital.

The goal of ALS is to increase survival rates by improving pre-hospital care.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon said payment for the services of both response teams, that of the fire department and the ALS paramedics, will be billed through South Shore Hospital.

The hospital will bill the patient, or the patient's insurer, for the combined total of services provided by ALS and the fire department.

The hospital will then reimburse the town for the fire department's involvement based on the same reimbursement scale used by medicare.

Medicare pays the town a base rate of $65.65 plus $4-a-mile for emergency response and transport.

Doyon noted the disparity between medicare's reimbursement to the town and the amount billed.

The town charges $125 for basic service and $5 a mile for transport.

Doyon said Cohasset can offer ALS to its residents at no cost to the town.

South Shore Hospital has offered the service free of charge to the 11 targeted communities.

Drain project plugged

The project to repair the Doane Street drain hit another obstacle.

State money promised to the town to repair the culvert is now to be in the form of reimbursement—meaning the town must front the money.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon said voters must authorize the town to borrow the necessary funds. He estimates the project will cost approximately $150,000. He added that the state's project reimbursement will not include interest charges incurred by the town on the borrowed money.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said the new set-back was to be expected.

"To get it at this stage is an achievement. It's only taken 10 years."

Selectman Rocco Laugelle said the need for repairs is immediate.

"Something has to be done, you could go under there with a canoe."

Because the warrant is closed to new articles, Doyon said, the question of borrowing the money will be presented to voters at a special town meeting in early June.

The special town meeting is scheduled because of the override questions on the May 16 ballot. If any of the questions fail, the town will need to reallocate budgeted money and the reallocation will require another town meeting, Doyon explained.

The need to ask voters to approve funds to repair the drain isn't the cause for the special meeting, he added.

Democrats caucus

Cohasset Democrats caucused recently to elect delegates to the Issues Convention of the Massachusetts Democratic Party. The convention will be held May 30 in Worcester.

Chartis B. Langmaid, chairman of the Cohasset Town Democratic Committee, ran the caucus which elected four delegates and four alternates. Elected were Daniel Kearney, John K. McNabb, Jr., Karen Corcoran and Gail Collins. Alternates were Ron Goodwin, Gerald McNabb, Mary Richard and Julie McNabb.

The group unanimously approved Langmaid's proposal that delegates at the convention specifically address the issue of hunger in Massachusetts. She cited the alarming increase in the need for food pantries which are opening because of the poor economy and lack of leadership both on Beacon Hill and in Washington

Langmaid said, "Helping the hungry has been a concern of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, which for years has collected money and food for the Cohasset Social Service League."

'The Women' is must-see for theater lovers

By Patty Hayes
Mariner correspondent

The Cohasset Drama Club began its 71st season last weekend with a remarkable presentation of "The Women" starring 26 actresses from Cohasset, Scituate, Quincy, Weymouth, Randolph, Hull and Hanover.

The show is entertaining and thought-provoking. The costumes, set and acting are all extremely well-done. "The Women" is a must see for theater lovers.

The script, written by Claire Booth Luce in 1936, is aptly titled —there are no men in the play. Although men are major players in the plot, we never see them. We learn of them only from what "The Women" say to each other. But, even though the men are not characters, they are very important in the play's action. In fact, the women's lives revolve around men; their actions are based on the men's actions and opinions. The play is a sort of 1930's upper-class "Battle of the Sexes".

"The Women" are Mary Haines (played by Veteran CDC actress Carol Laing of Quincy), a wealthy and loving wife and mother, and her socialite group: Nancy Blake (Peggy Corrigan), Sylvia Fowler (Darcy Pratt), Edith Potter (Chrissy Wade), and Peggy Day (Rhonda Read); as well as her maid, her cook, her mother and her daughter.

The play brings together every possible type of woman: a virgin, a tramp, a child, a grandmother, a hairdresser, and and a successful author. Their viewpoints and opinions are expressed, and shared; often agreeing, but mostly conflicting.

A number of the women are having problems with their husbands. The problems are varied: some husbands are cheating, some are having financial problems, another sexual problems. But their talking and gossip (as well as the gossip among their hairdressers, maids and cooks), augments their problems and a number of the women end up in divorce.

The beauty of the production is in its successful characterizations. Carol Laing plays a delightfully sweet and intelligent heroine, much like Donna Reed, the type of heroine who the entire audience feel for and wants to see happy.

Darcy Pratt, on the other hand, succeeds in making the audience despise her character Sylvia Fowler. Sylvia causes the breakup of a number of marriages—including her own—during the course of the play. (Pratt said that she was delighted with the role of Sylvia, but wants everyone to know that she isn't really that mean.)

Perhaps one of the play's finest and funniest characters is the Countess De Lage, played by Norma T. Assad, who laughs, sings, and dances—to the delight of the audience—throughout the production. The Countess is by far the most memorable character for her flamboyance and her humor.

Sara Garland is also wonderful, playing little Mary, the daughter of heroine Mary Haines, who brings a young woman's point of view to the play. Sara, a sixth grader from Marshfield, has also starred in Once Upon a Mattress, The Miracle Worker and The Homecoming.

One of the play's best scenes is a hysterical "cat fight" between the first Mrs. Howard Fowler (Darcy Pratt) and the second (Tracy Lee Riddell).

Riddell, a newcomer to CDC, plays a smart, pretty, young husband-stealer. Her stage presence is so powerful, and at the same time casual, that it is hard to believe that this is her first performance with the club.

The women's costumes, changed over 100 times during the show, are exquisite 1930's garments ranging from exercise shorts to full-length gowns and furs. The costumes were designed by Paula-Jon Cianciarulo, a freelance seamstress and designer who attended the School of Design and Chamberlayne College in Boston, and designed headdresses for the Boston Opera.

"The Women" is produced by Gayl Varallo, the president of CDC, and is directed by Sherry Campbell, who has also directed Crossing Delancy and Picnic for the North River Players.

The unique rotating set was designed by Burt Ketchem, who has been with the CDC for many years.

Other women starring in "The Women" are: Irene Egan Bright, Rhonda Holmes, Christina Kiriakos, Carolyn Roche, Elizabeth Warren, Dorris Pizzotti, Colette Holmes, Betty Miessner, Dorothy Keville, Karen Cavallo, Kristen Johnson, Lisa Cronin-Smith, Risa Korey, Dee Dee Nicynski, Roberta Raffa, Julia Szulerowsky, Marion Barnes and Stephanie Pedigo.

"The Making of a Play," a documentary based on the production of CDC's "The Women" will air soon on local cable television stations.

"The Women" has two remaining show times: April 3 and 4 at 8:00 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall. Tickets are $8, available at the Cohasset Community Center, or by calling 383-0088 or 383-2366.

Town Meeting is Saturday at CHS . . .

meeting for lunch and when to take up special town meeting business, Weeks said.

Once the business is complete, town meeting is recessed until the annual election, April 11.

"When the annual election is over, we recess the meeting once again to a date following the override election," Weeks said.

"If town meeting voted a particular budget in excess of Prop. 2-1/2 limits or the (override) election did not back town meeting action, town meeting would come back into session to reduce the budget," he explained.

Weeks said the tentative date for the continuation of town meeting following the override election is June 1. At that time town meeting may reconsider some articles based on what happens on the override, he said.

If the recommended operating budget is approved Saturday — the town will have to make up about a $424,000 projected FY'93 deficit through an override election set for May 16.

Selectmen plan to determine the format for override ballot questions at their April 13 board meeting at town hall.

Pay increases for police, fire, library, and clerical unions are not included in the proposed budget in the warrant.

Any contract settlements including pay increases for FY'93, which starts July 1, will require a larger override, according to the advisory committee report. Articles 9 through 12 deal with collective bargaining agreements for town employees.

Other major items which citizens will be asked to vote on include substantial school repairs and purchasing an ambulance.

Voters will also be asked to approve a range of articles — from quarterly real estate tax billing; to allowing the First Parish Church to install a septic system in the town common; to making sure the town is protected financially for 50 years from potential problems caused by private landfills.

Police take no raises, cite town's finances

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

The police accepted a salary freeze for fiscal 1992 as part of the four-year contract their union signed with the selectmen Monday.

President of the International Brotherhood of Police Officers Paul Laguelle said the contract reflects the union's commitment to the town, and its understanding of this year's budgetary constraints.

"We worked very quickly and cost-effectively," Laguelle said.

Selectman Jane Goedecke agreed and praised the union.

"I hope the people reflect on the degree of cooperation the police have shown."

Under the terms of the new contract, the police receive a two percent raise in fiscal '93 and a 3.5 percent raise in fiscal '94 and again in '95.

The two percent increase during the second year of the contract will require an additional $11,442, while the third and fourth year increases will require an additional $20,424 and $21,129 respectively.

"People should note that the raises equal 2-1/4 percent per year over the course of the four years. That's below the 2 1/2 percent limit," Laguelle added. Under Proposition 2 1/2, which passed in 1981, the tax levy cannot increase more than 2-1/2 percent per year.

Chairman of the board of selectman Ned Tebbetts also lauded the union's cooperation with the town and noted that their contract doesn't include increases for "the cost of living or inflation."

Laguelle appreciated the compliments, but reminded the selectmen that they should be prepared to back the union on the floor of town meeting also.

"Only one member of the board of selectmen spoke in our favor last year at town meeting," Laguelle said.

Members of the advisory committee spoke out against the police department's budget, citing the officers' salaries, at last year's town meeting.

"I find it disgraceful that four members of the advisory committee spoke against us about a contract that they did not negotiate.

"The contract was settled," Lauguelle added.

Selectman Diana Kornet, who was the lone voice of support for the police at last year's town meeting, said the selectmen didn't intend their calm response to the advisory committee to be interpreted as agreement.

"The reason we didn't say anything was that we were just so astounded at what happened," she said.

Kornet added there would be no repeat performance this year.

"We won't be blind-sided a second time," she said.

Cable coverage is live . . .

"We work like a library. We don't dictate what books can or cannot be read," she said.

Forman explained that by law the cable company cannot dictate what is shown on cable.

"It's the right of every resident of Cohasset to put on a program if they want.

"I couldn't say no the the KKK and I'd have to provide them with equipment," she said.

However, Forman said the issue of whether or not to broadcast live — if asked not to by town officials — is "a tricky situation."

"I want to make it clear, we don't like to put ourselves in the middle of the issues of the town," she said.

Forman said that Continental Cablevision holds a 15-year license with about five years to run and will begin negotiations for renewal in two-to-three years.

Selectmen are the licensing authority, she said.

Forman said Continental Cablevision is committed to covering important town events.

She said Continental Cablevision has seen live coverage of town meetings "work to the town's advantage" and can help increase attendance.

Pierson spoke out at the selectmen's meeting Monday in favor of live broadcasting. Selectmen were unanimous is their support for continuing the live coverage.

But, Pierson said, one board member told him later that he should focus on the "really important issues facing the town," he recalled.

"This person chooses to miss the point," Pierson said. "In my view, this issue is the very essence of democracy — freedom of expression and freedom of access to information.

"I am pleased Bill (Weeks) has made the decision to allow live T.V. cable coverage.

"I believe it's the right decision, I believe it's the fair decision; and I believe it's the only appropriate decision under the circumstances."

AFS needs families

AFS International/Intercultural Programs is a nongovernmental, nonprofit organization that promotes intercultural learning through worldwide exchange programs for students. Formerly known as the American Field Service, AFS was founded in 1947 as a peacetime contribution by volunteer ambulance drivers who served during both world wars.

AFS host families are not asked to make special expenditures for their AFS students, but they do pay food costs and incidental expenses as they would for their own child. AFS provides medical coverage and a monthly allowance to its students.

Families interested in applying to host an AFS student should immediately contact their local AFS representative, Robin Grinnell, or Gitte Shea at 383-0614 or 383-2384 or contact AFS directly by calling toll-free 1-800-AFS-INFO.

Mini-school students create ocean mural

The Collaborative Mini School/Junior High program has been located at Cohasset High School for the past five years.

The students range in age from 13 to 16 and all have severe behavioral and learning disorders.

In school they work on a functional academic curriculum as well as a variety of life skills.

The mainstreamed setting that Cohasset High offers, gives the students on-going social interactions with their peers. The students also utilize the town to work on various community skills like: shopping, eating in restaurants, and use of the public library.

The mural project was designed through a collaboration between the occupational therapist, Tina Dean and the classroom teacher, Lori Perlman.

The occupational therapy goals to be addressed were developing: upper arm strength, eye hand coordination, concentration, and attention span.

The functional life skills to be addressed were: working on interior painting with rollers and brushes and the concepts of appropriate dress/appearance for painting verses school.

For the project the students first primed the wall with paint by learning how to "cut in" and use rollers. The students used sea sponges to apply green and blue to create the water. Next, they each designed a fish and made a pattern.

The staff made distinct stencils with tape for the students to paint within and covered the rest of the wall with newspaper to avoid error. The students discussed color and design before they started to paint.

After the first coat of color was applied the staff continued to add tape stencils in order to create the design. The students added another coat of paint.

Finally, the tape was removed, details were added, and sea weed was sponged on as the ocean floor.

This project took the month of March to complete with the students painting for several hours every Friday.

Back row, Matt Grassy, Anthony Dern, Max Marchand, and David Miller; and front row, Julie Magie, Kevin Melville, and Sandy Young pose in front of the mural they painted at the Mini-School.

❑ We begin by congratulating Joni Reynolds of Cohasset Savings Bank fame. Joni was recently selected the Assistant Branch Manager of the main office at the Cohasset Savings Bank. That's quite a promotion indeed, and we are all pleased and proud of you.

❑ A brand new baby makes the news this week, the birth of the beautiful daughter, born to Nancy and Peter Brown March 19, at South Shore Hospital. What a great time of year; be sure to watch for the baby carriage!

❑ John O'Leary won first place in the Student Boys Division of the 1992 Cystic Fibrosis Stair Climb Race. He did so by running up the 1,028 steps of the Prudential Building, if you can imagine that! The Stair Climb was a tremendous success, raising over $100,000 for treatment and the research program.

Great job, John. That's a lot of climbing for a most-worthy cause.

❑ Colby College announced recently that Sarah Hamilton has been elected to Phi Beta Kappa. Sarah, the daughter of Jim (yes, the Mariner's very own cartoonist) and Laurie Hamilton of King Street, will graduate in May.

❑ More college news, this time from Bowdoin College in Maine. David R. Shultz, son of Larry and Linda Shultz, made the Dean's List on the basis of his scholastic achievements during the fall semester of the 1991-1992 academic year. David will be a graduate this year. Oh my, how time flies!

❑ At the 96th Annual Meeting of St. Stephen's Church the following were selected to serve: Dick Avery as Rector's warden; Dick Cook as Assistant Treasurer; Ed Lincoln, Alix White, and Roger Nast to serve on the Vestry; Pat Munro as Diocesan Convention delegate; Pen Place as Region delegate. John Vivian will be appointed to continue for a new term as treasurer, and Sheila Wallingford as Clerk.

We applaud you all and think it grand that you devote the time to your devotion.

❑ The next time you see John Staunton be sure to tell him you are pleased with his efforts...John, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Staunton Sr., has attained Dean's List status, the second-highest recognition for academic achievement for the fall semester at Middlebury College.

❑ And, from Babson College we receive more Cohasset News... Sarah A. Dickerman, a major in finance investments, received her degree.

Sarah is the daughter of David Dickerman.

❑ We also heard from Middlebury College, which alerts us that Kristen Martin, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John D. Martin Jr., made the Dean's List for the fall term.

We know you worked hard, Kristen, and we applaud you (she had at least a 3.1 average, folks).

❑ Dennis Jones also deserves a round of applause. He worked hard enough to make the Dean's List at Wentworth Institute of Technology by achieving a GPA of at least 3.25.

Great work!

❑ The next time you see Patty Dellorfano, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dellorfano, ask her all about Cairo, Egypt, and the fall semester she spent there!

Patty is a senior history major at St. Michael's College and studied at the American University in Cairo where she was enrolled in Arabic and Egyptian history courses. She was able to travel all over Egypt as well as to Jordan, Syria, Israel and West Bank.

Patty says, "I gained an understanding and appreciation of a culture very different than mine. I hope I can dispel some of the unfortunate and negative stereotypes Arabs are labelled with in this country."

❑ Can you believe that Deborah Marie Hartley is a senior at the University of Rochester? Seems like yesterday she was on the CHS basketball team...anyway, she was named to their Dean's List for the fall semester and we do congratulate her!

❑ Heard from Regina Schultz today (3/29) who still hasn't located her dog, Casey. Casey is a Keeshond that was hit by a car last week, and they cannot find him anywhere. They are still on the lookout, and they certainly want to thank Mary Ford for her great item last week, which has had everyone calling with tips or "maybes." Casey looks like a small huskie. Call Regina if you have any clues, at 383-0598. She misses Casey!

With Jack and Ann Kissel, Peg Folsom, and Pat and Ray Brennan, Cohasset was well represented at the recent 'Mall Walk for Hospice,' an indoor walk-a-thon to benefit terminally ill Hospice of the South Shore patients and their families. The event netted more than $25,000 for the non-profit organization.

AIDS education discussed

A special program on AIDS and the role of our public schools in AIDS education will be telecast in April to cable viewers on the South Shore.

"What Is Safe?: AIDS Education in the Schools" is a ninety-minute studio discussion between educators, students, a health professional, and a local man who has tested positive for HIV.

The program is produced by Continental Cablevision and the Lighthouse Technology Committee, which is comprised of educators from public school systems across the South Shore area. Hull High School health teacher John Anderson, principal Robert McIntyre and media director Bill Hurst coordinated the effort, along with Continental's program director for Hull, Bill McColgan, who is moderating the discussion.

Joining Anderson and McColgan on the panel are Cohasset High's Mike Gill, Scituate High's Grace Brennan, Eileen Craffey, a nurse with Hospice of the South Shore, and Paul Tardanico from the AIDS Action Committee in Boston. Two years ago, Tardanico discovered that he was infected with the AIDS virus.

A studio audience made up of students from Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Randolph, and Scituate will also get an opportunity to voice concerns and ask questions.

"What Is Safe?" will be presented on Continental Cable Channel 53 in the towns of Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate, April 6 and 13 at 8:30 p.m.

Take two

The lights, camera and action will roll Saturday thanks to Town Moderator William Weeks' decision to allow 'live' television coverage of Town Meeting.

And while we applaud Weeks' allowing the meeting to be broadcast — we are dismayed by the apparent power held by one position.

The U.S. Constitution and First Amendment were written long before television was invented or even conceived of.

But we consider cable television to be 'press'. And although newspapers don't have the capability to be 'live' like T.V., we can't imagine being asked not to print something obtained from a public meeting until sometime later.

And what about radio? If Marshfield-based radio station WATD should want to cover Town Meeting live — is that decision also left up to the Moderator?

To be fair, the discussion about whether or not to allow 'live' cable broadcasting was broached because officials say they are worried about people watching Town Meeting in the comfort of their homes rather than coming down to participate.

No one suggested that cable T.V. couldn't cover the meeting. But officials discussed the benefits of delaying its broadcast.

We think live coverage may actually encourage participation in Town Meeting. Those who can attend may just might find the discussion lively enough on T.V. and want to join in.

And in any event, in a democracy voters shouldn't be denied something — like live coverage — in order to force them to participate.

Also troubling is the apparent conflict of interest between a private enterprise like cable television and the public officials that act as its licensing authority.

Will cable companies bite the hand that feeds them?

That remains to be seen.

The question of allowing live television has come up before. A few months back, there was discussion in selectmen's quarters that a liquor hearing not be broadcast to protect the identity of the minors testifying.

A compromise was reached and the show went on live.

But the question must be asked — what happens if selectmen or the moderator say no?

Live television coverage should be protected. We feel it's your right to see meetings live if the technology — and in the cable company's case — the manpower is available.

When the question comes up. Don't take no for an answer.

Roll call

Take a look at the box on the next page. It tells you how your Beacon Hill lawmakers voted on legislation before the Senate and House this past week.

On the boxes under the pictures of Cohasset's legislative delegation — Sen. Robert Hedlund and Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray — a N means an 'no' vote and a 'Y' means a yes vote. If the lawmakers don't vote for any reason the letters NV will appear in the box denoting No vote.

We hope over the coming weeks readers will sharpen their political IQs and check on what our representatives are deciding on our behalf.

If town meeting is televised live on cable — would you stay home and watch it rather than attend?

'I can't go to town meeting because my mother is older and I like to be there with her. But at the same time I like to keep in touch with town affairs. I think town meeting should be televised live.'

— Renate Sides

'I read the warrant. If I see something of interest, I go whether it's shown on television live or not. I think live television might bring town meeting to some peoples' attention.'

— Joseph Laprise

'I wouldn't go to town meeting because I work. But I am against not televising it live because of the homebound and elderly. Any citizen participation is a good thing.'

— Helen Mallers

'If I were going, I'd go anyway. It's hard to imagine on a nice Saturday sitting down to watch town meeting, it's not interesting enough. It's a bizarre form of entertainment.'

— Paul Carlson

'No. I wouldn't watch it on television anyway because it's a terrible production, very poor quality. I doubt I'll go to this town meeting, but showing it live certainly wouldn't keep me from going.'

Beacon Hill Roll Call

QUESTIONS	Senator Robert Hedlund (R-Weymouth) 722-1646 Room 416B	Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset) 722-2800 ext.7957 Room 134
(Sen)1. COLA (H 5260)—Senate 31-2, approved an emergency preamble to the bill providing a 5 percent cost of living adjustment, retroactive to January 1, for retired state, county and municipal employees. The bill sets a $450 cap for individuals and provides that the money come from the state's pension reserve fund. The preamble would have the bill take effect immediately. Preamble supporters said these 75,000 employees are entitled to have this hike take effect immediately. Some opponents said the money should come from the general fund in order to prevent the hike from adding to the state's $1 billion unfunded pension liability. Others said the Senate should not act on the measure but use it as leverage to get the House to act on the early retirement bill. (A "Yea" vote is for the emergency preamble. A "Nay" vote is against it).	Y
(Sen)2. LEGAL ASSISTANCE (S 1465)—Senate 27-8, approved a supplemental budget amendment providing $90,697 to the Massachusetts Legal Assistance Corporation (MLAC) for operation of the asylum representation project. Amendment supporters said this restores some of the money taken out of the MLAC budget and will help many people including indigents. Opponents offered no arguments. (A "Yea" vote is for the $90,697. A "Nay" vote is against it).	N
(Sen)3. DESERT STORM (S 1465)— Senate 26-9, rejected an amendment providing $94,554 to pay the debts of Massachusetts Homecoming Incorporated for its Stand Tall for America Day last July in Taunton. Amendment supporters said rain hurt the finances of the event and put the group into debt. They said the state should pick up the tab for this day which officially welcomed home all Massachusetts residents who served in Desert Storm. Opponents said the state cannot afford the money and should not set a precedent of paying the debts of a non-profit group in Taunton. (A "Yea" vote is for the $94,554. A "Nay" vote is against it).	N
(Sen)4. SCHOOL BUILDING (S 1465)—Senate 19-16, rejected an amendment providing $5.3 million for grants and reimbursements to city, town and regional school district by the school building assistance program. Amendment supporters argued many communities have been waiting a long time for this money and said many school buildings are in need of repair and renovations. Opponents said the state cannot afford this additional money and noted the budget already includes $6.2 million to help school with the most serious structural problems which jeopardize safety. (A "Yea" vote is for the $5.3 million. A "Nay" vote is against it).	N
1. FEDERAL SPENDING (H 5149, H 5355)—House 91-49, substituted different resolutions for the ones urging Congress to transfer savings from defense budget cuts to the domestic budget. The substitute resolutions call for the funds to be transferred to the army air and national guard. Supporters of the "domestic" resolutions argued increased federal aid is necessary to help the state's social and economic needs including human services, education, homelessness and local aid. Supporters of the "guard" resolutions said these will help the state's 260,000 defense related workers and prevent defense cuts from hurting the Massachusetts economy. They noted the guard provides disaster assistance, food to the needy and drug enforcement services. (A "Yea" vote is for the "national guard" resolutions. A "Nay" vote is for the "domestic" resolutions).		Y
2. UNEMPLOYMENT (H 5379)—House 110-40, approved the conference committee version of the bill hiking the unemployment insurance taxes paid by employers by 30 percent. This would hike the average payment from $363 per employee per year to $474 through 1993 and to $680 in 1984. Supporters said this will bail out the state's unemployment trust fund deficit which could climb to $900 million by year's end. They noted the state is currently borrowing $5 million daily from the federal government to pay benefits. Opponents said this is a tax hike which will hurt businesses and force them out of the state. Many supported tightening eligibility and cutting benefits and claimed the fund will return to solvency when the economy recovers. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against it).		N

SAFE proposes two articles for town meeting

SAFE has submitted two articles for the April 4 Annual Town Meeting. The first article would simply limit a commercial landfill to demolition and construction waste. The second would require Cohasset Heights Landfill (CHL) to provide sufficient financial security to prevent contaminated leachate from polluting Lily Pond, the town's reservoir.

"Article #36 clarifies what we are willing to accept in commercial landfills in our town," said Mary Gainor, treasurer of SAFE and presenter of this article.

Article #36 prohibits the disposal of sewage residuals from the Mass. Water Resources Authority or any of its cities and towns, as well as hazardous waste, low level radioactive wastes, liquid wastes, special wastes or by-products of waste incineration anywhere in Cohasset.

With the exception of the buildings and facilities of the Town of Cohasset and its departments, Article #36 prohibits the disposal of any commercial, residential, or municipal solid waste except for demolition and construction waste.

Article #37 requires that the owner of a private landfill post bonds with the town to cover fifty years of leachate removal. The state already requires 30 years funding for leachate removal. This article gives the town direct access to those funds.

"We can't rely on the state to save our town from financial disaster if the closed landfill causes problems with the water supply," said Kevin O'Donnell, SAFE members and presenter of Article #37.

candidates' corner

Ralph Kidder

In a recent letter to the editor (March 26, 1992), Roy Fitzsimmons raised several good questions about the finances and organization of the Cohasset Public Schools. Unfortunately, Mr. Fitzsimmons has his facts confused. Let me set the record straight.

With respect to the number of teachers employed by the School Department, Mr. Fitzsimmons states that he "had been told that there were around 55 teachers in our system and now we are told that there are 93." In fact, the figure of 55 "given out in public hearings in years past" refers to the number of high school teachers only in 1987-88, a number which has since declined to 46, representing a reduction of 16 percent.

Based on his confusion with the numbers, Mr. Fitzsimmons implies that the number of teachers has dramatically increased. In fact, the total number of teachers has declined from 101 in 1981 to 88 in 1992, a drop of 13 percent. During the same time period, the number of administrators has declined from eight to six, a reduction of 25 percent. To accuse the superintendent of "giving out incorrect information to the public" is most unfortunate and I suggest that Mr. Fitzsimmons consider an apology.

On the question of employee benefits, our most recent figures indicate a cost to the town for school department employees of approximately $450,000. This would bring the total school department budget to about $6.25 million. This total represents a cost per pupil of about $5,400 – which is actually less than the foundation level recommended in the current education reform efforts – and which ranks Cohasset 170th to 180th in per pupil expenditures in the Commonwealth. While the vast majority of towns do not include employee benefits in any town departments, I support Mr. Fitzsimmons' right to have this information provided to him.

Finally, on the question of the override, "staff" reductions which by definition include administrators, secretaries, coaches, custodians and bus drivers in addition to teachers – will be our only choice if the override fails. If the school cepartment is required to absorb half of the loss of revenues from a failed override, or about $212,000, the schools will end up with about $25,000 less next year than we have this year! Given four consecutive years of school budget increases at less than the inflation rate, it would be naive to suggest to the public that such a reduction could be managed without staff reductions and a serious threat to the quality of education afforded by this town.

If Mr. Fitzsimmons truly believes that "we must maintain quality education" in Cohasset, then it is important to work together to provide accurate information to the public. Yelling fire in a crowded theater is simply irresponsible.

School Committee member Ralph Kidder, who is seeking reelection to a second term, was asked at a campaign appearance to respond to recent criticism of the health education program in the Cohasset Public Schools.

Noting that Dr. Michael Gill, who directs Cohasset's program, is a widely respected leader in health education, Kidder stated that "our program is a comprehensive kindergarten through 12th grade approach. In the lower grades, the program stresses self-esteem, making good decisions and developing healthy habits and includes such topics as stranger awareness and respect for others. In the upper grades, the program includes such topics as learning to resist peer influence, substance abuse, AIDS awareness and the more traditional sex education that most of us experienced."

When pressed on the issue of sex education, Kidder noted that "our program stresses abstinence as the number one choice for young people. At a time when AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases and teen pregnancy are rising rapidly, however, it is imperative that we provide children with as much information as possible. Parents, of course, have the primary responsibility for creating dialogue with their children around these issues. The churches also have a role. But I believe that the Cohasset Public Schools program, which has been developed and revised with the assistance of the Health Advisory Board composed of parents, medical experts and clergy, truly reflects the values of this community."

Kidder stated further that "I believe in the old proverb that it takes a village to raise a child. One of the key components of the School Department's five-year strategic plan is the building of closer ties with the entire community. I can't think of a better place to build public-private partnerships than in the health education of our children."

Merle S. Brown

First, I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Mariner newspaper for "Candidate's Corner." This important community service has provided an opportunity to all candidates to express their views to a large number of voters.

I would also like to thank "Pierson to Person," the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, and the Rotary Club, for helping the candidates get their message out.

I urge all Cohasset voters to attend the annual town meeting at Cohasset High School at 10 a.m. April 4, and to vote on election day, April 11. I would appreciate your support and one of your two votes for the board of selectmen.

Thomas Cook

At a recent coffee, Tom Cook, candidate for the board of health, discussed his views regarding expansion of the Cohasset Heights landfill (CHL).

"I believe the board of health has effectively dealt with the current expansion plans for CHL so far. I also believe that CHL's engineering studies have not conclusively proven that CHL does not present a risk to the water quality of Lily Pond."

Cook said that he had written a letter to the state expressing his views and asking the state to require more detailed analysis from CHL.

If elected to the board of health, Cook said a top priority would be continuous monitoring of CHL's operation to protect the town's water supply.

Owen L. O'Malley

Owen L. O'Malley, a candidate for Cohasset School Committee, was born in Cohasset, and is a life-long resident of the town. He has 25 years classroom teaching experience in Boston, and has been for many years a member of the faculty at Boston Latin School, the oldest public school in the nation, founded before Harvard University.

He is a former president of the BLS Faculty Senate, and is currently its treasurer. He has also served as a building representative to the Boston Teachers Union, representing members of the faculty.

He is, in addition, an attorney and a member of the Boston Bar, Massachusetts Bar, and American Bar Associations.

He has served in different capacities in his parish, St. Anthony's, for many years, and also has participated regularly in town events, such as the annual Road Race By-The-Sea.

It is his belief that, in view of the declining school-age population and growing numbers of retired and elderly citizens, we face some entirely new social, economic, and political conditions in the future, and may have to reconsider school spending, and perhaps shift some of our resources to the service of our retired population.

He strongly favors the best possible education for our young people in Cohasset consistent with the best interests and legitimate concerns of all our citizens.

John K. McNabb Jr.

John K. McNabb, Jr., candidate for Cohasset selectman, expressed support for senior citizens.

"The town should support services for our senior citizens," said McNabb. "The Council on Aging and Senior Center deserve our support."

"The Senior Center provides a number of invaluable services to senior citizens, who make up about one-third of the town," said McNabb. "On a budget of only about $49,000 a year, the Senior Center is probably one of the most cost-effective departments in town."

"The Senior Center provides crucial health-care services and one-on-one counseling to senior citizens and their families," said McNabb. "These services enable many senior citizens to live in their own homes and contributes to their quality of life."

"We can all help support senior services by contributing or otherwise assisting the $250,000 fund-raising campaign of the Community Center. This campaign is to build a 2,000-square-foot addition to the Community Center for use by the Senior Center," he said.

"This new Senior Center wing will help to centralize and improve the quality of senior services. The Senior Center is an important town department that services a large part of the town population."

McNabb also expressed strong opposition to the proposed "blackout" of live coverage of the April 4 Annual Town Meeting.

"Live coverage of Town Meeting is essential to promote open government," said McNabb. "Town officials should never have the ability to ask or order the cable TV company to reduce or delay coverage of any town government meeting."

Michael Sullivan

Michael Sullivan, candidate for selectman, said March 30 that he feels a well-rounded board is vital in the years ahead.

"Cohasset is facing some very difficult decisions in the next few years; decisions which are going to affect the management structure of the town," Sullivan said. Because of this, he feels that it is very important to balance the strengths and talents of those serving on the board.

"We need to ask questions and seek answers from as many different directions as possible. I know from first-hand experience that very often the most effective answer is not the first one that comes to mind. Sharing thoughts and bouncing ideas around is often the best way to determine solutions. Of course, experience and background affect the way a person views things and the broader a basis the board can draw from the better off we all are."

Sullivan's experience and background in business management, including personnel and budgetary issues, will lend an added dimension to the board. "Further, I am convinced that my experience on the Board of Health gives me a jump start with understanding the connections and interactions between various town boards and departments," Sullivan explains.

As an individual who founded and built his own business over the past eight years, Sullivan has a good understanding of the importance of managing resources to ensure a high level of efficiency and effectiveness. He started Search Services Inc., a firm which specializes in executive search, several years ago. Previously he held managerial positions at Fidelity Investments and Prime Computer firms.

Ken Wilcox

School Committee candidate Ken Wilcox says he has enjoyed meeting and talking with people, and hearing their comments and concerns about the public schools.

"Most people tell me they're interested in providing a high quality of education to the town's children," Wilcox said. "However, they want to be sure their tax money is well spent and effectively educating our children. I've heard some talk that elderly citizens don't want to support the schools, but it's not true. Some of our elderly residents have grandchildren in the Cohasset schools, many have grandchildren in other school systems. These people aren't about to abandon their commitment to education."

If elected, Wilcox said he will pursue these issues: seek alternative funding sources and sharing resources with neighboring towns; take a hard look at school administrative costs; address concerns about some basic deficiencies in the academic program; ensure that values and discipline are part of the curriculum; increase respect for teaching by elevating the quality of the staff; increase the communication between the school committee and the residents. "I would organize public forums to explain issues about the schools to achieve consensus," Wilcox explained.

chamber chatter

by Paula Knowles

Two weeks ago the Chamber of Commerce held its annual Candidates' Night.

Having only three contested races in this year's town elections, and having had to change the date of the program due to a conflict with "Super Tuesday," I was afraid that the attendance would be, well, rather low...non-existent, if you want to know the truth.

But, as usually happens when I attempt to second-guess the future, I was way off the mark.

In fact, no one was prepared for the number of people who showed up to listen to and question the candidates. The room was packed, SRO, we even ran out of coffee. The attendance was not the only surprise of the night, however.

The keen interest shown by the audience, the consideration given every answer from the candidates, the numbers of questions asked...all belied the paucity of contested races.

Town finances were, as expected, the main topic of the evening; but a surprising number of questions were aimed at extracting the philosophical bent of the candidates.

Not just how they might make cuts, if necessary, but why and where. What constitutes quality of education, quality of living, quality of service.

Questions thoughtfully asked and just as thoughtfully answered, even to the point of honestly saying, at times, "I really don't know."

A number of responses also pointed out that elections are not the only important democratic function governed by us, the taxpaying, ballot-pushing public. Town meeting is ours to rule as well.

And that, of course, brings me to the meat of the matter for this week. Town Meeting. A centuries-old, time-honored and some would say archaic, New England government tradition. A town coming together to decide, by majority vote, how the community will be governed.

In many larger towns, the individual citizen no longer has a direct say in town meeting. Many towns elect town meeting members, each member representing a particular neighborhood or group of streets or blocks.

But we in Cohasset are still small enough to hold town meetings as they were originally conceived – one man, one vote, with every person given equal opportunity to speak to any article, given equal opportunity to tell his side of the story, get across his point of view.

Whether the issue be barking dogs, lack of sidewalks, town budgets, school philosophy, or jetskiing in the harbor – every issue gets a fair hearing, every opinion gets a chance to be aired, every voter gets a chance to cast his ballot.

Unless, my friend, the man or woman whose voice wishes to be heard does not attend town meeting. In this case, democracy falters. Oh, I will agree that part of the democratic process is the ability to choose NOT to vote. But that choice must be a conscious one to be considered.

How many of us miss town meeting each year out of simple neglect, carelessness, lack of attention? How many of you really say to yourselves "No, I am not going to town meeting this year because...(fill in the blank)."

No, I hink most people just say, "Oh, is that today? I forgot." And then they just shrug, and go on with what they are doing.

That is not a choice, it is an abdication. It is government by default.

Town meeting is Saturday, April 4. Check the time, and come up and join in. I won't say it's fun, although it does get to be addicting (especially when it's held in the gym. I don't know why, but it seems more democratic and community-oriented there).

But it is necessary.

Cohasset's own comeback kid . . .

she was undergoing therapy and sitting on the sidelines as her team finally made it into the playoffs. Watching them play, she vowed that she would be back with them in '91. She wasn't going to give up yet.

With hard work and the help of a 20-pound leg and knee brace that closely resembles a torture device from the Middle Ages, Allison came back to play basketball during the 1990-91 season.

Although it was hard to get used to the extra weight and lessened mobility from the brace, she was comfortable enough with it by spring to take the field as shortstop for the CHS softball team.

Her knee held up well during the season; but a freak line drive almost knocked her out for the count. Blood clots developed in her upper nasal cavity, and emergency surgery was necessary to stop them from travelling to her brain.

"The doctor said if he had waited another 12 hours, I might have been dead," she recalled. But even then, she missed very little playing time.

And when soccer season rolled around again last fall, Allison was ready.

She started out slowly, and had a hard time at first with lateral movement; but as the season went on, she came back faster and faster. A consummate team player, she was playing for a team and coach that stressed team play above all else. And it was paying off.

They finished the season on an upswing, and really hit their stride during the playoffs, winning game after game until losing to Medway in the semi-finals.

Two weeks later basketball season started, and it appeared that Allie was back for good.

But once again, her knees betrayed her. In the first home game of the season, Allison felt a sharp pain in her "good" knee, and as she fell, she heard that same "pop."

"I was so scared", she said that night. "I heard the knee go "pop," and it was just like 1990 all over again. I was afraid it had happened again."

What actually happened was even stranger, however. She had fractured a bone underneath the kneecap, and separated the cartilage.

Again she had to sit out a season as she rested her knee. She underwent arthroscopic surgery in February to repair the damage, and is once again undergoing therapy.

She has become an old faithful at So. Shore Therapy in Weymouth, and has nothing but praise for her therapists.

What about her sports future? Well, contrary to expectations, Allison feels ready to start running in a week or so, and insists that she will be able to rejoin the softball team by mid-season.

Asked how her parents, Jeff and Marcia, feel about her returning to sports, Allie just smiled and said, "They leave it up to me. They know how much sports mean to me, and how miserable I am when I can't play. And they have always trusted me and been incredibly supportive of my feelings and decisions. They support me 100 percent, and that helps me a lot. I feel that I'll be ready soon. I'll be back."

And no one who knows Allie Ludlow would doubt that statement for a moment.

Race by the Sea will take place Sunday

The 1992 Cohasset Road Race by the Sea sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club will be held Sunday, April 5, at 1 p.m.

The Cohasset Community Center annually awards the Nate Hurwitz Trophy to the first Cohasset resident to cross the finish line. This trophy was instituted by the center in 1988 to honor the first director, Nate Hurwitz, father of Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray. Nate was instrumental in the beginnings of the community center.

The center will celebrate its 50th year of service to the community in 1993.

A CRUISE-A-MONTH

Riverboat Luncheon Cruise: Wednesday, June 10 – A cruise along the banks of the Charles River. We will board the Charles II at the Cambridge Side Galleria Pier. Throughout the trip the Captain will point out informative and interesting facts while sailing by the Esplanade, Mass. Institute of Technology and Harvard University and other interesting places. A delicious dinner of Baked Boneless Breast of Chicken will be served on board. Cost of the cruise is $29.99. Call the COA today.

Tall Ships Week: Wednesday, July 15 – Sail at noon from the Bay Point Marina in Quincy, and while enjoying a box lunch, view the Tall Ships and Naval Vessels from around the world – the largest official Tall Ships flotilla ever seen in the United States – part of the 500th Anniversary of Columbus' discovery of America. To get the early booking discount, payment must be received by April 10, so call and make your reservation now. Cost is $29.99.

Boston Harbor Cruise: Wednesday, August 12 – A repeat of last year's popular sail on the Spirit of Boston. While cruising Boston Harbor, enjoy a traditional New England Clambake with lobster, barbecued chicken, shellfish, corn on the cob, roasted potatoes and dessert. Entertainment will be provided by the talented waiters and waitresses who will perform a Salute to Broadway Review. This was a wonderful day last summer. Call 383-9112 for reservations. Cost is $25.95.

The Cohasset Sixty Plus Club will hold their April meeting on the 16th at 23 North Main Street. The meeting will begin at 11:30 a.m. Blood Pressure Clinic will be available. Luncheon will be served at noon, followed by an interesting presentation of slides by the Reverend Steven Hall, pastor of the Beechwood Congregational Church, on his recent trip to Europe. All interested citizens are invited to attend.

Unicorn Singers perform

The Hingham-based Unicorn Singers, directed by Margo Euler, will present a program of choral and piano works by Johannes Brahms on April 4 and 5.

Featuring pianist Lydia Madrick, a long-time Norwell resident, the ambitious program will debut Saturday evening, April 4, at 8 p.m. at Brandon Woods in Hingham. A repeat performance will be held the following day at 3 p.m. at First Parish Church in Norwell.

The concert will showcase the wide scope of Brahms' musical genius, from the towering a capella motet, Opus 74, No. 1, "Warum ist das Licht gegeben dem Muhseligen" to the energetic Gypsy Songs ("Zigeunerlieder"), from the haunting Opus 92 songs with their shimmering piano accompaniment to the glorious Schiller ode "Nanie," which features the piano in a full-orchestral sound and which contains some of the most passionate and satisfying writing for chorus.

Featured pianist Lydia Madrick will be joined by Dawn MacGarvey for a piano four-hand version of two of Brahms' "Hungarian Dances," and Madrick also will perform Brahms' "G Minor Rhapsody."

Tickets for both the Hingham and Norwell concerts are $8 in advance and $10 at the door (students and seniors are $6 in advance and $8 at the door). Tickets can be purchased at Noble's Camera in Hingham Square and at Dwyers' Cleaning Spot in Norwell Center.

Benefit for Cynthia

Dance Visions, a dance company out of the Work Out Club in Hingham, will present a benefit performance for Cynthia Bell, at 8 p.m., Thursday, April 2 and Friday, April 3 at Cohasset High School.

Tickets are $7 at the door.

Take to the seas

Do you ever dream of taking to the seas and seeing the world? That dream was reality for Maine boat builder Cabot Lyman and his family who spent three years on a 49' sloop. The details of that trip will be colored by slides in a Friday evening lecture by Lyman, April 10 at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

This was not the first time Lyman lived on water. Before having children, he and his wife sailed throughout the Atlantic and Mediterranean for six years, never living on land. After docking for several years to start their family and build boats, the Lyman's returned to the sea, this time with their three sons. They proceeded West via the Panama Canal, Torres Strait, and Cape Agulhas.

Their adventures are chronicled in Lyman's slides and lecture. The evening begins at 6:30 with a supper. Call 383-9548 for tickets ($35 per person); reservations must be made by April 8.

CHS sinks flushed daily 'to get the lead out'

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The town's water department found low levels of lead in the water from a laboratory sink at the high school.

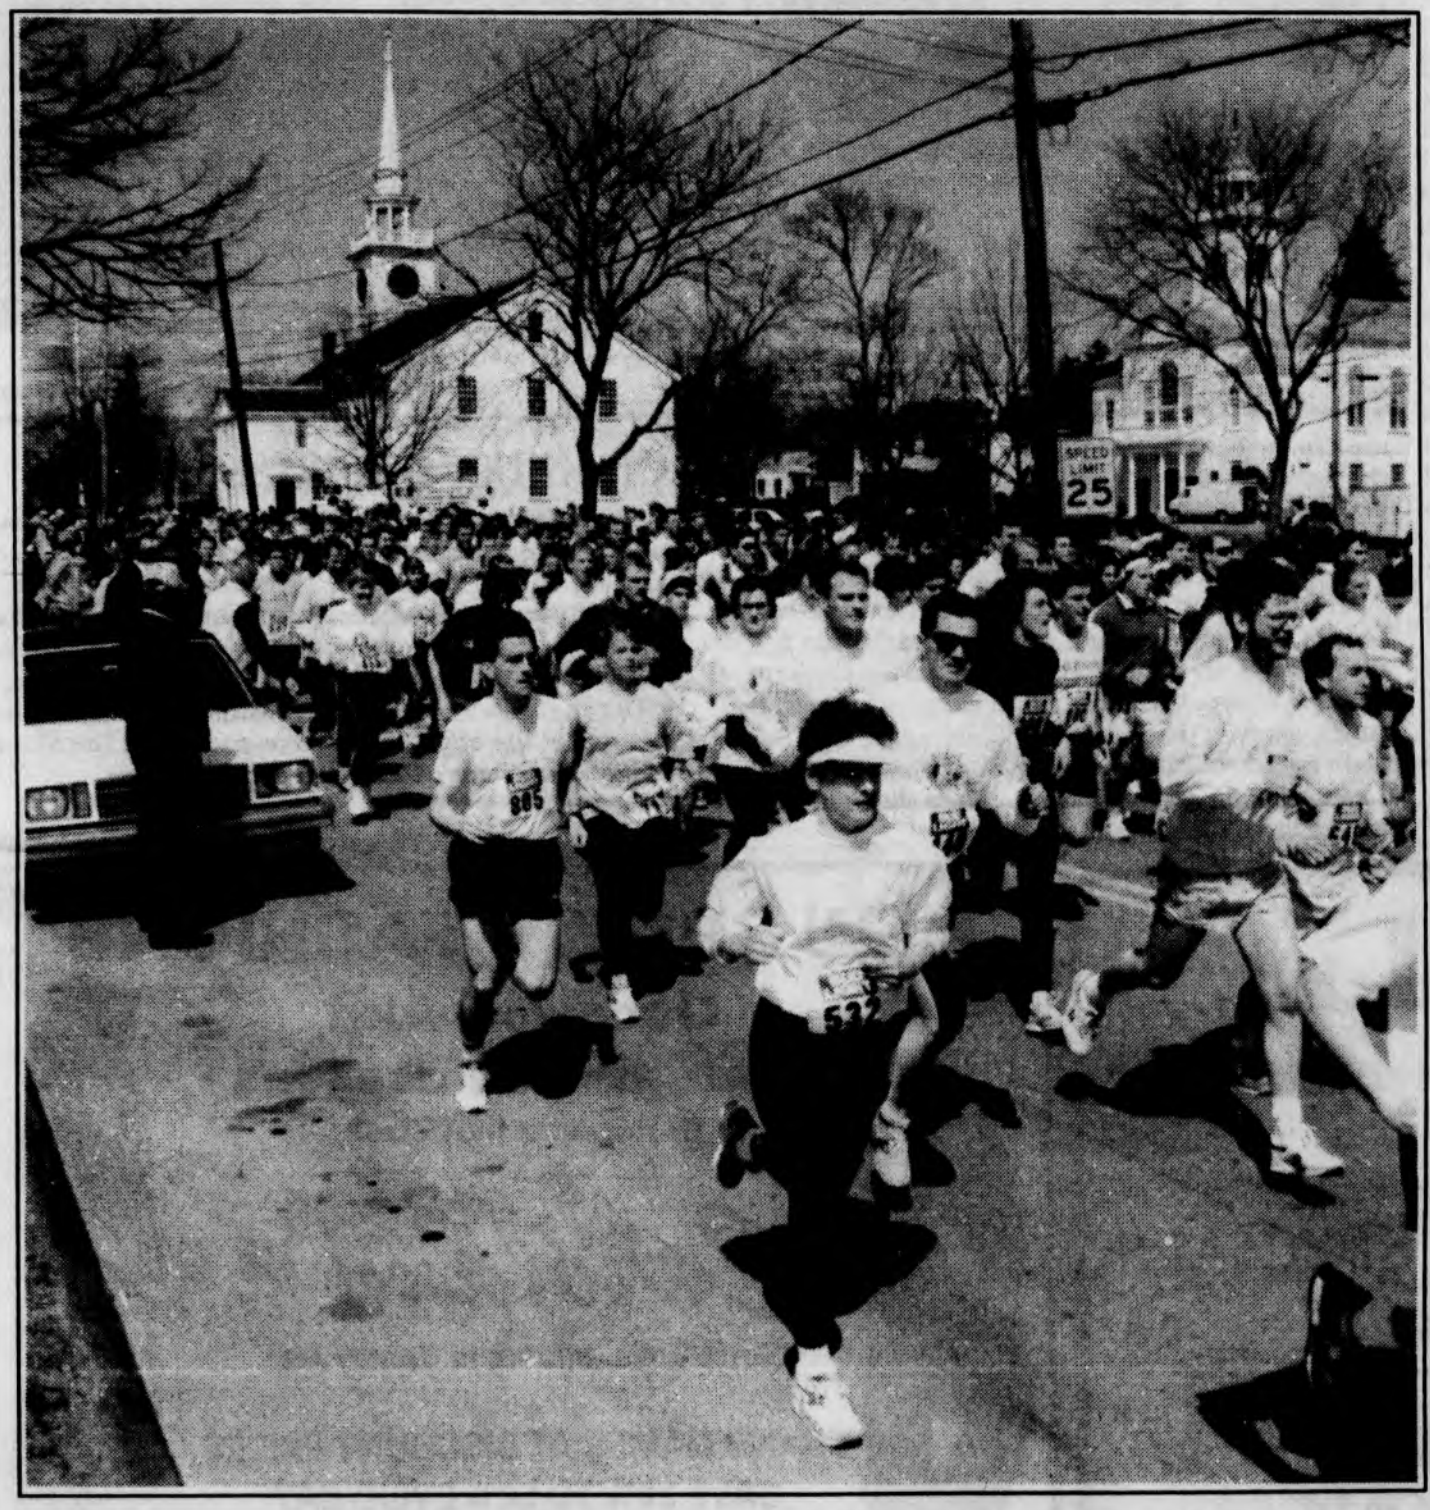
The level showed .07 milligrams per liter (MG/L) above the current .05 MG/L standard for drinking water set by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

At the end of the year, the EPA will set a more stringent standard of .015 MG/L, health board member William E. Baird said.

"As a precaution, we are sampling water in all the schools to determine if the water is safe to drink," Baird said.

He added that water department would be testing the water in selected homes in the next few weeks.

The state is mandating the tests as the new regulations go into effect, to insure that there is good drinking water, Baird said.



According to the EPA, the Lead and Copper Rule becomes effective on December 7.

Compliance deadlines require that medium-sized water suppliers begin monitoring in July.

Lead leaches out in pipes with solder fittings when water stands overnight. Flushing for about five minutes usually gets the lead out, Baird explained.

"Water mains are not the cause," he said. Baird said flushing toilets or running the shower evacuates the Secret ballot, heated debate highlight town meeting

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

A secret ballot on patrolmen's raises and some heated debate about the Council on Aging versus the Social Service League sparked two sessions of Cohasset's annual town meeting.

And to hold citizens' interest — after the first two regular town meeting articles and the eight special town meeting articles were dispensed with — Moderator William Weeks selected the balance of the articles at random out of a "South Carolina wicker basket."

By secret ballot, voters accepted a four-year police contract which will cost the town $11,442 in fiscal year 1993, which starts July 1.

The article passed by a vote of 110 to 47 after selectmen and the advisory board presented their recommendations.

Selectmen, who negotiated the contract, asked that voters approve the agreement and not make it contingent on the passage of the May 16 override.

Advisory board chairman Nan Roth asked that the contract be approved contingent on the passing the override.

Officials estimate an override will be needed to balance the $13.3 million town budget passed at town meeting. Selectmen will decide the amount and format of the override ballot questions during their April 13 meeting at town hall.

Weeks said secret ballots are "very infrequent because they are time consuming."

Roth said the advisory board requested the police contract article be voted by secret ballot.

"With issues like public safety, people feel more

Three races spark town election

If Cohasset citizens are consistent, then about 50 percent of the towns 4,700 registered voters will turn out for the local election Saturday.

"Everyone votes here at town hall," Town Clerk Marion Douglas said. The polls are open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The town election drew 45 percent last year; 55 percent in 1990; and 47 percent in 1989, Douglas said.

The four-way race for two seats on the board of selectman should spark interest. There is also a three-way race for two seats on the school board. And two are vying for one seat on the health board.

Incumbent Diana Kornet is running for re-election for one of two, open selectman seats, as is John McNabb, Jr.; conservation commission chairman, Merle Brown; and health board member Michael Sullivan. Selectmen Chairman Ned Tebbetts is not seeking another term.

The two, three-year school committee seats are being sought by incumbent Ralph Kidder, Owen McNally, and Kenneth Wilcox. Christopher Ford is not running for a third term.

On the health board, Thomas Cook and Robert V. Davenport vie for the single, three-year seat. Chairman Sharon Becker is not running for re-election.

Cohasset's week

Straits Pond cleanup

The "No-Name Storm" of October 30, left Straits Pond and its shoreline in shambles. The Straits Pond Committees of Cohasset and Hull are organizing a cleanup day Saturday, April 11 at 10 a.m.

They are seeking volunteers to assist.

This is an opportunity to make a difference in your environment, save your community, and make new friends at the same time.

The cleanup will start out at the Black Rock Beach area. The parking restrictions will be waived for the day.

Boots and gloves are suggested, bring garbage bags and if available, waders and rope.

The towns of Hull and Cohasset will provide for the disposal of refuse and recyclables but the friends of the pond must provide the elbow grease.

In case of inclement weather the rain date will be Sunday, April 12 at 10 a.m. For further information, call Anson Wheeler at 383-9232 or Merle Graham at 383-9324.

Tax payment deadlines

The second-half Fiscal 1992 Real Estate and Personal Property tax bills have been mailed. the due date for these bills is May 1. The Treasurer-Collector's office will be open Wednesday, April 29 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Thursday, April 30 from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Friday, May 1 from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Postmark dates will not be accepted. Payment must be received in the Collector's office by 1 p.m. May 1. No Exceptions!

Elizabeth Ripley, treasurer-collector, said, "Anumber of bills have been returned to our office because of improper mailing addresses. Any property owner who has not received a tax bill should contact the Collector's office at the Town Hall, 383-9900, ext. 113. Failure to receive a tax bill does not waive payment of the tax and does not excuse the homeowner from interest charges on payments received after the due date.

"The first commitment of Motor Vehicle bills for 1992 was mailed on Feb. 12. These bills are due and payable upon receipt, payable without penalty by March 13. If you received a bill and the vehicle listed on that bill has been sold, stolen, traded, declared a total loss or registered out of state, you must contact the Board of Assessors at 383-9900, ext. 124 and inquire about an abatement.

"The 1992 mooring bills have also been mailed and are due no later than 4:30 p.m. April 1. Failure to pay the mooring fee will result in the loss of mooring privileges."

Payments may be mailed to the Treasurer-Collector's Office, P.O. Box 296, Cohasset, 02025 or paid in person at the Town Hall. Our office is located on the second floor of the new addition. Any early payments will be appreciated. By mailing these bills earlier than usual we hope to avoid the costly procedure of borrowing in anticipation of tax revenue. Once again the Senior Center sent volunteers to help our office prepare all of these bills for early mailing. Their help is greatly appreciated, Ripley said.

Town meeting highlight info

comfortable having the opportunity not to say yes or no in front of everyone else," she said.

There was a move afoot not to pass the FY'93 budget, led by Fred Quelle, 120 Nichols Rd.

Quelle, who said he was against an override, tried to present an amendment "to modify the bottom line" of the budget.

After discussing the matter with Town Counsel Richard A. Henderson, Weeks said Quelle's proposed amendment was "so general that it's not proper the motion be acted upon by this meeting."

Quelle then suggested the meeting not approve the budget.

"My only suggestion is we go without a budget until the situation can be rectified," he said.

Nevertheless, the budget article passed on a voice vote.

Voters also approved raises for non-union town employees and the town clerk. These raises are not contingent on the override.

Selectmen Chairman Ned Tebbetts explained that if the override fails, the town must find the money in its budget to cover the increases.

Quelle also objected to quarterly tax billing, which was adopted at town meeting.

"That's going to create a sizeable workload for all of us to pay for," he said.

Speaking as a citizen, assessor James W. Lagrotteria, 104 Howe Rd., said quarterly tax billing would save the town borrowing costs and would improve cash flow.

Gerard Keating, Blackhorse Lane, said billing would not cost the town "any more work.

"The work is done by senior citizens. We put ten-to-12 people in town hall and it costs zero. We will gladly support this effort to save taxpayers money," he said.

S.A.F.E., a citizens' group opposed to landfill expansion, won a victory at town meeting with an amendment to the town by-laws requiring landfill owners to post bonds, estimated at $750,000 a year. The bonds would cover possible costs to the town over 30 years of leachate removal. (Leachate is liquid garbage that oozes underground).

Cohasset Heights Landfill owner, Paul Barry, 21 Mohawk Way, spoke against the article. Barry said he was running a business and was trying to survive.

"I leave it to you to come to the table with us. Maybe there's a better avenue than forcing $22.5 million from someone who doesn't have it," Barry said. ($22.5 million is $750K times 30 years).

Voters also approved the purchase of a new ambulance contingent on passing an override to pay for it.

Fire Chief John Nadeau said the old ambulance "is worn out.

"It's had some very hard miles," he said.

He explained that an ambulance averages 450 calls a year and spends considerable time idling at the scene of an emergency and at the hospital.

Voters also approved a change in the classification of the C.O.A. director. The change hikes the director's annual salary to $28,373, a jump of $1,644. Keating said the position was classified incorrectly in 1986 and "it's been under discussion ever since."

Keating said the job description of the C.O.A. director is "nearly identical" to another in-town position but is classified two levels lower. The position with a higher classification is held by a male, he said.

"I hope you will treat the goose, the same as the gander — think about it," he said.

Mary Hartwell, 54 Rust Way, spoke up about the Social Service League.

"There is another organization in this town that takes care of senior citizens. We are totally funded by the consignment shop in Cushing Plaza."

Hartwell said there was "an overlap in services" between the two agencies, which "are both fighting to do the same job."

Keating was angered by Hartwell's remarks.

"We promote more good will for your organization than you do yourself," he said. Keating spoke against "politicizing things when we work hard to build programs to take the burden off the taxpayer."

Lead found in water . . .

pipes in a house.

He recommended letting the water run in the kitchen sink for five minutes and "the water should be fine."

Baird said the water in the high school cafeteria has "tested fine."

"Our concern is that as the water sits in the pipes (overnight) at the high school — in the morning when the kids turn on water, they are getting water contaminated with lead," he said.

After random testing which revealed that one sink where water exceeded drinking water standards, Baird said the water department decided to test all sinks and bubblers at the town's three schools.

Those tests were conducted Monday. Results should be available Friday (April 10), Baird said.

"We want to be certain our children drink good water above the current standards," he said.

As a precaution, at the high school, the members of the faculty and administration and the janitor are running the water in all sinks and bubblers for five minutes every morning and flushing all toilets to clear the pipes of any lead.

School board chairman, Barbara W. Bliss said it was her understanding that the sink where lead was found "had not been used in quite some time."

She said the school department is taking precautions.

"We are not ignoring it and the health department will continue to test," Bliss said.

Cohasset is not alone in finding lead in school water.

Seventeen of the 275 drinking fountains in the Weymouth School system have been shut off because the water contains what federal standards have determined to be unsafe levels of lead.

During the recent testing period in Weymouth, the lead levels in 17 school bubblers remained high after flushing.

(Mariner staffer Tom Henshaw also contributed to this report).

Langmaid announces state senate bid

Chartis Langmaid of Cohasset announced April 3, that she will be a Democratic candidate for the Norfolk and Plymouth district of the state senate.

At a campaign announcement party held at the home of former Cohasset selectman, Clifford Mitman, Jr., and his wife Millie, Langmaid told a large crowd of supporters that her experience in community leadership, her independence, and her commitment to public service will help her in charting a new course in government.

"As your state senator, I will be a leader to build coalitions for actions to restore dignity and hope to our people. We must be accountable to ourselves to do our best, not just for ourselves, but also for those who need a compassionate hand. A strong future requires that every person be educated to his or her potential, be assured of access to quality and affordable health care, and be challenged to achieve."

A resident of Scituate and Cohasset for 26 years, Langmaid is a graduate of Wellesley College and the "Program for Women in Politics and Government" at Boston College. She was married to the late John F. Langmaid III and is the mother of two sons who will graduate this spring from college.

Chartis Langmaid

She has served as president of the Cohasset League of Women Voters and has chaired several community organizations including the Cohasset Housing Partnership, Household Hazardous Waste Disposal Committee, Citizen Sewer Advisory Committee and First Parish Church Committee, all in Cohasset. She was an original member of the South Shore Coalition Affordable Housing Task Force and is currently working with the South Weymouth Naval Air Station Study Committee. She is a longtime Democratic activist and chairs the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee.

Langmaid believes that most voters feel alienated from their representatives on Beacon Hill. Her campaign, she said, will reach out to those who are being ignored to ask how government can be changed to meet their needs. Issues of economic security, quality education, health care, environmental protection and restoration, and public transportation will be fully discussed. Legislation which begins to work towards long-range solutions, as well as that which meets immediate needs, will be sponsored early on by Langmaid.

"I am running for state senate because I do not feel my interests, goals, priorities, and values are being represented by those currently in office. We who devote our lives to making this a livable world for our children, our parents, ourselves, and our communities need to raise our voices and be heard by those who make and fund public policies. We need policies which will work for us all. I commit myself to this goal, and with your help, advice, and support I have every confidence we shall succeed in our campaign."

Local NOW chapter picks up . . .

By Dori Dwyer
Mariner staff

Though the Senate dismissed her, Anita Hill, and the charge of sexual harassment she lodged against Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas, is the new rallying cry of a resurgent feminist movement.

Hull residents Rose Jade and Suki de Jong heard the cry and answered with the formation of a local chapter of NOW, the National Organization of Women.

At a recent meeting in Cohasset, over 35 women attended and made plans to join the "March on Women's Lives" in Washington, D.C. last weekend.

When I saw that panel of men in their power suits sitting up there judging her, all I could think of was the Salem Witchtrials. And 300 years later and it's still the same.'
—Edith Piotrowski, 79, on Anita Hill's charges of sexual harassment against Clarence Thomas.

De Jong, an independent film maker and mother, watched the Clarence Thomas confirmation hearings with dismay,

"I said to Rose 'They can't nominate him now, look at all the testimony,'" she explained.

"Then when they did I was outraged."

Jade, a biology student at MIT, agreed with De Jong, with whom she watched the hearings. Jade said they weren't alone in their support of Hill.

"My feeling when we formed the group was that everyone I talked to believed her, but had no way to voice that other than at the TV," she said.

"I sensed that people were ready to come back (to activism.)"

South Shore NOW's extensive and diverse membership support Jade's theory.

Suzanne Cutler of Hingham, who raises funds for Brigham and Women's Hospital, said she had always talked about joining a women's rights group, but never joined until the Senate confirmed Thomas.

"It was the Anita Hill hearings that really made the difference," she said.

Seventy-nine-year-old Edith Piotrowski is the group's oldest member. A 17-year old Hingham High School senior is the youngest.

"What really made me feel the strongest about joining was the treatment of Anita Hill," the Piotrowski, a Weymouth grandmother, said.

"When I saw that panel of men in their power suits sitting up there judging her, all I could think of was the Salem Witchtrials.

"And 300 years later and it's still the same."

Piotrowski is not a newcomer to the feminist movement. At age five, she marched with her mother in suffragette parades.

Response to the group's formation has overwhelmed the founders.

"At our third meeting, after having a dozen or so people attend the previous ones, people just kept coming.

"Seventy people came to that meeting," De Jong said.

Jade added that the group's size has grown so large, finding rooms to hold meetings has become more difficult.

South Shore NOW officially has 50 members and numerous attendees who are not members.

Jade said activism is catching on.

"People were burned out in the sixties and are ready to start changing things again.

"They are distrusting the government but beginning to trust groups more so they can have their voices heard," Jade said.

While the group's membership cuts across lines of wealth and age, there is a racial disparity in membership that Jade hopes to change.

"I'd like to see more people of color at our meetings.

"The problems in Braintree and Quincy show there is a need for an organization to address race relations."

Jade said South Shore NOW also has a stereotypical stigma to overcome.

"I want to dispel the belief that we are all lesbian or gay or angry at men," Jade said.

"Frankly, the most angry women I've met are heterosexual females who feel trapped in a relationship. But they don't join a group."

De Jong said a lot of younger women join the group because they realize certain rights they have taken for granted, like abortion, are in jeopardy.

"We had to fight to get that on the books," De Jong said.

Linda Rowley, 42, of Hingham said she is a NOW member because women are losing ground in the battle for fair treatment.

"We have gained a lot but we have lost a lot, too."

The South Shore has its own Anita Hill

The South Shore has its own Anita Hill, according to South Shore NOW President Rose Jade.

She calls herself Jane Doe and charged her employer, the United States Postal Service, with sexual harassment in December. Doe said she works in one of the four Weymouth post offices.

Doe said she complained to management at the post office about the incidents of harassment, but nothing was done.

It wasn't until Anita Hill's testimony against Clarence Thomas that Doe learned of her rights under the law.

She took her complaint to a higher level and is now out-of-work on an unpaid leave because of emotional stress.

"I'm glad I did the right thing, but I could lose my house over this.

"I have kids to support," the woman said.

She said after her allegations were made public, the harassment intensified. It wasn't unusual for her to find a noose over her desk, or nude pictures taped to her mail carrier equipment, she said.

South Shore Now is working with Doe.

Three races spark election

Unopposed are Ross Rosano for assessor, Ron Goodwin for water commissioner, Henry Tattenbury for the sewer commission, and Alfred Moore for the planning board.

Also running unopposed are Ralph Perroncello for the housing authority; and Paul Pratt Memorial Library Trustee incumbents Barbara Power, Lucia Woods, and former trustee Katherine Sturtevant.

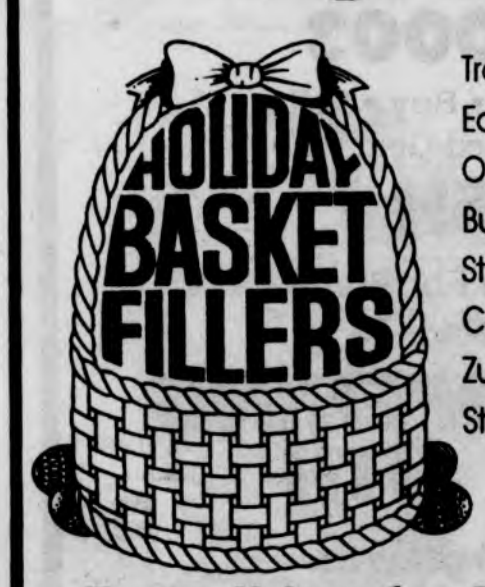
On the recreation commission, tree and park superintendent Peter Laugelle; and incumbents Mary Muncy and Terese England Duggan are the only candidates.

Vacation week activities planned at library

On Tuesday, April 21, and Friday, April 24, artist Nancy Connolly will present two different workshops in the children's room of the Paul Pratt Library.

The first, on Tuesday, will be a "work-in-progress." Nancy will demonstrate a cast of characters she is sculpting, based on the Russian folktale "Baba Yaga." Ideas and images are taken from books, reprocessed in the artist's imagination, then constructed from a surprising assemblage of household and natural materials.

The second workshop, on Friday, is "hands-on" for those who have pre-registered with the children's librarian. Using clay, fabric and wire, children will create their own tiny folk figures, dressed in the style of a Russian story character.



These presentations are designed for children in first grade and older. Parents or other interested adults are welcome on Tuesday.

This project is supported in part by funding from the Massachusetts Arts Lottery, as administered locally by the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council. Thanks also to the Friends of the Paul Pratt Library.

Times of the workshops are: Tuesday 10 to 11 a.m. (no pre-registration necessary) and Friday 10 to 11:30 a.m. (call the library to pre-register, 383-1348).
